FIFTH UNION SERVICE

TO BE UNITED AFTER DEATH.

Dr. Roberts Says Life is Certain Beyond the Tomb—Some Will Never Understand It.

The congregation made up of the First Presbyterian, First M. E. and First Baptist churches, which united with the Trinity Reformed last night equaled in size any that has been drawn together in the series, and they were amply repaid. Rev. W. Dayton Roberts, of Temple Presbyterian church, Philadelphia, preached an admirable sermon which he termed an 'informal story of the things which await the Christian in Heaven."

"The transition from the land of Hope to the land of Fruition," he said, "is not alone for the people who knew and believed in Jesus Christ 1900 years ago, but for the people of Plainfield, here tonight.

"I wonder if eternity with all its crowning joys and privileges is growing nearer and nearer to you in reality? Do we realize that to look back is paganish and to look forward Christian? The practical philosophy of the world says, 'forget the past, never mind the future, live only in the present,' but we must compare and realize both past and future in order that we may enjoy the present.

"Thoreau, when dying was asked what he thought of the next world replied, 'one world at a time'—the word of a bruitish nature. It shows that the strong sceptical thought of today ignores the future and covers it with a veil of unreality.

"Should we be deprived of a right to hope that heaven holds our dearest possessions? I hope not. I would like to have a knowledge of the country to which I am going. Are we to be robbed of our anticipation? I say no, and again no. I would give a great deal if I could, with the touch of a magic wand, bring everybody here into the world to be, for just a glimpse of its glory.

"The heroic self abnegation of those whose hope has been highest, the utter forgetfulness of the unselfish mind, the giving of one's life for a brother, the lifting up of the fallen, the comforting of the sorrowful; in all these I see the immeasurable reward of heaven to heroes.

"What is it that awaits us? First, there is rest. Rest from toil, from sorrow and trouble. Being brought into the rapture of God. To bask in the glory of His smile to be with Jesus—that is rest.

"Do we expect to be united with those who have preceeded us through the tunnel, to come out again into the blessed sunshine and beauty of His presence? Yes, and that is the greatest thing I can tell some of you tonight, yet there are some who, if I should tell them would not understand my meaning. I have my doubts whether the reunited relationship will be as we desire it, nor do know whether it will be as it is here, but I know it will be most desirable, and we'll all be there.

"The most desirable of all, however, will be the presence of God. That will be the very cream and climax of heaven. When I come to die I want to think it is the Lord I am going to see, and you must think of death as going to Him. To see Him is to be like Him forevermore. Let us ask God to give us the faith that proves the thing hoped for and reevals to us the things unseen."

In the absence of the choir, Horace Martin was precentor and the congregational singing was hearty. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, who was the only other minister at the service, read the scripture and offered prayer.

The next union service will be held next Sunday at the First Presbyterian church and the sermon will be preached by Rev. E. P. Johnson, D. D., of New Brunswick.

Sunday Night Fire.

An alarm from box 12 at about 8 o'clock summoned the firemen to extinguish a small blaze in the rear of Daley Bros.' grocery store on West Front street. The fire is believed to have started from spontaneous combustion among papers. There was no damage.

FREDERICK S. GREEN DIES IN MARYLAND

Frederick S. Green, for many years a resident of this city, where he had a host of friends, died yesterday morning at 6 o'clock at the home of his son-in-law, Meredith Dryden at St. Michael's Md., where he had been living for the past eight weeks, at which time he was stricken with paralysis. Prior to that he was living in Brooklyn, to which place he removed from Plainfield about eight years ago.

During Mrs. Green's long residence here he was greatly interested in local affairs. He was a prominent member of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, and Plainfield Council, No. 60, Loyal Association. At one time he was one of the officers of the Crescent Athletic Association and was much interested in the old Crescent baseball team.

Mr. Green was a coffee and sugar broker, being of the firm of Volney Green & Son, of 112 Front street, New York, and was very successful. His son, Volney Green, who was also well-known here, was drowned a number of years ago in Wisconsin. He leaves a wife and one daughter, Mrs. Meredith Dryden. Just prior to being stricken with paralysis, Mr. Green paid a short visit to Plainfield friends. The funeral services will be held in New York, the announcement of which will be made later.

60-DAY REPRIEVE GRANTED THE BOY MURDERER

By using the long-distance phone from the summer capital at Sea Girt to the State prison at Trenton, Governor Fort last night saved Walter Zeller, 19 years old, who murdered his aged grandfather at Vineland last October, at least temporarily from the death chair, granting him a sixty-day reprieve.

The boy was scheduled to die in a few hours. So near was the hour set for the execution that the Executive did not think it advisable to depend on the mail, or even a special messenger, and consequently gave his orders to the prison officials personally on the telephone.

All arrangements had been completed for the electrocution. Even young Zeller had given up hope and had begun his final prayers when the news of the reprieve was given him. The shock was so great that he fainted.

The executive was emphatic in his instructions to hold up the electrocution until the arrival of the formal documents allowing a reprieve of sixty days.

The executive did not give any explanation of his action. He sat with the Court of Pardons at Sea Girt last week, when it was decided the boy must die.

It is believed that the Governor gave the lad a new lease of life because of his mother's pleadings, and of his years. It is possible that his youth may eventually save his life.

Zeller has been in the death house since last January. Two youthful companions, who were implicated in the murder with him, were given long prison terms.

Justice Hand Busy.

Two couples were made happy Saturday afternoon by Justice of the Peace Hezekiah Hand. At 4 o'clock he united in civil marriage in the District court room, Gilbert Read Kice, of Hoboken and Louise V. Berry, of Brooklyn. There were quite a number of witnesses at this ceremony. At 6 o'clock at his home the justice married Andrew Roberto and Francesca Perrette, both of this city. The latter couple will reside on Johnson avenue on their return from a brief wedding trip.

Supplies at Hope Chapel.

The pulpit supplies at Hope chapel during the absence of Rev. L. R. Howard, the pastor, will be as follows: August 8, Rev. Fred B. Newman of Trenton; August 15, Dr. H. K. Carroll, of North Plainfield; August 22, Rev. Lewis Bond, of this city. The prayer meeting services will be in charge of the ways and means committee. The leaders for August 12 and 26, when the Christian Endeavor Society will have no separate meeting, will be Allen Snyder and Walter Firstbrook.

Auto Hits Carriage.

In turning into West Front street from Park avenue yesterday afternoon at about 2 o'clock, a carriage owned by the Plainfield Cab Company was struck by a big red touring car, coming east. The car, No. 9122, is owned by a Pennsylvania man, and was slightly damaged. No one was injured.

Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Dickerson and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Marchant are registered at the "Southern:" J. J. Varley and family at the Stafford, Asbury Park.

DRYEST JULY IN 21 YEARS

Only 1.39 Inches of Rain Fell Last Month, Most of it July 23.

LAST FRIDAY HOTTEST DAY.

Mercury Reached 96 Degrees Then—A Record for the Month and the Summer.

According to the records of Weather Observer John Neagle, the rainfall during the entire month of July was but 1.39 inches, marking the month as the dryest July in 21 years. In the summer of 1888, there was but 1.25 inches of rain during the month, and in 1894, the official precipitation measurement was but 1.41 inches, the nearest approach to the record for a dry July since. Last month, there was .02 of an inch less rain than the summer of fifteen years ago. The normal precipitation for July is 6.14 inches.

There were but seven rainy days last month, but thunder storms are recorded for July 15, 16, 18, 27 and 30. Fifteen days were clear, fourteen partly cloudy, and two cloudy. The rain of July 23 was 1.09 inches in the twenty-four hours—ten-thirteenths of the rainfall for the month. Up to July 15, but .02 of an inch of rain is recorded.

The long drought shows in the records of the local weather station, for the precipitation for the month is 4.75 inches below the normal for the month of July, and 3.21 inches below the normal for the year. The precipitation record for July for the past twenty-three years show that the wettest Julys were in 1897, when the rainfall was 13.92 inches, and in 1889, when the official measure was 15.52 inches. The rainfall record for the past twenty-three years follows:

1887, 9.31 inches; 1888, 1.25 inches; 1889, 15.52 inches; 1890, 6.49 inches; 1891, 3.88 inches; 1892, 3.87 inches; 1893, 4.05 inches; 1894, 1.41 inches; 1895, 5.64 inches; 1896, 7.02 inches; 1897, 13.92 inches; 1898, 5.42 inches; 1899, 6.65 inches; 1900, 5.79 inches; 1901, 5.96 inches; 1902, 4.71 inches; 1903, 4.70 inches; 1904, 8.06 inches; 1905, 8.19 inches; 1906, 5.99 inches; 1907, 2.26 inches; 1908, 5 inches; and 1909, 1.39 inches.

July was hot, too. Last Friday, the mercury reached the top notch for the month, recording a maximum temperature of 96 degrees. The coolest day was the first day of the Charter Day celebration, July 5, when the thermometer at one time sank to 45 degrees. The greatest range of temperature in a single day was 40 degrees. For the month, the mean temperature was 74.5 degrees; mean maximum, 84.9 degrees; mean minimum, 58.4 degrees. The monthly range was 51 degrees, and the greatest daily range, 40 degrees. The mean daily range was 26.5 degrees.

INTERESTING SERVICES ON THE MOUNTAIN.

The services at the King's Daughters' Camp on the mountain yesterday afternoon was largely attended and was of marked interest throughout. The meeting was in charge of George E. Hall, superintendent of the Park avenue Sunday school. Mrs. J. A. Powlison continued her talk about "Little Houses," which she began last Sunday. The speaker illustrated her remarks by the use of several anecdotes of boys and girls, all of which held the closest attention of the children as well as their elders.

The local corps of the Salvation Army took a prominent part in the meeting. Prayer was offered by Mrs. John W. Price; the Scripture was read by Mrs. Captain S. A. Hewitt; duets were sung by Misses Sadie and Julia Price and Captain Hewitt led the singing. E. H. Guest played a cornet solo. The stage which has been donated for the use of these meetings carried thirty gusets to the camp and many more were in attendance. These meetings will continue the balance of the summer.

Will Go to Boynton Beach.

The members of the Sunday-school of the West End Tabernacle will enjoy a day's outing at Boynton Beach tomorrow, going by special trolley which will leave West Front street and Clinton avenue at 9 o'clock sharp. Returning the party will leave the beach at 7:30 o'clock. Those not members of the school and wishing to take the trip can do so by paying a small fee.

Chalmers Easily Wins Brighton Beach 100 Mile Race.

A Chalmers-Detroit "40" stock car won as usual, making the 100 miles in 112 minutes, in spite of the fact that a very rough track necessitated the change of three tires and the loss of considerable time. ***

"GOLDEN-VOICED TENOR" A HIT AT 'PATCONG

"The Breeze," a weekly publication, issued at Lake Hopatcong during the summer months, got hold of a good local "social story" for its last issue, and reports the merry times at a "porch party" at Ardsley Cottage as follows:

"The members of 'Camp Crescent,' of Newark, and 'Camp Ram's Horn,' of Plainfield, were guests of honor at a porch party given Thursday night by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Punchard, at their cottage, 'Ardsley,' on Halsey Island. Music and dancing were features of the occasion. Miss Ada Lewis, of Sam Bernard's 'Nearly A Hero' company, contributed several delightful impersonations, while a decided hit was made by a trio composed of Burrill Barbaretta, also a member of the 'Nearly A Hero' company, Tom DeMasi and Tom Muir of Camp 'Ram's Horn,' member of the well known 'Gold Medal Minstrel Troupe.' J. Polhemus Hall received three encores by his clever rendition of "Don't You do That Dance, I tell You, Sadie."

"On Friday night, Mr. and Mrs. Dolan, of 'Camp Dolan,' entertained the 'Ram's Horn' camp members at a marshmallow roast, during which one of the largest camp fires seen around the lake in several seasons was lighted."

SISTERS UNITED AFTER THIRTY-ONE YEARS

Mrs. Elvin Van Name of Madison avenue clasped hands with her sister, Mrs. William Bolyhart, of Brooklyn, for the first time in thirty-one years, Saturday afternoon. Both were unaware of the other's existence and believed themselves to be orphans without relatives, until the newspapers of New York and Brooklyn shed light on the subject last week.

They were children of Mr. and Mrs. Williams, both of whom were killed in an accident. The two girls were adopted by different families, Mrs. Bolyhart going into the family of Mrs. Amelia Molan, of Brooklyn. The latter desired to keep the child's belief that she was her daughter a secret, and for this reason Mrs. Boylhart knew nothing of the fact that she had a sister until, on the death of Mrs. Molan recently an examination of a tin box disclosed a memoranda stating the case, and telling her that she had a sister, Mrs. Van Name. Mrs. Boylhart, who is now the wife of a Brooklyn doctor, immediately began inquiry as to the identity of her sister. This was furnished by Charles Russ, of Elizabeth. The newspapers gave space to the unusual story, and through them the identity of Mrs. Elvin Van Name, of this city, as a sister of Mrs. Boydhart was established.

A Daily Press reporter located Mrs. Boylhart on St. Felix street, Brooklyn, today. She was overjoyed to find out that she had a sister, and that the secret of her real identity was cleared up. Her sister, Mrs. Van Name, of this city, expressed similar feelings. Mrs. Van Name said this morning that she was planning to entertain her sister in Plainfield soon.

Hook—Pratzner.

Marie J., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Pratzner, of Watchung avenue, and Harry J. Hook, of West Front street, were quietly married this afternoon at 1:30, by the Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, at the latter's residence. The couple left immediately for Atlantic City, where they will spend their honeymoon. They will be at home at 147 West Front street after August 24.

Will Help the Baby Camp.

There will be a sale of home-made candy ,cake, ice cream and lemonade with the added attraction of a grab-bag at 135 Grove street, Wednesday afternoon, for the benefit of the King's Daughters camp on the mountains. The affair will be in charge of Rose Andrews, Mabel and Lucy Douglass, Henrietta Stewart and Charlotte Wadams.

New Real Estate Firm.

Paul A. Whitford, of Westerly, R. I., has acquired an interest in the real estate and insurance business of Clarke & Tapscott, of the Babcock building. Mr. Whitford was formerly employed by the Potter Printing Press Company. The new firm will be known as George M. Clarke & Co.

FIVE HOUSES STARTED IN PAST FEW WEEKS

Building permits were granted during the past three weeks for the erection of five frame dwelling houses in this city, and in most instances the work of construction has already been begun. The residences are a two-story, two-family house, owned by Harry Dreier, to be built on New street, a two-story and attic house by D. N. Force, of Mannins avenue; a similar house by Frank V. Lawrence, on Denmark road; another by the George E. Hall Corporation, on Denmark road, and one by the Mutual Land and Investment Company on Dixie lane.

George J. Whalen, president of the United Cigar Stores, has secured a permit for the erection of a playhouse bungalow in the rear of his home on East Front street, and George A. Beaton, of West Seventh street, is adding a bowling alley extension to the stable on his property, changing the building for use as a garage, and building sleeping quarters for a gardener. John W. Pitts, of Leland avenue, and Charles L. Stanley, of South avenue, have secured permits for the construction of greenhouses on their properties.

A cement block store is under construction by a local contractor for E. W. Green, at 210 Lee place, and a wagon shed by the Consumers' Coal Company, on West Third street, near Arlington avenue. At Percy Cannon's house, on East Second street, a two-story extension is to be built, to be used by the blind man as a notion store, and Gustave Meissner, of Watchung avenue, has filed plans and secured a permit for the construction of a three-story brick addition to the building near East Fourth street.

Garages are to be built by James C. Manning, of Dunellen avenue and Dr. F. S. Wells, of Grant avenue, and Harry Dreir is going to move a two-story house on a West Fifth street property. Permits for small extensions have been secured by Dr. H. D. Corbusier, of Park avenue; F. J. Crawford, of Dunellen avenue; William Sandford, of East Front street; Joseph Goldstein, of West Fourth street.

Schwartzman Case Postponed.

The case of Joseph Schwartzman, of Third street, accused of cruelty by his wife has again been postponed in the city court, and the hearing is now set for Wednesday morning, before City Judge Runyon. Schwartzman was to have been given a hearing on his wife's charges Saturday morning, but disappeared from the court room. He said this morning that he went out to get some witnesses. Set for this morning, the case was again postponed because of the absence of an important witness. Martin B. Stutsman has been retained as counsel by Mrs. Schwartzman, and Francis J. Blatz represents the husband.

Methodists Annual Excursion.

The annual excursion of all the Methodist Sunday-schools of Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen to Asbury Park, will be on Thursday, and as usual, it will be a big day at the shore for the excursionists. Plan to go along and get relief from the summer heat in the cooling sea breezes and a dip in the ocean.

SEVENTH-DAY PASTOR TALKS ON MIRACLES

Preaching in the Congregational church yesterday morning, the Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, unconsciously gave answer to the teachings of Goldwin Smith, when he explained some of the miracles of Jesus Christ in simple, yet forceful terms. The sermon was very interesting and was enjoyed by a large congregation.

The Rev. Mr. Shaw showed that as it is possible for us to interfere with the laws of gravity—which is exemplified by holding one's hand out to stop a falling book in its flight, or by throwing up a stone—so it is much more possible for the Lord Jesus Christ to interfere for a time with the usual course of events, and perform what is called a miracle. On this basis, he said, it is easy to understand how He restored to life the dead young man and delivered him to his mother, and also the feeding of the multitude with the few loaves of bread and few fishes.

"And so Jesus interferred here in behalf of this poor heartbroken lonely mother," said Rev. Mr. Shaw, "and I believe that He is interferring in these times in behalf of His children who are in distress; interferring with the laws of nature as they usually act, interferring with the course of events as we should expect it from our previous experience, all for the happiness and the well-being of His people.

"To every boy in this church, in this city, Jesus says, 'Young man, I say unto you, arise. S'eep not away your life, dead to the better impulses of your own being, dead to the higher, nobler life; arise, there is work for you to do, a place for you to fill.' Four things which seem to me to make Jesus the inspirier of young men are integrity of life, devotion to duty, heroism and unselfish love. The man of integrity is careful not only about paying his coal bill, but even his street car fare when the collector passes him by. He is careful about having the correct change at the cash desk when the mistakes has been made in his favor as when it is made to his loss. And a business man whose life is lived on those lines becomes an inspiration and a help to those who know him.

"I say what the world needs is a nearer and more intimate view of the life of Jesus and the responsibility of bringing this view to the world and of securing its attention, rests largely with the church.

Good Time at the Camp.

Another good time was given the children and mothers at the King's Daughters' Baby Camp on the mountain Saturday afternoon, when several women from Fanwood provided ice cream and cake for everyone at the camp. The children enjoyed their party fully. Arrangements have been made to have the various Circles of the King's Daughters of this city take turns in entertaining at the camp every Saturday afternoon this summer.

SOUGHT ETERNAL SLEEP

WAS VICTIM OF INSOMNIA.

Takes Lone Automobile Ride to Nearby Woods and Shoots Himself and Left Note to Wife.

Edward E. White, for many years a resident of Plainfield, committed suicide near the Interlaken Farm at Asbury Park yesterday afternoon after taking a lone drive in his automobile. He left two letters, one in the car he had been driving, and another, directed to his wife, which was found in the pocket of his coat. The note left on the tool box of the machine said "Please notify R. H. Schley, care Lakelyn Hotel. You will find my body lying in the woods on the left." The cause of Mr. White's self destruction is attributed to insomnia from which he had suffered for several years.

Mr. White was forty-seven years of age and had been living a life of leisure for several years past. He had a winter home at Ormonde Beach, Florida, where he was intensely interested in automobile racing. He wore a medal presented to him by Senator Morgan in recognition of valuable services rendered at Daytona, last winter, when he assisted Senator Morgan in conducting automobile races.

About twenty years ago Mr. White established the first department store conducted in Plainfield. It was known as the "White Store" and is conducted under that name now by A. E. Force & Co. Mr. White conceived the idea of a department store after he had successfully conducted a small notion store on East Front street. He bought out several small stores and opened a large one and ran into immediate success.

After amassing a fortune in this business he sold out to Crosby and Hill, who were followed by Hill and Schupp, the latter selling out to the present proprietors.

The letter found in his pocket was addressed to his wife and was of a personal nature and not made public at the hour of going to press. He had consulted many physicians recently looking for relief from his peculiar malady, but his search for health had failed to bring it.

Mr. White had been staying at the Lyndhurst hotel at Asbury Park with his wife for the past three weeks. His sister and brother-in-law, R. H. Schley, of Maplewood, N. J., were staying at a nearby hotel. Besides the sister and widow he leaves a son, Harold, employed by Hamilton Kean, of Elizabeth, brother of Senator John Kean.

The funeral services will be held from the undertaking parlors of A. M. Runyon & Son, on Park avenue, Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

EVANGELIST MARCH ADDRESSES SALVATION ARMY MEETING.

Another capacity audience attended the Salvation Army meeting in the tent on Watchung avenue, last night. The service was one of the most interesting. Two duets were sung by the Price sisters from Burlington, who are assisting in the music for two weeks. They sang "I Believe the Bible," and "O Glory, Hallelujah." Mrs. Adjutant Straubel and her daughter, Cadet Lupfer and his cousin, from New York, sang "Rock of Ages," to the tune of "Juanita."

The address of the evening was given by Miss Emily C. March, well-known in evangelistic work. Her subject was taken from the forty-seventh chapter of Ezekiel, "Ezekiel's Vision of the Holy Waters." Miss March made reference to the statement, "where no vision is people perish," and showed the necessity of a spiritual awakening. She then traced in a striking manner the stages of this awakening as found in Ezekiel's vision, showing the steps from conviction of sin to the final state of a victorious Christian life. Miss March gave several remarkable illustrations noted by her in her work. There will be a special meeting tomorrow night, and Mrs. Price will be the speaker.

NEW JERSEY'S MONEY IS WELL SAFEGUARDED

Considerable interest has been aroused and favorable comment heard in connection with a joint resolution presented by Assemblyman Carlton B. Pierce, and passed by the last Legislature, intended to prevent State deficits in the future.

The remedy suggested is very simple and consists merely in putting the complete facts as to moneys available and expenses necessary in the hands of the Legislature before appropriations are voted, and then cutting the patern according to the cloth.

The resolution is entitled "Joint resolution providing for the furnishing of information to the Legislature as a basis for appropriations."

It provides that by the tenth day of January in each year the various State institutions and bodies dependent upon legislative appropriation for support shall submit estimates of their needs for the coming year to the Comptroller upon blanks provided by him.

The Comptroller then causes condensed statements of these estimates to be printed together in pamphlet form, and places in parallel columns for the purpose of comparison, the similar expenses for the prior year and the appropriations for the current year.

In the same pamphlet, and in similar form for the purpose of comparison, the Comptroller prints brief statements, sufficiently itemized under general heads to be intelligible, showing:

"(a) The State receipts for the prior year and estimated receipts for the current and coming years.

"(b) The State expenditures for the prior year and the appropriations for the current year, and

"(c) Such other matter, information, tables, summary statements and balances, as the Comptroller or Governor shall deem desirable, in connection with the work of legislative appropriation for the coming year.

"The said pamphlet shall be arranged throughout to present in simplest form the financial condition of the State, and the moneys available and expenditures necessary for the current and coming fiscal years, and shall be submitted to the Legislature by the Comptroler on or before the first day of February in each year."

Assemblyman Pierce was seen today and gave the following statement in explanation of the resolution."

"The resolution is the outcome of the work of the special joint finance committee of the last Legislature. The committee had two problems to solve, one to meet the pending deficit, and the other to prevent a recurrence; the resolution is along the latter lines.

"The practice of the Legislature in the past, like that of Congress, has been to vote for appropriations deemed worthy, as they came along without much reference to what was yet to come, or whether money was immediately available, or any real knowledge upon the subject. The point was supposedly taken care of later by the Appropriations Committee, which left out of the final bill items deemed unnecessary. In spite of this check, however, expenditures had been exceeding income, until a balance of some years ago had become a deficit.

"The new resolution changes former methods and puts the work of appropriations on a strictly business basis. The budget required to be made up by the Comptroller under the resolution will put the complete facts as to the financial condition of the State in the hands of the Legislature before any money is spent and with the facts in hand, there should be no difficulty at any time, with reasonable care, in keeping expenditures within income."

ARRESTED ON WIFE'S CHARGES.

Sussex, August 2.—On complaints made by Mrs. Anna G. Hall, her husband, Horace G. Midsummer Fur Selling

With a collection of furs as is rarely presented by other stores, even in the height of the season, with prices marked to the lowest possible notch—to a point, in fact, barely covering the cost of the raw skins today, and offered on such terms that enable you to make selections now, pay a small deposit, and have them reserved for you until fall, this Mid-Summer Fur Sale is winning a liberal patronage of forethoughtful folk who appreciate the big advantages we offer.

You may expect other fur sales to be inaugurated, and we will be glad to have you make comparisons of the fur coats, muffs and neckpieces shown here and those offered by other stores. Compare the quality, the style, the size and the lustre; above all compare the prices. When you do this we are confident you will finally decide to choose your furs from our great stocks.

The Cost of Furs is Advancing Mightily

It happens, since our contracts were closed, that animal skins of almost all sorts have advanced mightily in price; yet, astonishing as it may seem, we are going to sell furs in this Mid-Summer Sale at lower prices than last year's—more than that, at lower prices in many instances than raw skins can be bought for at the present moment—making this far and away the best fur offering that can be made to you by any house anywhere.

Black Lynx Skins, as an instance, have advanced 135 per cent. and are now very scarce.

Skunk Skins, Skunk Dyed Coon Skins, Mink Skins, Japanese Mink and Sable Skins have all been tremendously advanced.

A Lynx Skin now costs no less than $35, yet we are selling Lynx Muffs, rug or flat shape, with heads and tails, or Lynx Scarfs, for only $29.50.

Last year a 36-in. Near Seal Coat was counted remarkably cheap at our price of $55. This month we are selling a 50-in. Long Near Seal Coat for only $59—and mind you, these coats are extremely well made and specially lined according to our own idea—very beautiful indeed.

Women's 50-inch Pony Coats, richly marked, in stylish models, lined with rich pastel shades of twill silk or satin—old rose, catawba, amethyst and gray; also beautiful brocaded effects, will be sold like this: $55 Coats, $35; $57 Coats, $37.50; $59.50 Coats, $39.50.

Handsome 36-inch Pony Coats, lined in fashionable pastel stripes and plain gray, regular season's price $37.50—a remarkable special at $29.50

Japanese Mink Coats, 40 inches long; regular season's price $198; in this Mid-Summer Sale at $150

50-in. Near Seal Coats—One of the richest of furs (and these are particularly fine, and are bound to find immense favor with good dressers), made in hipless models, lined with pastel shades of rich soft silks or satin; regular season's price would be cheap at $75; in this Mid-Summer Sale the price will be $59.50

Muffs—In a wide range of qualities and prices beginning with handsome Squirrel Muffs for as little as $5.50 and going to the rich Mink Muffs at $175.

Scarfs—In an equally large variety of qualities and prices, beginning with the Squirrel Scarfs at only $3.75 and running to the elegant Mink Scarfs at $250.

Proctor's Strong Bill.

The patronage accorded Proctor's theatre this summer has exceeded all expectations, and is largely due to the fine bill offered each day. Last week the popular playhouse was crowded every night and the "standing room only" sign was a familiar sight. This week's bill will be better than ever. The vaudeville for today, tomorrow and Wednesday will be as follows: Ed. and May Woodward, dancing novelty; Kit. Karson, novelty wire act and sharp-shooter; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stockton, comedy sketch; Adele Le Blair, singing comedienne. Thursday, Friday and Saturday: Evelyn Abbott & Co., comedy sketch, "A Fool's Errand;" Will H. Smith, "The Village Bill Poster;" Stevens and Paul, comedy acrobats and dancers; Thomas and Delle, in the famous Apache dance. High-class pictures will be changed every day.

STATE GETTING READY FOR SPECIAL ELECTION.

In getting ready for the special election of the adoption of the constitutional amendments, several tons of printed material are being prepared for shipment at the office of the Secretary of State. From that one fact alone may be gained an idea of the work that is being done under the direction of Ernest O. Fuller, who is in charge of the division of elections.

In addition to the specially prepared ballots, which are prepared in accordance with the special act passed at the last session of the Legislature, the boxes in which the votes will be sent out will contain copies for each precinct in the State of the election law, blanks for the precinct returns and blanks for reports to the county election boards.

The form of the blank ballot which had been prepared as a sample has been returned by Governor Fort with his approval as to the general make up and size. This was the form that had been devised by the State's legal department. The ballot will be 13 by 20 inches, and is in type a little larger than that used in printing the ordinary newspaper. Whether or not it is small enough to go into the slot of the regular ballot box has not yet been determined.

Under the new law governing this special election there are several dates of importance to voters and ward workers as well as professional politicians. They are:

September 7—First meeting of boards of registration and elections.

September 11—County boards of elections meet at the courthouses in various counties from 8 o'clock a. m. to 5 p. m., the same as for regular elections.

September 14—Special election on constitutional amendments.

September 20—County boards of canvassers meet to canvass.

September 30—Four members of the Senate meet in Trenton on the summons of the Governor to serve as the board of canvassers of the State returns.

PLAINFIELD Y. M. C. A. DEFEATED BY NEWARKERS

Although the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. team made a determined rally in the ninth inning, they fell just one tally short of tieing the Newark association nine in the game between the two teams at Weequahic Park, Newark, Saturday. The score was 7 to 6 in favor of Newark. The home team, by scoring four runs in the first inning, forced its opponents to make an uphill fight throughout the contest. Will Schoonmaker and Murphy lead the Plainfield team in hitting, each securing two hits of the six credited to the nine. Newark secured but seven hits off Peacock's delivery. The score.

Divorce Made Easy.

If some wives we know of made a practise of paying $800 for a gown and then wearing it only once, their quis for divorce would not be contested with any marked degree of vigor.—Ohio State Journal.

Enjoying Life on Houseboat.

Among the many ways Plainfielders have of enjoying their vacations, none, perhaps, exceed the pleasure of living on a houseboat. "The Stroller," a houseboat now at Seabright and owned by T. S. Wheeler and J. Newton Porter, of this city, is one of the most delightful and comfortable craft of the kind in these waters. The Stroller is sixty feet long with a sixteen-foot beam and contains four large staterooms, with hot and cold water. The boat has a bathroom which is modern in every respect and a large smoking-room on the upper deck. A dining-room on the lower deck is capable of accommodating fourteen people. This boat made the trip from Daytona, Fla., to the Brooklyn Navy Yard in nineteen days by a twenty-five-horse-power gasoline engine, which drives her along at the rate of five miles an hour. Before departing for the South Mr. Wheeler and Mr. Porter will take a trip as far as Bar Harbor, Me.

BOY, AGED 4, FALLS 20 FEET; WILL LIVE.

Four-in-year-old George Kobb, who had already had two serious falls during his short life, fell twenty feet from a cornice to the sidewalk at his home, 169 First street, Elizabeth, yesterday, and is expected to live.

George was on the sidewalk, watched by his mother, about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when he told her that he wanted to go upstairs and get a toy. She cautioned him against going near the open window in the front hall, and the little fellow toddled off. Then, about a minute later, the child fell at his mother's feet.

George's toy was out on a ten-inch cornice running along the front of the building just below the first story windows. He crawled out on the ledge, lost his balance and fell, striking on his face. Mrs. Bernard Kobb, the child's mother, rushed to pick the little boy up, and some one sent for Dr. Samuel Korngut. The boy's face was giving him too much pain to allow any but a superficial examination to find out whether any bones were broken, and Dr. Korngut said that he could not tell whether there was a fracture of the skull. He said that he hoped for the boy's recovery. The child is at its home, closely watched by the doctor.

This is the third time George has fallen on his head. Two years ago, when he was only a year and a half old, he fell from a bakery wagon, upon which he had been playing, and struck his head. He was unconscious two days. A week ago he fell from a fence and struck the back of his head on the stone pavement. All escapes were remarkable.

CAMDEN REGIMENT SHOWING IS FINE.

Sea Girt, Aug. 2.—When nearly every man of the 700 comprising the Third Regiment, of Camden, marched in a body to the executive cottage yesterday morning to attend the religious service it was an impressive sight. Colonel John A. Mather was gratified that his men turned out so strong, the acting chaplain was pleased, and Governor Rort indicated his approval. The services were conducted by the Rev. Charles Bratten Dubell, rector of St. Thomas' Episcopal church, Glassboro, in the absence of the chaplain, the Rev. Rudolph E. Brestell.

It was a day of rest and recreation for the men, the only duty being guard mount in the morning, and evening parade just before supper. The regiment, being the largest that has come to camp this year, makes a fine appearance, and the evening parade was viewed by a large crowd.

FALLS FROM BED THREE STORIES IN SLEEP.

His body a mass of bruises and lacerations, Edward Mosik lies in a serious condition at the Alexian Brothers' Hospital, Elizabeth, as the result of a three-story fall Saturday night. The doctors have not been able to determine what bones are broken or whether the man is internally injured.

On account of the heat last night Mosik moved his bed up to the window and went to sleep in such a position that his body was on a level with the sill. He rolled over in his sleep and fell to the pavement.

Mosik was unconscious when neighbors went to his aid. The ambulance was summoned and he was rushed to the hospital. His recovery is doubtful. He is single and lives at 95 Bayway, Elizabeth.

JAW BROKEN BY HORSE'S HIGH KICK.

Martin Geshcweil, 47 years old, of 400 Livingston street, Elizabeth, is in the Alexian Brothers' Hospital in a critical condition as the result of a kick from a horse. The force of the kick gave him a compound fracture of the jaw, knocked most of his teeth down his throat and rendered him unconscious.

Greschweil is a driver employed by George J. Wolf, a coal dealer, whose stables are at 131 Fourth street. He was putting the horse up Saturday night, when for some unaccountable reason the animal kicked out with its hind leg and struck Geschweil full in the face.

CHILD BRIDE IS FOUND POISONED.

Mrs. Mary Jordan, 18 years old, a bride of three months, of 1140 East Grand street, Elizabeth, took poison at her home about 9 o'clock last night. The officer of the post was called and she was taken to the Geenral Hospital. She will recover.

Mrs. Jordan's husband is Thomas Jordan, who has a shoe shop. He formerly lived in Newark. Sheldon W. Wherbury, the stepfather of the girl, who lives in an adjoining house, says that Mrs. Jordan went to a closet in the dark and got the bottle containing the poison and that it was an accident. Those who know Mrs. Jordan say that there is no reason for believing that she would attempt suicide.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

An attraction that has created a great furor throughout the country will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre August 9, when "Graustark," the dramatic version of George Barr McCutcheon's novel of the same name will be presented. This play has proven to be even better than "Brewster's Millions," by the same author, and has placed Mr. McCutcheon far ahead of any other American writer of dramatic stories. "Graustark" was produced for the first time in Pittsburg, and created such a profound sensation that New York managers began bidding for the honor of offering the play in their theatres. The New York engagement demonstrated that this story of love and intrigues, with its magnificent production of scenic and electrical effects, and picturesque costumes, surpasses anything seen in a decade, as an entertainment to especially please women. The fair sex turned out en-masse, and with their stamp of approval it is easy to see why "Graustark" is such a big success. Boston, New York and Chicago were then visited, and in every city this wonderful work of dramatic art was acclaimed the sensation of the time. The original cast of players, with the same production, will be seen here, and undoubtedly this city will be represented at the coming engagement by the best families of this section, which means that the theatre will be crowded, and those who will occupy the choice seats are the ones who had the foresight to secure them well in advance. Miss Gertrude Perry will portray the role of "Princess Yetive," and her work is spoken of as "a masterpiece of dramatic ingenuity. "Lorry" will be played by Mr. William Wagner, and his interpretation of the adventurous American has been highly commended. The rest of the company is composed of players seldom seen away from New York theatres.

Grape Marmalade.

Marmalade made of fox grapes is very good. The grapes should be stripped from thestems and put in a wide-mouthed stone par set in a deep pan of boiling water. Heat until the grapes begin to soften; then stir with a wooden spoon or paddle. When they are thoroughly crushed and broken rub through a sieve, rejecting the seeds. Measure the pulp and to every pint allow one-half pound of sugar. Put over the fire and boil for a half-hour, stirring constantly. Put in sealed jars or jelly glasses.

Hanrahan Association Outing.

The Patrick Hanhahan Association, of this city, enjoyed a picnic yesterday, spending the day in an outing on Long Island. Dinner was had at College Point. The lucky fishermen were Patrick Hanrahan and Bernard Brady, Jr. The committee in charge of the affair was Michael Lawlor, Robert Edmundson, Bernard Brady, Jr., Patrick Hanrahan and "Diamond" Carway.

Mrs. Schmidt Wants a Divorce.

Proprietor Schmidt, of the Kenilworth Inn, this county is being sued by his wife for divorce on the ground of alleged cruelty. One of the unique customs of the husband, according to the wife's bill, was to deprive her of food. At one time, while they were in Italy, she claims she was without food for forty-eight hours. Another time, while they were in Paris, her husband, so the wife asserts in her complaint, compelled her to walk for miles, seeking a former sweetheart of his. On other occasions, the bill says, the husband threw his wife down the stairs, and running down after her, sat upon her and continued to punch her with his fists.

LEGAL REFORM IN NEW JERSEY.

Not Political, but For the Welfare of All.

HOW STATE WILL PROFIT.

Judge Charles C. Black of the Circuit Court Makes It Clear That the Commonwealth Will Be a Distinct Gainer by the Change—A Greater Amount of Business Can Be Transacted Without Increase of Judges.

Judge Charles C. Black of the circuit court, who was the Democratic candidate for governor of the state in 1904, has made the following clear and forceful statement of the advantages to the people which will be brought about by the adoption of the pending court amendments:

I have been asked to give a concise statement of the proposed constitutional amendments affecting the judicial system of the state, to be voted upon by the people on Sept. 14 next. As these proposed amendments are not a political issue, such a statement can be made for publication without violating that unwritten and good old time honored principle observed in New Jersey, that judges should refrain from participating in the turmoil of political discussion.

What the Judicial Amendments Propose

They propose that "the judicial power shall be vested in a court for the trial of impeachments, a supreme court, county courts and such other courts inferior to the supreme court as may be established by law, which inferior courts the legislature may alter or abolish as the public good shall require."

The supreme court shall be organized in three divisions—namely, the appeals division, presided over by a presiding justice, styled a "chief justice," and the chancery division, presided over by a presiding justice, who shall be styled the "chancellor."

The appeals division shall consist of the chief justice and six other justices to be assigned by the governor. The remaining justices shall be assigned by the supreme court to the law or chancery division, as the business of the court may require.

The appellate division shall have and exercise the appellate jurisdiction and such original jurisdiction as may be incident to the complete determination of any cause on review.

The law division shall exercise the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the supreme court and the circuit courts in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute in the absence of statute by the supreme court.

The chancery division shall exercise the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the court of chancery and the chancellor in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute or in the absence of statute by the supreme court, but the justices of this division shall be under such control and supervision by the chancellor as shall be provided by the supreme court.

The supreme court may provide by rule for the transfer of any cause or issues from the law division to the chancery division, or from the chancery division to the law division of the supreme court, or from the county courts to the law division or the chancery division of the supreme court, and for the giving of complete legal and equitable relief in any cause in the court or division where it may be pending.

The chancellor and the chief justice of the supreme court and the vice chancellors and the associate justices of the supreme court in office when these amendments take effect shall be justices of the supreme court until the expiration of their respective terms.

To those familiar with the judicial system of the state it is clear that if these amendments are adopted by the people they will abolish a long list of existing courts—viz, court of errors and appeals, the supreme court, the prerogative court, the court of chancery, the circuit court, the common pleas court, the court of oyer and terminer and the quarter sessions—and substitute in their places a supreme court composed of three divisions, with appellant, common law and chancery jurisdiction, the same as now exists in the several courts abolished, and county courts.

A common law suit or a suit to be tried by a jury, then as now, may be brought either in the supreme court, tried at the county seat with a jury or in the county court. The procedure shall be in accordance with the rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute as now or, in the absence of statute, by the supreme court—a most important provision for the prompt and effective disposition of litigation because the court itself is the best qualified expert body to regulate the mere formal procedure of a lawsuit, developed by actual experience as observed in the trial of cases. This is modeled after the present English system.

What Will the State Gain?

First.—The reasonable certainty as to jurisdiction by the court of the proposed litigation, which now is confused and uncertain in a considerable class of contested cases, sometimes requiring a protracted litigation to ascertain whether the litigant is in the right court before the real controversy over the subject matter of a lawsuit is actually commenced.

Second.—A greater elasticity and flexibility in the formal procedure. The unwary and inexperienced cannot be so easily checkmated. The court itself will have the power to prescribe the practice and procedure in the absense of statute.

Third.—Greater simplicity.

Fourth.—Preventing unnecessary delays on appeal. One appeal only from the trial court; now there may be two in a large class of cases in which the litigants of moderate means predominate, one by writ of error of the supreme court and then a second appeal by writ of error to the court of errors and appeals. So two appeals may be had in some cases from the orphans' court.

Fifth.—A greater volume of business can be transacted by the same number of judges than is now possible. This will be true especially in the appellate court, and in those parts of the state where the trial work is congested the judges can be readily adjusted to business.

Sixth.—The sweeping away of many of the meaningless cobwebs which hang over the courts and the unnecessary formalities.

Seventh.—By those who have made the calculation it is said that it will be a saving to the state of $35,000 per year for judges' salaries.

Eighth.—The proposed amendments will give unity and balance to the judicial system of the state, which now is top heavy, and the duty to see that the judicial work of the state is properly carried forward will be lodged in one court, and that court will have the power to have it done, and it cannot evade responsibility.

Ninth.—They leave untouched the method and procedure of administering equity and common law separate and by different judges, according to the long established practice in New Jersey; also the orphans' court and the criminal courts except in name, presided over by the same judges as now, the county judge, and they leave also untouched our present excellent system of district courts, giving the legislature power, as now, to establish or abolish inferior courts.

All this is but saying that the proposed judicial amendments are in the line of progress, though conservative, for a progressive, growing state for the purpose of expediting justice. The northern part of the state is gaining in population, which will bring increased litigation. The proposed amendments represent the conservative and best digested thought of the state after ten years of discussion and agitation, having received the sanction of two conservative legislatures, and they have the unqualified support of such men as Mr. Charles H. Hartshorne, who has written a book on the courts of New Jersey and whose unselfish devotion to the public good is unquestioned.

Opposition, if Any.

None that has been openly stated. Undoubtedly preference will always exist for a different system from the one proposed, owing partially to a thorough and accurate knowledge of the subject and partially to that feeling that what has been good enough in the past should not be changed, but the real opposition, if any, should and will come from those litigants, aggregations of wealth, who find in the present system of courts a ready and powerful weapon in the hands of trained and skillful lawyers to tire their less fortunate adversary by appeals, delays, uncertainty and confusion until the deserving litigant may be ready to take what is offered in settlement without much regard for the justice of his demands.

This class of opposition, if any, will not assert itself in the open, but will use the inertia and indifference of the people, aided by individual opponents and doubtless under cover of some organizations, to accomplish the defeat of the amendments.

If there is one thing more important than another for the state to provide it is that the means of obtaining justice should be prompt and expeditious, with no unnecessary delays and uncertainties. It is believed by those who have given the subject the best thought that the adoption of the proposed judicial amendments will greatly aid in this object and tend to keep New Jersey up to her ideal standards of Jersey justice.

PLAINFIELD TO HOPATCONG IN A CANOE.

Four young men, Frank Wilcox, Edward Abbott and Russell Morris, of Plainfield, and Alfred Beeken, of Fanwood, are camping on Halsey Island, Lake Hopatcong, after practically canoeing from this city. They carried canoes and the outfit to the Passaic river at Berkeley Heights, paddled down this stream to the Pompton river, fifteen miles above Paterson, thence to the Morris canal at Mountainview, down the canal to the lock entrance to Lake Hopatcong.

They started last Tuesday and reached the lake on Thursday night. They will return home by way of the Morris canal to the Delaware river; thence to the Raritan canal from Bordentown to Bound Brook. They say that this sort of a trip cannot be beaten if one is looking for variety of scenery, to say nothing of the splendid exercise to be had. They expect to complete their trip home in less time than it took to go and say they are enjoying every minute of their outing.

Rev. E. P. Johnson, D. D., of New Brunswick, preached a powerful sermon in Trinity Reformed church yesterday morning on the "Golden Rule." Dr. Johnson laid great stress on the principle that to deserve fair treatment from our fellow men we should tender them the best that is in us to do. The unselfish life is the one which attracts and even appeals to those of a baser nature. It is by leading such a life as the Master taught and Himself led that we are to teach men the value of the life of reciprocation. Dr. Johnson will preach at the union service in the First Presbyterian church next Sunday evening.

Nov. 17, 1870.

We notice that our worth friend, E. H. Holmes, has entered into the express business, and made his debut on Tuesday last, on our streets, with bran-new and well painted wagon. His office is with I. E. Parker, of the Central Express, on Cherry street, and his business is local expressman. Give him a call.

We nave delayed the issue of our paper for a few hours that we may fully get the election returns from the various townships. Any lack of news in this issue must be attributed to the fact that all hands were out working for the election of Mr. Joseph W. Yates on Tuesday last.—They say he is elected. "Didn't I tole you so!"

November 25.

Tomorrow is Thanksgiving and the poor printer, who liketh Turkey much, has got none.

We learn that the Sons of Temperance in this City will hold a prayer meeting every Sabbath afternoon at 4 o'clock during this winter for the advancement of the temperance course in this City, at their rooms opposite the Y. M. C. A. rooms. The public are invited to attend and take part in the exercises.

Some eccentric individual deposited a ballot ot Bordentown, at a recent election, from which the name of every candidate had been scratched.

Still another trot is advertised to come off on the Plainfield Driving Park (tomorrow) Thursday afternoon. Some good horses are entered and some excellent trotting may be expected.

We understand there will be a match game of Base Ball on Thanksgiving Day between the "Centrals" and a picked nine of this City. Game called at 2 o'clock.

Keeps Its Balance.

She—"Does the course of their love run smooth?"

He—"Oh, yes! there are banks on both sides."—New York Evening Telegram.

Well Fixed.

"Those new neighbors of our's must be well fixed."

"What makes you think so?"

"They gave a party yesterday, and they didn't have to morrow a thing from us."—Detroit Free Press.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Records kept by the life guards show that over 2,000 men and boys enjoyed swims at the Y. M. C. A. bathing beach at Pyne Poynt, Camden, during the past few weeks.

Adjudged guilty of a charge of atrocious assault and battery on W. H. Adams, of Eighth and Sycamore streets, Zachariah Harris was Friday sentenced to one year in the Camden Criminal Court.

From a fracture of the back sustained in a friendly wrestling match about ten days ago, William Washington Graves, colored, twenty-six years old, of Matchtown, died in Cooper Hospital, Camden, Friday night.

Millville police are looking for a man who attempted to criminally assault Bertha, nine-year-old daughter of Frank Rocap, Jr., Friday, while she was carrying lunch to her father at the Bleach and Dye Works.

Suffering terrible agony, Robert H. Bell, seven years old, of 682 Woodland avenue, badly burned a week ago while playing with matches, was taken to Cooper Hospital, Camden, Friday night in a critical condition.

Motorcycle police in Camden were busy Friday warning automobilists against violating the speed laws. Thomas Coombe, of Minersville, Pa., was arrested in the afternoon and furnished $500 cash security for his appearance August 5.

Sitting in the Orphans' Court in Camden for Judge Joline, Friday, Judge Berry appgoved the final account of the Camden Safe Deposit and Trust Company, executors of the estate of Richard C. Ludlow. The amount for distribution is $16,000.

Convicted in the Camden Criminal Court Friday on a charge of assault and battery on his wife, Lewis C. Lutes, of the East Side, was sentenced to sixty days in jail. A similar sentence was imposed on J. M. Brown, on a charge of assault and battery on John Quilligan.

Returning from work Friday evening, Frank Prasch, aged sixty years, sat down in a chair on the front porch of his residence at Paulsboro, and in a few minutes his wife saw him throw up his hands and fall to the floor with a thud. She sent for Dr. Black, who said the man had died from heart failure.

A city guest of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Quickmire, in Orchard road, Vineland, thought she heard a locust singing in the chicken yard and, being desirous of securing something she had never seen, started out to capture it. Instead of a locust she found a rattlesnake over five feet long surrounded by cackling chickens.

Two horses were stolen from the stable of Jesse Grier at Hurffville while he was at a picnic Friday. Mrs. Claude Grier, who lives nearby, saw three desperate looking characters making away with the horses and gave the alarm, and several farmers started in pursuit. The thieves then freed the horses and took to the woods.

Engineer Dennis Ryan is not superstitious but he will be careful when he goes under a ladder again. While passing under a ladder in the engine room of the Salem Water Works, he heard a hissing noise, and upon looking up saw a blacksnake on the ladder over his head. Seizing an iron pipe he engaged in battle and soon dispatched the snake, which measured five and one-half feet in length and was one of the fighting white-throat variety.

Joseph Allen, a conductor on the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad, in charge of a bridge train between Philadelphia and Atlantic City, had a narrow escape from losing the sight of an eye on Thursday. While he was on his way to his train his attention was attracted to a number of animals in cages belonging to a traveling showman. As he was about to peer into a cage a bear struck at him. One of the claws tore a hole in his face near the eye. A physician had to take several stitches to close the wound.

When surveyors in the employ of the Philadelphia Brewing Company went to the ground formerly owned by John Horsey, and known as Horsey's Park, East Side Camden, they were driven off by William Macdonald, an alleged "squatter." The surveyors consulted attorneys for the brewing company. Constable Voight, of the District Court, was sent to the place. He ejected Macdonald and then tore down the shanty that the latter was occupying and put the surveyors to work.

Walnut Hair Dye.

The huls of green walnuts are pounded in a mortar, and the juice expressed by squeezing in a tincture press; mix with rectified spirits until desired shade is obtained. Perfume with oil of cloves; the whole is allowed to stand for a week or two with occasional agitation, and the clear solution is eventually decanted. Sometimes salt is used to preserve it. This dye stains the scalp and must be used carefully.

Successful Furnace Fires

PATENTED

makes tending the furnace easy, but best of all it makes a joyous fire. Round fire pots burn strongly through the center with a rim of half dead clinkers at the edge and when you shake the fire the middle drops out. You've noticed it. Fires built in BOYNTON Square Pots are all live coals. A shake down is an even shake. The whole fire settles. There is no waste. The fuel being equal, a square pot will develop almost twice the heat, or the same heat for about half. The square pot is our patent and can be had only in the BOYNTON furnaces. We have a dealer in your town. He will be glad to show you.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for Steam or Hot Water. Also Ranges.

Whispering Smith

By Frank H. Spearman

Copyright, 1906, by Chas. Scribner's Sons.

The Crawling Stone river is said to embody, historically, all of the deceits known to mountain streams. Below the Box Canyon it plows through a great bed of yielding silt, its own deposit between the two imposing lines of bluffs that resist its wanderings from side to side of the wide valley. This fertile soil makes up the rich lands that are the envy of less fortunate regions in the Great Basin; but the Crawling Stone is not a river to give quiet title to one acre of its own making. The toil of its centuries spreads beautifully green under the June skies, and the unsuspecting settler, lulled into security by many years of the river's repose, settles on its level bench land and lays out his long lines of possession; but the Sioux will tell you in their own talk that this man is but a tenant at will; that in another time and at another place the stranger will inherit his fields; and that the Crawling Stone always comes back for its own.

The winter had been an unusual one even in a land of winters. The season's fall of snow had not been above an average, but it had fallen in the spring and had been followed by excessively low temperatures throughout the mountains. June came again, but a strange June. The first rise of the Crawling Stone had not moved out the winter frost, and the stream lay bound from bank to bank, and for hundreds of miles, under three feet of ice. When June opened, backward and cold, there had been no spring. Heavy frosts lasting until the middle of the month gave sudden way to summer heat, and the Indians on the upper valley reservation began moving back into the hills. Then came the rise. Creek after creek in the higher mountains, ice-bound for six months, burst without warning into flood. Soft winds struck with the sun and stripped the mountain walls of their snow. Rains set in on the desert, and far in the high northwest the Crawling Stone lifting its four-foot cap of ice like a bed of feathers began rolling it end over end down the valley. In the Box, 40 feet of water struck the canyon walls and ice-floes were hurled like torpedoes against the granite spurs; the Crawling Stone was starting after its own.

When the river rose, the earlier talk of Dunning's men had been that the Crawling Stone would put an end to the railroad pretensions by washing the 250 miles of track back to the Pecos river, where it had started. This much in the beginning was easy to predict; but the railroad men had turned out in force to fight for their holdings, and while the ranchers were laughing, the river was flowing over the bench lands in the upper valley.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Crawling Stone Rise.

So sudden was the onset of the river that the trained riders of the big ranch were taken completely aback, and hundreds of head of Dunning cattle were swept away before they could be removed to points of safety. Fresh alarms came with every hour of the day and night, and the telephones up and down the valley rang incessantly with appeals from neighbor to neighbor. Lance Dunning, calling out the reserves of his vocabulary, swore tremendously and directed the operations against the river. These seemed, indeed, to consist mainly of hard riding and hard language on the part of everybody. Murray Sinclair, although he had sold his ranch on the Crawling Stone and was concentrating his holdings on the Frenchman, was everywhere in evidence. He was the first at a point of danger and the last to ride away from the slipping acres where the muddy flood undercut; but no defiance seemed to disturb the Crawling Stone, which kept alarmingly at work.

Above the alfalfa lands on the long bench north of the house the river, in changing its course many years earlier, had left a depression known as Mud lake. It had become separated from the main channel of the Crawling Stone by a high, narrow barrier in the form of a bench deposited by the receding waters of some earlier flood, and added to by sandstorms sweeping among the willows that overspread it. Without an effective head or definite system of work the efforts of the men at the Stone ranch were of no more consequence than if they had spent their time in waving blankets at the river. Twenty men riding in together to tell Lance Dunning that the river was washing out the tree claims above Mud lake made no perceptible difference in the event. Dicksie, though an inexperienced girl, saw with helpless clearness the futility of it all.

Terror seized Dicksie. She telephoned in her distress for Marion, begging her to come up before they should all be swept away; and Marion, turning the shop over to Katie Dancing, got into the ranch-wagon that Dicksie had sent and started for the Crawling Stone.

At noon Marion arrived. The ranch-house was deserted, and the men were all at the river. Puss stuck her head out of the kitchen window, and Dicksie ran out and threw herself into Marion's arms. Late news from the front had been the worst; the cutting above Mud lake had weakened the last barrier that held off the river, and every available man was fighting the current at that point.

Marion heard it all while eating a luncheon. Dicksie, beset with anxiety, could not stay in the house. The man that had driven Marion over, saddled horses in the afternoon and the two women rode up above Mud lake, now become through rainfall and seepage from the river a long, shallow lagoon. For an hour they watched the shoveling and carrying of sand-bags, and rode toward the river to the very edge of the disappearing willows, where the bank was melting away before the undercut of the resistless current. They rode away with a common feeling—a conviction that the fight was a losing one, and that another day would see the ruin complete.

"Dicksie," exclaimed Marion—they were riding to the house as she spoke—"I'll tell you what we can do!" She hesitated a moment. "I will tell you what we can do! Are you plucky?"

Dicksie looked at Marion pathetically.

"If you are plucky enough to do it, we can keep the river off yet. I have an idea. I will go, but you must come along."

"Marion, what do you mean? Don't you think I would go anywhere to save the ranch? I should like to know where you dare go in this country that I dare not!"

"Then ride with me over to the railroad camp by the new bridge. We will ask Mr. McCloud to bring some of his men over. He can stop the river; he knows how."

Dicksie caught her breath. "Oh, Marion! that would do no good, even I could do it. Why, the railroad has been all swept away in the lower valley."

"How do you know?"

"So every one says."

"Who is every one?"

"Cousin Lance, Mr. Sinclair—all the men. I heard that a week ago."

"Dicksie, don't believe it. You don't know these railroad men. They understand this kind of thing; cattlemen, you know, don't. If you will go with me we can get help. I feel just as sure that those men can control the river as I do that I am looking at you—that is, if anybody can. The question is do you want to make the effort?"

They talked until they left the horses and entered the house. When they sat down, Dicksie put her hands to her face. "Oh, I wish you had said nothing about it! How can I go to him and ask for help now—after Cousin Lance has gone into court about the line and everything? And of course my name is in it all."

"Dicksie, don't raise specters that have nothing to do with the case. If we go to him and ask him for help he will give it to us if he can; if he can't, what harm is done? He has been up and down the river for three weeks, and he has an army of men camped over by the bridge. I know that, because Mr. Smith rode in from there a few days ago."

"What, Whispering Smith? Oh, if he is there I would not go for worlds!"

"Pray, why not?"

"Why, he is such an awful man!"

"That is absurd, Dicksie."

Dicksie looked grave. "Marion, no man in this part of the country has a good word to say for Whispering Smith."

"Perhaps you have forgotten, Dicksie, that you live in a very rough part of the country," returned Marion, coolly. "No man that he has ever hunted down would have anything pleasant to say about him; nor would the friends of such a man be likely to say a good word of him. There are many on the range, Dicksie, that have no respect for life or law or anything else, and they naturally hate a man like Whispering Smith—"

"But Marion, he killed—"

"I know. He killed a man named Williams a few years ago, while you were at school—one of the worst men that ever infested this country. Williams Cache is named after that man; he made the most beautiful spot in all these mountains a nest of thieves and murderers. But did you know that Williams shot down Gordon Smith's only brother, a trainmaster, in cold blood in front of the Wickiup at Medicine Bend? No, you never heard that in this part of the country, did you? They had a cow-thief for sheriff then, and no officer in Medicine Bend would go after the murderer. He rode in and out of town as if he owned it, and no one dared say a word, and, mind you, Gordon Smith's brother had never seen the man in his life until he walked up and shot him dead. Oh, this was a peaceful country a few years ago! Gordon Smith was right-of-way man in the mountains then. He buried his brother, and asked the officers what they were going to do about getting the murderer. They laughed at him. He made no protest, except to ask for a deputy United States marshal's commission. When he got it he started for Williams Cache after Williams in a buckboard—think of it, Dicksie—and didn't they laugh at him! He did not even know the trails, and imagine riding 200 miles in a buckboard to arrest a man in the mountains! He was gone six weeks, and came back with Williams' body strapped to the buckboard behind him. He never told the story; all he said when he handed in his commission and went back to his work was that the man was killed in a fair fight. Hate him! No wonder they hate him—the Williams Cache gang and all their friends on the range! Your cousin thinks it policy to placate that element, hoping that they won't steal your cattle if you are friendly with them. I know nothing about that, but I do know something about Whispering Smith. It will be a bad day for Williams Cache when they start him up again. But what has that to do with your trouble? He will not eat you up if you go to the camp, Dicksie. You are just raising bogies."

They had moved to the front porch and Marion was sitting in the rocking chair. Dicksie stood with her back against one of the pillars and looked at her. As Marion finished Dicksie turned and, with her hand on her forehead, looked in wretchedness of mind out on the valley. As far, in many directions, as the eye could reach the waters spread yellow in the flood of sunshine across the lowlands. There was a moment of silence. Dicksie turned her back on the alarming sight. "Marion, I can't do it!"

"Oh, yes, you can if you want to, Dicksie!" Dicksie looked at her with tearless eyes. "It is only a question of being plucky enough," insisted Marion.

"Pluck has nothing to do with it!" exclaimed Dicksie, in fiery tones. "I should like to know why you are always talking about my not having courage! This isn't a question of courage. How can I go to a man that I talked to as I talked to him in your house and ask for help? How can I go to him after my cousin has threatened to kill him, and gone into court to prevent his coming on our land? Shouldn't I look beautiful asking help from him?"

Marion rocked with perfect composure. "No, dear, you would not look beautiful asking help, but you would look sensible. It is so easy to be beautiful and so hard to be sensible."

"You are just as horrid as you can be, Marion Sinclair!"

"I know that, too, dear. All I wanted to say is that you would look very sensible just now in asking help from Mr. McCloud."

"I don't care—I won't do it. I will never do it, not if every foot of the ranch tumbles into the river. I hope it will! Nobody cares anything about me. I have no friends but thieves and outlaws."

"Dicksie!" Marion rose.

"That is what you said."

"I did not. I am your friend. How dare you call me names?" demanded Marion, taking the petulant girl in her arms. "Don't you think I care anything about you? There are people in this country that you have never seen who know you and love you almost as much as I do. Don't let any silly pride prevent your being sensible, dear." Dicksie burst into tears. Marion drew her over to the settee, and she had her cry out. When it was over they changed the subject. Dicksie went to her room. It was a long time before she came down again, but Marion rocked in patience; she was resolved to let Dicksie fight it out herself.

When Dicksie came down, Marion stood at the foot of the stairs. The young mistress of Crawling Stone ranch descended step by step very slowly. "Marion," she said, simply, "I will go with you."

CHAPTER XVIII.

At the Dike.

Marion caught her closely to her heart. "I knew you would go if I got you angry, dear. But you are so slow to anger. Mr. McCloud is just the same way. Mr. Smith says when he does get angry he can do anything. He is very like you in so many ways."

Dicksie was wiping her eyes. "Is he, Marion? Well, what shall I wear?"

"Just your riding-clothes, dear, and a smile. He won't know what you have on. It is you he will want to see. But I've been thinking of something else. What will your Cousin Lance say? Suppose he should object?"

"Object! I should like to see him object after losing the fight himself." Marion laughed. "Well, do you think you can find the way down there for us?"

"I can find any way anywhere within 100 miles of here."

On the 20th of June McCloud did have something of an army of men in the Crawling Stone valley. Of these, 250 were in the vicinity of the bridge, the abutments and piers of which were being put in just below the Dunning ranch. Near at hand Bill Dancing, with a big gang, had been for some time watching the ice and dynamiting the jams. McCloud brought in more men as the river continued to rise. The danger line on the gauges was at length submerged, and for three days the main-line construction camps had been robbed of men to guard the soft grades above and below the bridge. The new track up and down the valley had become a highway of escape from the flood, and the track patrols were met at every curve by cattle, horses, deer, wolves and coyotes fleeing from the waste of waters that spread over the bottoms.

Through the Dunning ranch the Crawling Stone river makes a far bend across the valley to the north and east. The extraordinary volume of water now pouring through the Box canyon exposed 10,000 acres of the ranch to the caprice of the river, and if at the point of its tremendous sweep to the north it should cut back into its old channel the change would wipe the entire body of ranch alfalfa lands off the face of the valley. With the heat of the lengthening June days a vast steam rose from the chill waters of the river, marking in ominous windings the channel of the main stream through a yellow sea which, ignoring the usual landmarks of trees and dunes, flanked the current broadly on either side. Late in the afternoon of the day that Dicksie with Marion sought McCloud, a storm drifted down the Topah Topah hills, and heavy showers broke across the valley.

FLANNERY'S FUTILE FLY

'PLAINS ARE ALMOST SHUT OUT.

Splendid Playing by Home Team Wins Game in Record Time—Frentz Spiked.

With two out and one man on second Flannery of the 'Plains team picked out one of Ortleb's offerings and sent it screaming to left garden, giving Boyd a chance for a sensational catch. He took it, nabbing the ball on the run and rolling over and over, clinging to the sphere like grim death, and saving the game for the home team.

It was a timely catch, as the 'Plains men were finding Ortleb, who up to this point had pitched a fine game. If Boyd had dropped the ball the score would have at least been tied and the game possibly won by Manager Frentz's team.

As was expected, the game was an exciting one from beginning to end, and so sharp was the fielding and so little time lost between innings that it was played in almost record time.

Plainfield scored first in the third inning. Ortleb's safety to centre began it. Boyd ran for Ortleb. Schott's and Barnes' sacrifices brought Boyd over the pan. Two more runs came over in the sixth session, when Boyd and Barnes bunted safely and were advanced a base on Emery's out. Martin went out on a fly to left, but both runners scored on Seery's single to right. This ended Plainfield's scoring.

Scotch Plains squeezed one across in the ninth, Frentz singled and promptly stole second and moved along to third when Dodge, who was given a pass was thrown out at second in a double steal, and came in on Reick's sacrifice.

Emery was the only Plainfielder who could solve McLaughlin's pitching. Out of four times at bat he made two singles and a double, the latter would easily have been a triple had Emery been able to run, but the strain on his game leg was too much.

Frentz was spiked by Seery in the fifth, but not seriously. Barnes, Nolan and Schott carried off the fielding honors for Plainfield, while Frentz, Baldwin and Brown did fine work for 'Plains.

ST. MARY'S TEAM DOWNS CLIMAX A. C.

St. Mary's had splendid base running practice Saturday afternoon on St. Mary's Oval, when they defeated the Climax A. C. by the score of 9-3, shutting them out until the ninth inning, when "Hub" Conover eased up and let them save themselves from a shut out.

Al Squiers started for St. Mary's and pitched in his usual brilliant style, shutting them out for five inning, when "Hub" Conover went in and proceeded to hang up a strike-out record for four innings, fanning seven. Terry pitched a good game for the Climax but received poor support, the infield making all the different varities of errors behind him. St. Mary scored two in the first on a base on balls, a hit and a passed ball; four in the third on two hits and two errors; two in the fifth on two hits and a base on balls and one more in the eighth. "Hub" Conover connected for three hits and McAfee kept up his batting streak, driving out two safe ones.

SMALL ATTENDANCE AT LOCAL GOLF COURSES

Owing to the fact that there are so many members away on their vacation, there was a small field out at the Park Golf Club, Saturday afternoon. The only event was the weekly competition for the President's and golf club cups, and but few scores were posted. R. B. Titsworth E. A. Lough, C. B. Morse and L. T. Fisher divided the points for the two cups, handicap and scratch events. Mr. Titsworth returned a net 67, but his handicap of 26 will be given a generous slice before another week rolls around. The point-winners:

R. B. Titsworth, 93, 26-67; E. A. Lough, 104, 30-74; Charles B. Morse, 100, 14-86; L. T. Fisher, 106, 20-86.

There was no scheduled event at the Plainfield Country Club Saturday, here, too, the absence of members, attracting a small field. Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton was the winner of the women's handicap competition, defeating Miss Martha Robert, by 3 up and 2 to play.

CITY AND BOROUGH TEAMS ENGAGE IN SLUGGING MATCH.

The game between the Plainfield and North Plainfield A. C. Saturday afternoon was a slugging match, both teams hit the ball often and hard, the Plainfield A. C. winning the contest by the score of 13 to 9. Miller, the new twirler of the local team, pitched a steady game, hit the ball hard, and fielded his position in great style. Mooney was the feature of the game, his fine base throwing was a great factor in winning the contest. Mooney caught for the Scotch Plains A. C. before Alberts secured that position, and showed by his fine work Saturday that he will be a great help to the team. Ayers, in left field, played a brilliant game, as did Coon at third base. Allen, of the North Plainfield team, was in the box for seven innings and pitched clever ball taking the place of Reinman, who hurt his hand in the first inning. Fiering at first, Hann at short, and Driver in centre field, played classy ball for their team. George Perry also caught a fine game. The teams will meet later in the season.

ROAD TESTS THIS WEEK.

The tests of the effect of automobile tires on the road surfaces which are to be conducted near Newark under the direction of James Owen, County Engineer of Essex county, and the officials of the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club will be of a semi-private nature, as those in charge think better results can be obtained if there are few sightseers' cars at the testing ground. It is expected that the tests will be held during the coming week, but the exact day and location will be told before hand only to those interested.

The committeemen expect to have about ten cars for use in the experiments, the machines ranging from 20 to 50 horse-power and one at least will be capable of travelling at the rate of sixty miles an hour. Each car will be weighed before the tests are begun and the speedometers on the machines will be tested to see if they are accurate. In addition to making tests to determine the eect of the tires on the road surface when the cars are travelling at various rates of speed some of the cars are to be stopped as quickly as possible when going at speed to see what the effect is on the road surface.

Three different stretches of roadway, each 300 yards in length, are to be used for the experiments. One section is to be an ordinary stone road that has not been well kept up and maintained. Another stretch will be a "packed" road of the ordinary dirt surface. The third section to be used is to be a macadam stretch in good condition that has been treated with oil or some other dust laying compound. Efforts will be made to have a curve in one of the sections, in order to observe the effect of rounding the curve at high speed.

Playing Fine Golf.

T. W. T. Maxwell, of this city, who has been sojourning at Saranac Inn, Adirondacks, is now at Pine Grove House, Spofford Lake, New Hampshire. Since being away he has upheld the reputation of Plainfield on the golf links. Last Thursday he won a kodak as first prize in a handicap tournament against bogey and on Friday he won a kickers' handicap and tied for first place the same day in an 18 hole handicap match. Friday night he and Mrs. Maxwell received first honors at a bridge party.

1910 Hudson 'Twenty' $900

Equipment:—Two large headlights, generator, two side oil lamps, tail lamps, full set tools and horn—$900 F. O. B. Detroit.

Strong-Speedy-Roomy-Stylish

There have been many low priced cars, but never one so big, strong, speedy and good looking as this one. In the Hudson "Twenty" you get the best automobile value ever offered for less than $1,000. In this car you find something called CLASS—that something which other cars at or near this price have lacked.

Most low priced cars have been too small. In Hudson "Twenty" you get a big car. Note the long wheel base—100 inches. Note the big, strong wheels, the large radiator, big hood, staunch, clean-made frame.

This car looks a big car. It is a big car. Other cars selling under $1,000 have not been roomy. One felt cramped after riding in them. The Hudson "Twenty" has ample leg room. There is no Roadster made, regardless of price, that affords more comfort to those who ride in it. From the front seat to the dash there is a space of 31 inches.

Designers of other cars selling around the price of the Hudson "Twenty" have not seemed to realize that it is as easy to make a good looking car as it is to make another kind.

Here is a car that is good looking. It is big and racy looking. Note the graceful and harmonious lines. Observe the sweep of the fenders and the frame. There is no car with better lines None from this standpoint more satisfying.

A man who can afford a half dozen cars will enjoy the Hudson "Twenty" as well as the man who can own but one.

Judged by every mechanical and engineering standard this car is thoroughly up-to-date without embodying any experimental features. It is a car that looks and acts like the more expensive. It is big, roomy, stylish, satisfying.

SOME HIGH-GRADE FEATURES

The Hudson "Twenty" has a sliding gear transmission, selective type, three speeds forward and reverse, such as you find on the Packard, Peerless, Pierce, Lozier and other high grade cars. Most other low-priced cars do not have this type of transmission.

All the Power You Need.

The motor is vertical, four cylinder—3¾x4½—four cycle, water cooled, known as the Renault type. And Renault motors are the pride of France.

The Hudson "Twenty" motor developes all the power you can want. Any Hudson "Twenty" will do 50 miles an hour. On the Grosse Pointe race track one of them has been driven a mile a minute.

The frame of the Hudson "Twenty" is of the best open hearth stock. It is 3½ in. x 1½ in. section, accurately and carefully riveted together with hot rivets, and braced against all possible strains. Our frames are made by the Hydraulic Pressed Steel Company of Detroit, the company which makes frames also for the high-priced Stearns cars.

Single Piece I-Beam Axle.

The front axle is a one piece drop-forged I beam section, of the best grade of open hearth steel, carefully heat treated. The Peerless, Pierce, Matheson, Lozier and other high grade cars use drop forged front axles.

The rear axle is of the semi-floating type, shaft-driven, proved out by a score of makers.

Perfect Comfort Here.

There is more rake to the steering post than is found on the average car. This allows the driver a comfortable position. The generous diameter of the steering wheel makes the car easy to handle.

The springs are of special steel, semi-elliptic in front, and three-quarter-elliptic in the rear, such as you find in the Renault, Chalmers-Detroit, Pierce and others.

Lubrication is of the pump circulated, constant splash system, which has proved so satisfactory on the Oldsmobile, Chalmers-Detroit and other highly successful cars.

The body is composed of the best grade of ash, carefully placed and securely bolted to the frame. The seats are large and roomy and well upholstered.

It Pleases the Eye.

In color the "Twenty" is a green maroon, with mouldings and edges of bonnet striped in black. Leather is blue black. Fenders, fender irons, pedals, and top irons are enameled black. The radiator, steering column, side lamp brackets, hub caps, and side control levers are of brass. Steps are aluminum.

The tires are 32 in. x 3 in. in front and 32 in. x 3½ in. in the rear. The crank shaft has a tensile strength of 100,000 pounds; the clutch is leather faced, cone type; the clearance is 12½ inches under the steering knuckles.

Fulfills Every Demand.

The Hudson "Twenty" not only looks like the more expensive cars, but it acts like them too.

It can go faster than most careful drivers want to ride, it can climb all of the hills, and stand up on all sorts of roads, and it will do this work on a small amount of gasoline, and at a low cost of repairs and tires.

Nothing experimental about it. Nothing untried.

The "Twenty" has been recognized by the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers. It is the only four cylinder licensed car selling for less than $1,000.

Deliveries will begin in August and orders will be filled in rotation as received. Please 'phone or write for catalog.

A "DOG DIRECTORY" NOW

950 NOW WEAR LICENSE TAGS.

"Every Dog is Numbered," and Ordinance Rigidly Enforced—The Big Revenue.

Plainfield has a "dog directory" now, for the dogs licensed are recorded by kind and street address in the office of the city clerk and at police headquarters. The city's dog population, according to the license "blue book," is 950, and so rigidly have the police been enforcing the ordinance that practically all the canines now wear the little numbered tags.

The dogs are of all sorts and conditions, and their owners include the millionaire, who registered his blue-blooded ribbon winners, and the Italian laborer, whose mongrel also wears one of the license tags. Among the fancy breeds of animals listed are a Japanese Pinky-Panky, a Maltese poodle, a Llewellyn setter and a blood hound, but the proletariat of Dogdom is also represented, for many license wearers are simply designated as "mongrel," or "unknown." These latter sort are in several cases owned by the well-to-do, and those who pay their licenses say that they are the truest of the faithful, and far more companionable than the be-ribboned cushion-sleepers.

The income from the dog licenses, which cost $250 apiece, makes a total of $2,375. Of this sum, $237.50 goes to the city clerk, who gets a quarter apiece for issuing the licenses, and the balance goes to the city treasury. A movement is on foot to have this balance put to an especial use, and agitation has been started to have it made the nucleus of a police pension fund. Several of the councilmen are interested in this movement, but no action has yet been taken. Last year there were less than 500 dog licenses issued.

The 1909 ordinance has done away with the muzzle requirement, and licensed dogs now trot the streets, free to breathe, eat and drink. Many dog-owners looked on the muzzle as cruel, and the agitation for its abondonment resulted in the muzzle requirement being dropped. With all the dogs wearing numbered tags, it is an easy matter for a policeman to "get the number" of any canine trouble-maker, and "arrest" it afterwards through its owner. At the dog pound, too, conditions have been improved, and any vagrants captured are treated like prisoners in the Union county jail, and reecive plenty of good food. Those condemned to die are given a humane impetus toward the dog-star, and funeral arrangements are under the supervision of the Board of Health.

MUST MRS. VON OHL'S 14 DOGS BE LICENCED?

Protesting against securing licenses for her fourteen dogs, on the grounds that the animals "spend most of their time" in Middlesex county, Mrs. Percy Von Ohl, whose large farm at Road Ending is partly in Union and partly in Middlesex counties, will probably be in the city court tomorrow morning to thresh the matter out with City Judge Runyon. She was "ordered down" by Detective Sergeant Flynn, and the case was to have come up today, but the non-appearance of the horse owner caused its postponement.

The police officer, acting for the rigid enforcement of the license ordinance, went to the Von Ohl farm yesterday and saw the fourteen canines. Spotting a violation, he questioned Mrs. Von Ohl about the animals. "The dogs are kept over there," said the woman, pointing, "and that's across the county line in Middlesex. They're not Plainfield dogs, and I don's see why they have to be licensed." The officer asked why they were at that time at the house, which is within the city limits, and was told that they were there for a little while to be fed. This custom makes the real residence of the animals a fine point, and it may be that City Judge Runyon's ruling will require that the meals be served in Middlesex county or that kennel licenses be secured.

No Damage at Noon Blaze.

Fire broke out at about noon today in the barn owned by Mrs. Isabell Jackson, of Arlington avenue, when slight damage was done by the flames, which were of unknown origin. An alarm was sounded from box 35.

WANT TWO PLAYGROUNDS

Mayor Fisk Urges City Fathers to Take Prompt Action.

A COMMISSION IS SUGGESTED.

Purchase of Land in the Eastern and Western Ends of the City Recommended.

The question of establishing playgrounds in Plainfield, which has been agitated considerably of late, was urged by Mayor C. J. Fisk in an important special message which he sent to the Common Council at the regular August meeting, last night. Such a public playground as proposed has the support of a large number of leading citizens, who believe that children should have some suitable place where they can engage in approved sports and get the healthful exercise which they need.

Mayor Fisk urges the establishment of two playgrounds, one in the West End and the other in the East End of the city, the appointment of a playgrounds' commission and proper equipment of these grounds. His ideas are clearly set forth in the following special message, which was referred to the committee on laws and ordinances for further investigation:

"The matter of providing proper playgrounds for the children has been called to my attention by a number of our most prominent and influential citizens. Such playgrounds with proper supervision are no experiment, but have proven to be not only very beneficial to the health of the children, but also a great step forward in the educational line, mentally and physically. There is no doubt in my mind that in the city of Plainfield the question of establishing such play grounds should be given serious consideration at once and a commission appointed as provided by the laws of 1907, to take charge of the matter.

"In this message, I would strongly recommend: (1), that the property owned by the city, corner of Rock avenue and West Front street, be improved as a playground park with proper facilities for the children in the western section of the city, including the laying out of a running track and ball field, with proper shelter houses and dressing rooms. This property is now lying waste, and could be improved at comparatively small expense. So there is no reason why it should not be utilized for this purpose; almost immediately; (2), A tract of land should be acquired in the eastern section of the city, somewhere near Richmond street, located convenient to the trolley road, for the same purpose, and if such a tract of land can be found and secured for a reasonable price, I recommend that the same be purchased and dedicated to such use; (3), a portion of the ground about the respective public school houses should be put at the disposal of the play ground commissioners, properly equipped with apparatus and set aside at least during the summer months as playgrounds for the children 12 years old and under.

"Our city is rapidly increasing in population, new houses for residences and building for business purposes are being built, and in a very few years all available land conveniently located for the uses above outlined will be taken up or the cost of same will be higher than the city should pay, at the same time the need for same will be more and more apparent.

"If we want our city to continue to grow, and the right kind of people to come here to live, we must keep up with the times and give the children all the advantages possible and there is no doubt that playgrounds under proper supervision are a means of development of not only mind and body, but of character, leadership and self-government to a much greater extent than the schoolroom.

"I urge that your Honorable Body give this subject your earnest, prompt and serious consideration, in order that the children in Plainfield may enjoy at an early date the same advantages in this respect that are already enjoyed by children in other cities of this State."

Another "Never Again."

Much beer made Harold Dennos, whose home is in the borough, was awfully sleepy on West Front street yesterday afternoon, and he persisted in seeking curbstone repose, although repeatedly aroused and "shooed" away by pedestrians and business men. He was arrested by Patrolman Dunlap and left the court room in abject contrition after suspended sentence from City Judge Runyon.

Grand Chief Peter L. Albersee, of Paterson, will pay a fraternal visit to Freedom Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle tonight.

THE TAX BUDGET RAISED

Common Council Appropriates $23,000 to Meet Certain Expenses.

FOR A CONTINGENT FUND.

Question, of Granting Additional Street Lights Provokes Endless Discussion.

For the purpose of meeting certain contingencies during the coming year, Mr. Buxton offered a resolution at the August meeting of the Common Council, last night, which was adopted, adding $23,000 to the general tax to be raised during 1909, the amount not exceeding the ten per cent. of the total sum as provided by law. This money will meet certain expenses for the maintenance of schools, streets, etc., according to previous custom.

There was a considerable amount of business of minor importance taken up and disposed of. The question of granting petitions for lights caused much discussion, especially the one from Philip S. Suffern and others for lights on Kensington avenue, between Prospect and Watchung avenues. After an endless lot of talk, during which it was once decided to table the petition, it was taken up again and on motion of Mr. Montgomery, two lights were granted for that thoroughfare.

Mr. Montgomery, in response to a petition from George O. Stevens and others, recommended a change of lights on West Sixth street, between Lee place and Monroe avenue, whereby the thoroughfare would probably get an extra lamp. During the discussion which followed, the other members had lots of fun at the expense of Mr. Montgomery. He stated that he wanted to have the lights placed about 300 feet apart, complying with the uniform plan adopted by the committee. Mr. Montgomery's resolution calling for two lights on West Sixth street was finally amended to provide for one extra lamp.

Residents of Everitt place, between West Front street and Dunellen avenue, petitioned for two lights, but this matter was referred to the light committee. The Public Service Corporation informed the Council that it had located three lights on Gresham road as directed.

In the discussion regarding the question of exceeding the light appropriation, which was raised by Mr. Buxton, Mr. Montgomery presented a statement of the finances of his committee, showing that this is not likely nor possible. He said that the amount appropriated for the year was $15,500, while including the July bill there is now a balance on hand of $452.72, which will be ample until the next appropriation is made.

NEGRO COP-FIGHTER MAY GET BAIL TODAY

William G. DeMeza, who has been retained as counsel for William Jackson, the West Third street negro who assaulted Patrolman Tobias Nolan Wednesday night, announced today that his client would probably be freed on bail this afternoon. The man is now a prisoner in a cell in the county jail at Elizabeth, and his bail was fixed at $3,000 at his hearing Saturday.

"I want you to flatly deny from me the story about this bail printed in another paper, last night," said Mr. DeMeza to a Daily Press reporter today. "There is absolutely no truth in the statement that I applied for a reduction of the bail before Judge Atwater at Elizabeth, Saturday. In the first place, Judge Atwater is away, and in the second place, I was not retained as counsel in the case until Monday. My negotiations in the matter have been with City Judge Runyon."

Patrolman Nolan is again on the job, although his ribs still hurt him as the result of the big negro's bearing. His split head and his bitten finger are "doing as well as can be expected." The ex-blacksmith says that the crack on the head was the means of restoring him to consciousness, for the night-stick was wrested from him as he lay dazed by striking the back of his head when he fell to the ground, tightly clasped in Jackson's grip. "I guess I was lucky there," said the policeman, who wears badge No. 13, "because if Jackson hadn't hit me that crack, he'd have gotten away from me."

Legal Lights Away.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. VanWinkle and son, John H. VanWinkle, Jr., of Duer street, go to Ocean Grove tomorrow, where they will enjoy the ocean bathing until Labor Day, September 6.

REGULATION OF TRAFFIC

In a Special Message Mayor Fisk Suggests Lights on All Vehicles.

LOCAL AUTO CLUB INTERESTED.

Rules Presented Which Would Lessen the Danger of Collisions On the Highway.

Mayor C. J. Fisk's attention having been called to the importance of the matter with a view to rendering less likely the danger of collisions between automobiles and other vehicles at night, he sent a special message to the Common Council, last night, urging the enforcement of certain reasonable rules providing for lights on vehicles of all kinds and the proper regulation of traffic through the streets of the city. The message was read and then referred to the committee on laws and ordinances. It is believed that the Mayor's suggestions will be adopted. The message is as follows:

"The purpose of this special message is to call your attention to the importance of passing an ordinance providing for lights on vehicles of all kinds at night, so that the same may be plainly seen for a distance of at least two hundred feet in either direction. Also to the establishing and enforcing of certain reasonable rules for the proper regulation of traffic through the streets.

"Both of the above matters should have prompt and careful consideration. During the past few weeks there have been a number of accidents caused in every case by ignorance of what is known as the ordinary rules of the road.

"The Executive Committee of the Plainfield Automobile Club and other citizens have not only called my attention to the subject but have offered and agreed to abide by such rules as may be adopted, and also to do all in their power to influence and educate others to do the same.

"In all our business streets the rules should be to always keep to the right and only stop with the right side of the vehicles to the curb. In turning corners always to keep to the right of the centre of the intersection.

"To always approach a corner with the horse being driven or automobile under control so that it may be stopped short. Persons driving horse or automobile, must be taught that in crossing a street as a regular crossing, the person walking has equal right with the driver of a vehicle.

"Another rule to be observed should be to always look out for the person approaching on the right. These are a few of the most important rules that should be incorporated in an ordinance. For your information, I hand you herewith a copy of the rules on this subject in force in New York and several other cities.

"I would suggest that this matter be referred to a Committee with the request that they give the subject their immediate consideration and investigate and report at the next meeting of the Common Council with such recommendations as they deem proper."

Julian Linke an Orator.

Julian Linke, who is touring the United States, as a member of the New York American's party of school boys and teachers, was at the summit of Pike's Peak one day last week and made a speech to his fellow travelers. While in Denver the tourists went in for the purchase of Indian blankets and other souvenirs of their trip. They are now on the way to the Alaska-Yukon exposition at Seattle, by steamer from San Francisco. Young Linke writes that everyone in the party is well and they are learning a lot about their country that they could never gather from the reading of books.

FRUIT STANDS MUST GO

LIVING ROOMS TOO CLOSE.

Some Have Menageries of Animals—New Health Inspector. Appointed Last Night.

About a dozen small fruit stands and groceries in the borough of North Plainfield, conducted for the most part by Italians and Greeks, will have to be changed shortly to conform to the new ordinance passed by the borough Board of Health at its meeting last night, if they wish to continue in business.

Heretofore, the living room has been in the rear, and the store, as it is called, has been in front. The only air passage has been through the front door, and in the living room. Often the whole family is assembled in the one room and here they sleep, cook their meals and in some cases harbor a whole menagerie of pet animals.

These unsanitary conditions were brought to the attention of the health board, and it was found that in many cases the only thing that separated the living room from the store, where edibles were kept, was a curtain. Often a mere screen did service in this respect. Perishable fruits, vegetables and meats sold by these dealers are kept in the front room exposed to all the odors and contamination of the back room. A thorough investigation of all conditions in this type of store led the health board to take drastic steps in the matter to relieve the condition. An ordinance was proposed to make it a misdemanor for a dealer to live in the back part of his store, where perishable edibles are sold in the front. The ordinance came up twice, but failed to meet with the necessary support. A complete investigation of the conditions led to its passage last night on the third reading. Sufficient time will be granted dealers to make the necessary changes in their manner of doing business and of living, to conform to the regulations of the new ordinance.

At the meeting last night, Louis Ollif was appointed health inspector. His position is to be permanent.

COMMON COUNCIL RATIFIES SPECIAL SEWER REPORT

The Common Council at its August meeting, last night, ratified and confirmed the report of the special sewer assessors, R. A. Meeker, S. P. T. Wilbur and H. B. MacDonald, which was presented at a previous meeting. The Council has complied with the law in granting a public hearing, and passing on the proofs of publication in the official newspapers of the city.

The Shade Tree Commission reported to the Council that maple trees on the sidewalks throughout the city are being constantly injured, but because its funds are entirely exhausted it is powerless to do anything. The matter was referred to the finance committee and at an adjourned meeting Monday night, it is likely that a sufficient sum will be appropriated for this work.

Mayor C. J. Fisk appointed Chas. Anderson a regular policeman to fill the vacancy in the force caused by the resignation of John Kelly, and the appointment was confirmed. Anderson has been doing regular duty as a special since July, 1909, when he received his first appointment.

"THE WHITE STORE" EMPLOYES OFF ON ANNUAL OUTING.

A merry party of forty young men and women comprising the employes of "The White Store," left this morning in the big auto bus of the Plainfield Auto Bus Company, for Chimney Rock, where the are spending the day in gala manner as the guests of A. E. Force & Co.

The bus was not large enough to hold the entire party, and Mr. Force's automobile had to be pressed into service. At the Rock the merry-makers enjoyed a bountiful feast in the open air, after which the young men played baseball to the huge amusement of the young women. The party will return late this evening from the rock.

AIRSHIP FLIGHTS HERE

PARACHUTES FOR EMERGENCY.

Wright Brothers Will Deliver City's First Airship in the Fall.

Plainfielders will have an opportunity to witness an airship in flight in this city as a daily occurrence when Howard Colby, of Evergreen avenue, receives his new aeroplane from the Wright brothers, with whom he has just placed an order.

Mr. Colby at present knows very little about aeroplane construction or operation; but his order specifies that it be of fair size, and capable of easy operation. It will cost about $2,500 and will be ready for use this fall.

This will be the first aeroplane to be operated in this city, and as the initial aviator Mr. Colby enjoys a unique distinction which he bears modestly.

To a Daily Press representative he said that he would make flights locally, and, as the machine is large enough for more than one person, friends may occasionally be invited to make the trips with him. A machine of similar design will be put out for Edward S. F. Randolph, a former Plainfielder. With him Mr. Colby is planning a series of trips to points of interest about the State.

Mr. Colby says he will carry with him a number of folding parachutes so that in case he alights on a mountain peak, a skyscraper or a church steeple, he will not have to undertake the hazardous task of climbing down the outer walls, which are often very slippery and in some cases, from lack of proper repairs and attention, are apt to be frail in their construction.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS.

Raymond Eyerman, of Clayton, cut a bad gash across the back of his hand by falling on a broken bottle yesterday.

Walnut tree buyers of Woodbury are making another visit to South Jersey in view of purchasing trees for shipment to Germany.

Willet Ferbert, eleven years old, of 641 Market street, Camden, had one of his legs torn by the teeth of a stray dog yesterday. The wound was treated at the Homeopathic Hospital.

Owing to the drop in the price of potatoes several of the farmers in Woodbury have decided to allow them to remain in the ground until later, when they expect the price to advance considerably.

The body of Thomas Sharp, of West Berlin, was washed ashore at North Point, Ocean City, yesterday afternoon, close to where the unfortunate man's clothing was recovered. Sharp was a carpenter employed by his brother, Robert Sharp, who is erecting some houses here. He was unmarried.

Knocked from the top of a freight car near Pavonia, Abraham Lapp, twenty-one years old, of 2548 Sherman avenue, Camden, was seriously injured yesterday. He was taken to the Cooper Hospital, where it was found that one of his legs had been fractured and that he had sustained numerous lacerations and bruises.

Charles Ivins, of Pleasantville, nine years old, lost his life in Fisher's Creek, Atlantic City, yesterday while swimming with several companions. He stepped into a hole and was engulfed. One of his companions was his brother, who with the others made vain efforts to save the lad. Later a rescue party searched the creek and and found the remains.

When the body of Mrs. Mary Mitchell, sixty years old, was found in the Pensauken Creek, at Fork Landing, two miles from Moorestown, yesterday morning, by Harry Johnson, who was fishing with two companions, foul play was feared. Coroner Grebler, of Moorestown, viewed the body and decided that it was a case of accidental drowning.

To further stimulate the activities of Ocean City police and the Pinkerton men, Milton Harr, whose Ocean avenue cottage was robbed of nearly $2,000 worth of jewels, has offered a reward of $500 for the arrest of the burglars. The two detectives, who, with Constable Foster, arrested H. S. Rightmire, a prominent Camden man, as a suspect in the Harr robbery, and who proved that they had made a big mistake, have not been arrested, although a warrant has been issued.

Rev. Dr. Alfred C. Gearhart, pastor of the Baptist church, Gloucester City, at Sunday's services announced that he had placed his resignation in the hands of the deacons and a meeting of the congregation has been called for Wednesday evening next to receive it. The announcement came as a great surprise to the congregation. Dr. Gearhart has been pastor for about two years. He accepted a call as pastor after six months of stated supply work.

Three years ago a large automobile with a flat tire stopped in front of Postmaster George A. Nute's house, at Franklinville, and, having no means of repairing the damage, the occupants took the train for Philadelphia, saying they would return the next day for the car. No one has ever called and Mr. Nute will sell it for storage. The man who was driving the automobile said he lived in Baltimore, but letters addressed to him were returned unopened. Some think the machine was stolen for a "joy ride" and when the breakdown came was abandoned.

NAMES A. B. CARLTON FOR COMPTROLLER.

Mayor Victor Mravlag, of Elizabeth, sprung a new candidate for comptroller yesterday. He is A. B. Carlton, who is now an officer of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company, of Newark, who formerly held the office. The only other known candidates for the office are John S. Sauer, chairman of the City Council committee on finance, and General Dennis F. Collins.

The Mayor said yesterday that he had spoken to Mr. Carlton with reference to the comptrollership and had found that he was willing to take the office if City Council should offer it to him, but that he would not seek it.

It became known yesterday that General Collins has sent out several letters to councilmen and others avowing his candidacy for the office.

Mr. Sauer made the following statement, his first acknowledgement made public about his candidacy, yesterday:

"In deference to the wishes of a number of Democratic members of City Council, I have decided to become a candidate for the office of city comptroller."

The Elizabeth City Council was last night given official notice of a fist fight between Patrolman J. P. Kelly and Detective Patrick Doody, of the Central Railroad detectives. The police committee reported to Council that it had received from Chief of Police George C. Tenney a report that he had preferred charges of conduct unbecoming an officer and violation of the rules and orders of the department, and the committee recommended that a trial of the recalcitrant policeman be held, according to the rules of the department.

H. C. PULLIAM HONORED BY BASEBALL MEN

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 3.—Surrounded by the friends and associates in the work that made his name famous, the body of Harry Clay Pulliam was laid to rest yesterday afternoon in his lot in Cave Hill cemetery, beside his father and mother. Simple services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. T. M. Hawes, pastor of the Highland Presbyterian church, in the Cave Hill chapel, and the Elk's quartet sang as the body was lowered into the grave.

At 2:30 o'clock the funeral left Pearson's chapel, where the body was laid in state upon arrival yesterday morning. The members of the Louisville and Minneapolis ball teams attended, though not in a body, and the management of the Louisville club was present.

On the train that brought the remains were Barney Dreyfus, Fred Clarke and William J. Locke, secretary of the Pittsburg club; Pitchers Leifield and Leever and Umpires Steve Kane and Johnstone. Wagner's injury prevented him from attending.

The body was borne to its final resting place by Dr. T. Hunt Stucky, Harry W. Russell, Robert W. Brown, William B. Thomas, Claude McFarlan and Charles P. Dehler, all of whom were lifelong friends of Mr. Pulliam, and who were acquainted with the early part of his career in baseball.

Besides his associates in the National League the honorary pallbearers were President Ban Johnson, of the American League; John A. Heydler, secretary of the National League, and John E. Brush, secretary of the National Baseball Commission. The National League owners were Barney Dreyfus, of Pittsburg; Stanley Robison, of St. Louis; John Dovey, of Boston; William Shettsline, of Philadelphia, and Charles Ebetts, of Brooklyn.

Local honorary pall-bearers were Judge Shackleford Miller, Sebastian Gunther, former Chief of Police W. J. McBryde, I. W. Bernheim, Major J. W. Sanders, R. T. Matthews, Dr. W. C. Vandersept and Marmaduke Morton, of Nashville.

The floral tributes ordered for the funeral were the most elaborate ever seen here.

The Picnic.

There is no occasion for surprise in the statement that men enjoy picnics more than women do. The men do not have to wear themselves out in preparing the lunch before the picnic begins.—St. Joseph Gazette.

ROCKEFELLER DOG FARM FACES SUIT.

Public protests, resolutions adopted by anti-vivisection societies and general discussions having failed to wipe out the Rockefeller medical research institute farm at Clyde, near New Brunswick, the neighbors of that place have retained counsel and will complain to the State Board of Health that the place is a public nuisance, a menace to health.

Former Prosecutor George Berdine has been retained and he is preparing the protest which is to be made to the State board.

The neighbors complain that a large number of dogs are kept at the farm and that their barks and cries make day and night hideous, wear upon the nerves of the people and prevent a sound night's sleep.

Some of the more nervous believe that the pitiful cries of the animals are caused by the vivisection experiments and they can almost imagine all sorts of horrible things taking place in the farm.

At the farm it is denied that experiments take place there. The animals are simply kept at the farm until wanted at the New York institute, founded by William Rockefeller, it is claimed.

Nugent Declares Much Traffic Is Diverted.

The Elizabeth Council, at its meeting last night, adopted a resolution calculated to give the passengers on the new Morris Traction Company's trolley lines transfers to the lines carrying passengers into Elizabeth. Much of the traffic which should come to Elizabeth from that line, according to Edward Nugent, the father of the resolution, was now diverted to Newark by way of Millburn.

Mr. Nugent's resolution provides that City Attorney James C. Connolly take up the matter. The resolution is based upon an ordinance passed by the City Council in 1899 granting to the Elizabeth Horse Railroad Company, the predecessor of the Morris Company, permission to operate its lines. The old ordinance contained a provision as to transfers, which it is thought will oblige the company to grant transfers to Elizabeth.

Modern Troubles.

"What's the trouble now?" demanded the weary janitor. "More heat?"

"No," said the tenant of the latest "skyscraper," "but I want these clouds pushed away from my windows."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

JOHN A. HEYDLER CHOSEN AS NEW PRESIDENT

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 3.—John A. Heydler, secretary of the National Baseball League, was elected president of that organization at a meeting of the National League board of directors, held yesterday, shortly after the funeral of Harry C. Pulliam. Barney Dreyfus, chairman of the board of directors, and the other members, Charles Ebbetts, John Dovey and Charles Murphy, were present. Garry Herrmann, who is also a member of the board, was not present, as he is in the West.

After the board of directors was called to order by Chairman Dreyfus a vote was immediately taken for the purpose of choosing a successor to the late Mr. Pulliam, and it was agreed unanimously to elect John A. Heydler for the position.

No one was chosen to fill the position of secretary-treasurer, as Heydler will be able for the present to take care of all the details in the office and on the road.

Besides electing Mr. Heydler president of the league for the unexpired term, it was agreed by the members in the meeting to continue paying the full salary to the estate of the late President Pulliam for the remainder of the present term of office, which expires December 15.

The board of directors further agreed that the National League should erect a suitable monument in honor of one who has always stood for the best interests of the national sport. Messrs. Dreyfus, Murphy and Herrman were appointed on the monument committee, with instructions to spare no expense.

It was further agreed to request all pall players in the National League to wear a badge of mourning on their sleeves for thirty days.

After notifying John A. Heydler of his election, the directors adjourned.

WOMAN, 73, TO JAIL EIGHTY-THIRD TIME.

Having spent about twenty years out of the last twenty-two in the Union County Jail, Ann Ford, 73 years old, was committed to that institution for the eighty-third time at Elizabeth yesterday. Judge Mahon sent her to jail for ninety days in default of a fine for drunkenness.

CO. K. READY FOR HIKE TO STATE CAMP

The last business meeting of the drill term was held last night by Company K, in the armory. The line of march that will be followed when the company goes to the annual camp at Sea Girt Saturday, was discussed, and the stopping places were agreed upon. Sergeant C. R. Pierson was elected secretary of the Company.

The recently elected non-commissioned officers were awarded with their warrants. Corporal Roy DeCamp received his warrant as sergeant and Privates Archie Niles and Samuel Rothberg got their warrants as corporals.

The company will leave the armory sharply at 1:30 o'clock Saturday and will take a special car to New Brunswick. There they will be joined by the company from that place and from there on will follow the line of march as outlined.

The men are enthusiastic over the trip this year and anticipate much fun from it. Most of them are now preparing their equipment, according to instructions given out by Captain Kitchel at the meeting last night.

UP AROUND CALIFON

THERE'S MONEY IN COWS.

"Nails and other foreign substances are often found in cows' stomachs when slaughtered, but yesterday was the first time I have found money therein," said Samuel Neigh, a Califon butcher, after slaughtering a cow purchased at the L. D. Sutton dairy.

A penny as bright as if just from the mint was found in the stomach. Mr. Sutton purchased the cow in New York State. "Cows not only grow into money but money grows into cows at the Sutton dairy," said the local cut-up when told of the incident.

The Danish Lutheran service will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the W. C. T. U. hall. Preaching will be by the Rev. J. Beck, of Brooklyn.

COMMON COUNCIL ROUTINE

Netherwood Reformed Church Want Railroad Embankment Removed.

ASSESSMENT MAPS RE-ADOPTED

Various Departments Present Interesting Reports—Ordinances Adopted on Final Reading.

Rev. Royal A. Stout, pastor of the Netherwood Reformed church, and other interested citizens, petitioned the Common Council at its August meeting, last night, to remove the old railroad embankment near the church at Midway and Leland avenues and properly grade the same. Their argument in favor of the improvement was that that section is rapidly building up and that the embankment should be removed. The petition was referred to the street committee.

C. E. Drake and others requested the Council to take steps to have the trolley switches removed from in front of the site of the old car barns on West Fourth street. They claimed that the switches are worn out and cars passing that point disturb the quiet of the neighborhood by unnecessary noise. The matter was referred to the street committee.

Treasurer Andrew D. Jennings, of the Plainfield Fire Department Pension Association, reported a balance of $4,793.32 a year ago and with the present year's receipts a total of $6,191.82. The report was filed.

Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett reported that during June and July thirty-five sewer permits were granted, and Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that twenty-six permits were granted during July.

Overseer of the Poor A. D. Ayers reported outside expenses of $148.81 for July and alms house expenses of $240.72 for the same period. Clerk Horace G. Adams of the District court, reported receipts for the past month to be $105.60 and disbursements $31.13, leaving a balance of 74.43. These reports were filed.

In accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Buxton and adopted, the city assessment maps were readopted as official and Civil Engineer H. C. Van Emburgh was employed to take care of the maps for the coming year for the sum of $125 and in addition to locate any new buildings and make necessary changes for the sum of $100.

Mr. Gloak, chairman of the street committee, reported back the petition of George E. Hall and others asking that Denmark road be accepted, stating that the request would be granted when the petitioners furnished the proper maps.

Mr. Taylor, chairman of the fire committee, offered several resolutions, which were adopted, calling for changes in the telephone arrangement as cared for by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company. One resolution provided for a change of the clock and equipment at fire headquarters at an expense at $4.53; also the installation of an extension 'phone at headquarters at an expense of $6; also the installation of a tapper in the residence of J. W. Ludgate, a callman, at 310 Clinton avenue, at an expense of $14.10. The tapper will be installed to notify Mr. Ludgate of fires, his residence being such a distance that he cannot always hear the fire alarm.

Another change ordered was the removal of the telephone in the residence of Street Commissioner Gavett to the new East End fire house, and the installation of a four-party flat rate 'phone in Mr. Gavett's residence at an annual rental of $30, which the city will pay.

The ordinance providing for gas "cutoffs" as a protection in case of fires, was adopted on third reading on motion of Mr. Holt, and similar action was taken regarding the tax ordinance in accordance with a motion by Mr. Buxton. The meeting then adjourned after a motion by Mr. Buxton that another session be held Monday night, August 9, was carried.

Red Bank Fremen to Parade.

Thirteen visiting fire companies are expected to parade in Red Bank on Labor Day with the local firemen. They will come from Fair Haven, Oceanic, Rumson, Seabright, Little Silver, Oceanport, Eatontown, West Long Branch, Long Branch, Shrewsbury, Navesink, Highlands and Atlantic Highlands. The parade committee says it will be perhaps the largest affair of its kind ever held in Red Bank. The marching will commence just before noon, in order to give the firemen chance to attend the second annual fair of the Monmouth County Fair Association, which will take place at Shrewsbury avenue and the Newman Springs road. The parade committee have asked the Borough Council for an appropriation to defray the expenses.

ABOUT THE SIZES OF BOOKS.

The words "folio," "quarto," "octavo," "duodecimo" and the like have almost, if not quite, lost their original meaning, says the New York Tribune. At first they had reference only to the number of leaves into which the sheets used in making the book were folded. Thus, if these sheets were folded once the book was called a folio; if the sheets were folded twice, so as to form four leaves, the book was called a quarto, if they were folded four times, so as to form eight leaves, the book was called an octavo, and so on.

The duodecimo, or 12mo, is an irregular size. To make it the sheet must be folded as as to form twelve leaves. Fold one-third of the width of a sheet lengthwise on itself. Next fold the paper across its breadth in the centre. Next fold the sheet across its length—that is, fold the two leaves on the four. Finally fold it again across and in such shape that it may easily be sewed in with the others to form a book.

But though, strictly and historically, quarto, octavo, etc., have reference solely to the manner of folding the sheet, they are, as a matter of common practice, used to specify the sizes of books.

If the sheets on which books are printed were of uniform size a quarto page would be as unvarying area as a square foot or an acre, and before the invention of machines for making paper there was such uniformity to be found in the sizes of sheets.

But when paper making machines were introduced and the use of molds was abondoned sheets came to be made of all dimensions. As a result quartos and octavos had all sorts of dimensions and terms, when used strictly to indicate how the sheet was folded, because worthless as designations of size. The use of the old terms was nevertheless not abandoned, but instead they were first used to indicate a rather wide range of sizes and finally were attached to certain more definite sizes, without reference to the method of folding.

The practise of the publisher nowadays is first to determine what size of page he wants. The sheet he uses will be large or small, according to the capacity of the press at his disposal. On that sheet he may print, say, eight octavos pages, or he may print thirty-two, but he will call the book an octavo, though by its folding it should be called either a quarto or a 16mo.

In other words, the publisher calls his book by the name of that one of the old sizes to which it happens to come nearest.

The confusion resulting from the changes noticed here has not passed away yet, but efforts have been made to give definiteness to the old words.

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

BERKELEY HEIGHTS.

Charles L. Miltner, of Glenside, entertained a large party of friends last evening at his home. Musical selections were rendered by Messrs. Shaffer and Shulte, members of the famous Heimleine Banjo Quartette. John T. Brady, of the Bronx, New York, a clever guitar artist, rendered some beautiful selections and astonished the audience by performing some up-to-date tricks. Everybody felt their pockets to locate their watches and money, the deception being so realistic. "The Bungalow Man" presided at the dinner and in his remarks stated the objects of the society and what it had accomplished and the work it expects to accomplish in the future with the help of the enterprising citizens of the township. The room was decorated suitably with garlands of red and white ribbons festooned with flowers of every description. The affair terminated at midnight.

William Jeffery will take the committee of school children, numbering fourteen in all, to New York on Thursday of this week. His plans is to take the 7:59 train in the morning from Berkeley Heights station to Hoboken, take the transfer tunnel to Jersey City and from Jersey City to the Hudson terminal. Then the party will have some ice cream and then go up to the Museum of Natural History and that will take up the morning. They will have dinner and go to Proctor's theatre at Broadway and 28th street, leaving there in time to take the 5:30 express for home. Each child will wear a bow of red and white ribbon. William Woodruff, the principal, will accompany the party.

The Society of "Our Men" of the township of New Providence will give a concert and dance in the Lyceum at Berkeley Heights on August 14, at 8 o'clock in the evening. A small admission fee will be charged. This will be one of the most elaborate entertainments which have ever been witnessed in the township, and its object is to raise funds for the children's Christmas festivities. Such a worthy cause should attract everyone in the township and a great man friends from the neighboring towns and from Plainfield.

A committee from the Society of "Our Men" visited Mr. and Mrs. Richard Rogers at their invitation to inspect their beautiful bungalow. It is one of the neatest and cosiest affairs in that section of the country. Looking out over the Passaic Valley, it is well calculated to attract others to that style of living.

A petition is being circulated among the residents of the road leading from Hess' Corner to Union Village for the Township Committee to install electric lights on that road and the same will be brought to the attention of the committee at the next meeting, Friday evening of this week.

Glenside Park seems to be doing well this season. Every house is rented and the proprietor and workmen are happy.

William T. Lutz, the genial constable, contemplates going West in the early part of the coming year.

E. B. Oechsner, the township committeeman, was caught industriously working on his road today.

Mrs. William Birrell is staying with her daughter, Mrs. William Jeffery for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kuntz went to Elizabeth today on business.

CHIEF KIELY'S REPORT TO BE MADE PUBLIC

When Chief Kiely was authorized to attend the convention of police chiefs at Buffalo, with the understanding that he was to render a detailed report of the proceedings of the event, and also turn in an itemized statement of the expenses of the trip to the Common Council, it was understood by the members of the Council that this report and statement were to be read to them.

Councilman Frank Holt brought the matter to the attention of the Council last night by asking chairman Frank Randolph what had become of the report. Mr. Randolph replied that he had understood that the reports were to be handed to the Police Board, and that he had them. He said that the report was very complete and that he would present it with the itemized account of expenses to the Council at its next meeting.

THIEF DISGUISED SELF IN KIMONO.

Mrs. J. P. Woodruff, of 149 West Grand street, Elizabeth, scared away a burglar who entered her house early yesterday. She awoke to find a man masquerading in a kimono in her room ransacking a bureau. When Mrs. Woodruff awoke the thief was crouching at the foot of the bed. He remained perfectly still and finally she spoke, thinking it was her sister, who slept in the room adjoining, and asked if there was anything wrong. There was no answer and as Mrs. Woodruff looked closer she discovered that it was a man standing at the foot of the bed. The terrified woman screamed, at which the startled burglar ran to a window in which there was a screen.

Evidently he did not see the obstruction, for he leaped head foremost for the piazza roof a few feet below, carrying the screen before him.

The intruder gained entrance to the house by cutting away the screen of a dining-room window. Through this he crawled and proceeded to the room occupied by Harvey Wells. Taking an armful of Mr. Wells' clothes, he returned to the dining-room and there rifled the pockets. Practically all he stole was a wallet containing but a few dollars.

He then proceeded to the room on the second floor, occupied by Mrs. Woodruff. There he found a kimono thrown across a chair. This he donned thinking to deceive the sleeper should she awaken while he remained in the room. He then went through the dresser, but as there were but a few articles of clothing in the drawers he took nothing.

At Proctor's.

This popular amusement house was crowded to the doors last night and the crowd was entertained by the fine quality of vaudeville which is on the bill for this week. The Stocktons, in a clever singing sketch were especially good and worth hearing. They will be here until tomorrow night. Kit Karson with his sharp shorting and Adele Le Blair, the singing comedienne, are also good. The motion pictures are great.

The Proper Pose.

WORK STARTED ON NEW TUBERCULOSIS CAMP

Ground was broken Saturday on the Muhlenberg hospital property for the new pavilion to be erected by the Plainfield Society for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis, and the work of construction will be pushed forward rapidly. William Dutcher, chairman of the building committee, has announced that it is probable that all will be in readiness for the reception of patients in September. Plans for the tuberculosis pavillion were prepared by Architect A. L. C. Marsh.

The society feels much encouraged by the general interest being shown in the local crusade against tuberculosis, but it is said that additional funds are required for both the construction of the building and its maintainance. Subscriptions may be sent to J. P. Murray, 737 Watchung avenue, treasurer of the society.

GOOD COFFEE EXCITES COMMENT

A Special Blend of Coffee Wins Praise for a Hotel, and Patrons Commend It to Others.

Many guests of the Hotel Astor have gone away speaking in the highest terms of the coffee served them there. They claim that it possesses a delicate richness and delicious fragrance that far surpasses any coffee they have ever before tasted.

The original recipe has been secured, and this celebrated coffee is now on the market under the name of Hotel Astor Coffee, with a guarantee that it is identically the same in every respect as the coffee served now and for years at the Hotel Astor, New York, being the coffee that was first blended for the exclusive use of this hotel and which excited so much appreciative comment is now packed for family use in air-tight tins and comes as crisp and fresh as the day it left the roasters.

The celebrated Hotel Astor recipe for perfect brewing is packed in every tin, and it will be noticed that, owing to the superior strength of this coffee, much less per cup is required than of ordinary coffee, which makes a pound go much further.

The absolute perfection of taste is realized whether you buy it in the bean, ground or pulverized.

Hotel Astor Coffee is sold by most good grocers. Get a tin to-day.

If, however, your grocer does not have it, write the importers, H. Fischer & Son, 180 Franklin street, New York City, giving your dealer's name and address, and they will tell you where you can get it.

LITERARY

An important feature of Woman's Home Companion this summer is the Reminiscences of the late venerable Edward Everett Hale. The August issue contains, in place of the regular monthly chapter of the Reminiscences, the publication of which commenced before Doctor Hale's death, a beautiful tribute to the eminent writer and minister by his personal friend W. H. McElroy.

The leading article of the August Century, the Midsummer Holiday Number, is Mr. Richard Watson Gilder's "Grover Cleveland: A Record of Friendship," a sympathetic appreciation of the personality of Mr. Cleveland as revealed in an intimacy of many years. The reminiscences will extend to some three instalments in The Century Magazine. In them Mr. Gilder records a friendship of twenty-one years, extending from the time of the famous tariff message in the first term to the ex-President's death. These papers constitute the most intimate description of Mr. Cleveland's life and character and personal traits—as President and ex-President, at work and at play—that has yet been given to the world. The pictures are new and mainly from amateur sources. One of the pictures in the August number gives the interior of the studio at Marion—with Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson and Mrs. Cleveland and her mother—in which room Mr. Cleveland conducted a sort of moot-court of the most amusing description, "one night in Marion."

The Fiction Number (August) of Scribner's Magazine presents a remarkable list of the best American and English writers—Maurice Hewlett, Edith Wharton, E. W. Hornung, F. Hopkinson Smith, Mary Cholmondeley, Katharine Holland Brown, Thomas Nelson Page, and Margaret Sherwood. These writers are represented by characteristic stories schowing the particular charm that has made them not only popular but highly esteemed for their excellent workmanship. The stories, most of them illustrated, are: "Beckwith's Fairy," by Maurice Hewlett—a fantastic tale of the present day in rural England. "The Debt," by Edith Wharton—another of the "Tales of Men," this one putting in contrast personal loyalty and the scientific spirit.

The Red Book Magazine for August will no doubt be preserved for a longer period than a monthly magazine is, due to the publication in that issue of "The House of Joy that is Gone," an exquisite prose fancy by Richard Le Gallienne.

In the August number of "Success Magazine" begins a series of little comedies of commerce under the title, "New Tales of the Road," by Charles N. Crewdson. In "She Is an Actress," Mabel Taliaferro cries out against the injustice done her profession by calling all behind the footlights "actresses." Mary Heaton Vorse, in an article called "What Women Might Do For Their Towns," points out some duties which every home-loving woman should keep in her heart. "Bror Boll Weevil," by Harry Dickson, is an article which tells of the ruin done cotton and credit by a mere bug.

William J. Locke tells a charming romantic story of a rejuvenated love, entitled "A Moonlight Effect," in the August number of the American Magazine. In addition, Jack London recounts the tragic case of "The Sheriff of "Kona." Stewart Edward White writes about a mystery and a murder in "The Hole in the Cap." Harvey J. O'Higgins tells a story of touching pathos and Irish humor in "His Mother," and Lincoln Colcord contributes his best work in "Anajer," a tale of the fortunes of a man who finds out his love for a woman one day too late.

The August Lippincott's marks the five-hundredth appearance of this interesting monthly magazine. Were satistics available, some interesting ones could be compiled as to the vast quantities of paper and ink used, the stories, the authors, the advertising, and various other features of the magazine's life since its inception. During those forty-odd years much history has been made, and the world has seen many important changes.

another of those remarkable scientific articles by Dr. William Hanna Thomson which in book form have placed him among the popular novelists as a "best seller." This time Dr. Thomas talks of "Indispensable Bacteria," and tells of the bottle of germs that can be ordered by mail, and will do the work of wagon loads of old fertilizer. The article is as with startling truths, and is so simply written that to understand it requires no previous scientific experience.

The August issue of the Atlantic Monthly is a midsummer number distinguished by the publication of a complete novelette entitled "Cecily." The story is by William J. Hopkins, the author of "The Clammer," which was one of the most successful short stories of recent philosophy and humor which characterizes all his work. There are two papers of literary appreciation on "George Meredith" and "Oliver Wendell Holmes."

Absolute Proof.

A writer tells of the sister of Lord Houghton who was frequently annoyed at the guests whom her brother brought to the house.

"Do you remember, my dear," he asked her at dinner one day, "whether that famous scoundrel X was hanged or acquitted?"

"He must have been hanged," she replied, "or you would have had him here to dinner long ago."—Tit-Bits.

Whispering Smith

By Frank H. Spearman

Copyright, 1906, by Chas. Scribner's Sons.

At nightfall the rain had passed and the mist lifted from the river. Above the bluffs rolling patches of cloud obscured the face of the moon, but the distant thunder had ceased, and at midnight the valley near the bridge lay in a stillness broken only by the hoarse calls of the patrols and far-off megaphones. From the bridge camp, which lay on high ground near the grade, the distant lamps of the track-walkers could be seen moving dimly.

Before the camp-fire in front of McCloud's tent a group of men, smoking and talking, sat or lay sprawled on tarpaulins, drying themselves after the long day. Among them were the weather-beaten remnants of the old guard of the mountain-workers, men who had fought the Spider Water with Glover. Bill Dancing, huge, lumbering, awkward as a bear and as shifty, was talking, because with no apparent effort he could talk all night, and was a valuable man at keeping the camp awake. Bill Dancing talked and, after Sinclair's name had been dropped from the roll, ate and drank more than any two men on the division. A little apart, McCloud lay on a leather caboose cushion trying to get a nap.

The man sent to the bridge had turned back, and behind his lantern Dancing heard the tread of horses. He stood at one side of the camp-fire while the visitors rode up; they were women. Dancing stood dumb as they advanced into the firelight. The one ahead spoke: "Mr. Dancing, don't you know me?" As she stopped her horse the light of the fire struck her face. "Why, Mis' Sinclair!"

"Yes, and Miss Dunning is with me," returned Marion. Bill staggered. "This is an awful place to get to; we have been nearly drowned, and we want to see Mr. McCloud."

McCloud, roused by Marion's voice, came forward. "You were asleep," said she as he greeted her. "I am so sorry we have disturbed you!" She looked careworn and a little forlorn, yet but a little considering the struggle she and Dicksie had made to reach the camp.

Light blazed from the camp-fire, where Dicksie stood talking with Dancing about horses.

"They are in desperate straits up at the ranch," Marion went on, when McCloud had assured her of her welcome. "I don't see how they can save it. The river is starting to flow into the old channel and there's a big pond right in the alfalfa fields."

"It will play the deuce with things if it gets through there," mused McCloud. "I wonder how the river is? I've been asleep. O Bill!" he called to Dancing, "what water have you got?"

"Twenty-eight six just now, sir. She's a-rising very, very slow, Mr. McCloud."

"So I am responsible for this invasion," continued Marion, calmly. "I've been up with Dicksie at the ranch; she sent for me. Just think of it—no woman but old Puss within ten miles of the poor child! And they have been trying everywhere to get bags, and you have all the bags, and the men have been buzzing around over there for a week like bumble-bees and doing just about as much good. She and I talked it all over this afternoon, and I told her I was coming over here to see you, and we started out together—and merciful goodness, such a time as we have had!"

"But you started out together; where did you leave her?"

"There she stands the other side of the fire. O Dicksie!"

"Why did you not tell me she was here!" exclaimed McCloud.

Dicksie came into the light as he hastened over. If she was uncertain in manner, he was not. He met her, laughing just enough to relieve the tension of which both for an instant were conscious. She gave him her hand when he put his out, though he felt that it trembled a little. "Such a ride as you have had! Why did you not send me word? I would have come to you!" he exclaimed, throwing reproach into the words.

Dicksie raised her eyes. "I wanted to ask you whether you would sell us some grain sacks, Mr. McCloud, to use at the river, if you could spare them?"

"Sacks? Why, of course, all you want! But how did you ever get here? In all this water, and two lone women! You have been in danger to-night. Indeed you have—don't tell me! And you are both wet; I know it. Your feet must be wet. Come to the fire. O Bill!" he called to Dancing, "what's the matter with your wood? Let us have a fire, won't you?—one worth while; and build another in front of my tent. I can't believe you have ridden here all the way from the ranch, two of you alone!" exclaimed McCloud, hastening boxes up to the fire for seats.

Marion laughed. "Dicksie can go anywhere! I couldn't have ridden from the house to the barns alone."

"Then tell me how you could do it?" demanded McCloud, devouring Dicksie with his eyes.

"But How Did You Ever Get Here?"

Dicksie looked at the fire. "I know all the roads pretty well. We did get lost once," she confessed in a low voice, "but we got out again."

"The roads are all under water, though."

"What time is it, please?"

McCloud looked at his watch. "Two minutes past 12."

Dicksie started. "Past 12? Oh, this is dreadful! We must start right back, Marion. I had no idea we had been five hours coming five miles."

McCloud looked at her, as if still unable to comprehend what she had accomplished in crossing the flooded bottoms. Her eyes fell back to the fire. "What a blaze!" she mumured as the driftwood snapped and roared. "It's fine for to-night, isn't it?"

"I know you both must have been in the water," he insisted, leaning forward in front of Dicksie to feel Marion's skirt.

"I'm not wet!" declared Marion, drawing back.

"Nonsense, you are wet as a rat! Tell me," he asked, looking at Dicksie, "about your trouble up at the bend. I know something about it. Are the men there to-night? Given up, have they? Too bad! Do open your jackets and try to dry yourselves, both of you, and I'll take a look at the river."

"Suppose—I only say suppose—you first take a look at me." The voice came from behind the group at the fire, and the three turned together.

"By heaven, Gordon Smith!" exclaimed McCloud. "Where did you come from?"

Whispering Smith stood in the gloom in patience. "Where do I look as if I had come from? Why don't you ask me whether I'm wet? And won't you introduce me—but this is Miss Dicksie Dunning, I am sure."

Marion with laughter hastened the introduction.

"And you are wet, of course," said McCloud, feeling Smith's shoulder.

"No, only soaked. I have fallen into the river two or three times, and the last time a big rhinoceros of yours down the grade, a section foreman named Klein, was obliging enough to pull me out. Oh, no! I was not looking for you," he ran on, answering McCloud's question; "not when he pulled me out. I was just looking for a farm or a ladder or something. Klein, for a man named Small, is the biggest Dutchman I ever saw. 'Tell me, Klein,' I asked, after he had quit dragging me out—he's a Hanoverian—'where did you get your pull? And how about your height? Did your grandfather serve us a grenadier under old Frederick William and was he kidnaped?' Bill, don't feed my horse for a while. And Klein tried to light a cigar I had just taken from my pocket and given him—fancy! the Germans are a remarkable people—and sat down to tell me his history, when some friend down the line began bawling through a megaphone, and all that poor Klein had time to say was that he had had no supper, nor dinner, nor yet breakfast, and would be obliged for some by the boat he forwarded me in." And, in closing, Whispering Smith looked cheerfully around at Marion, at McCloud, and last and longest of all at Dicksie Dunning.

"Did you come from across the river?" asked Dicksie, adjusting her wet skirt meekly over her knees.

"You are soaking wet," observed Whispering Smith. "Across the river?" she echoed. "Well, hardly, my dear Miss Dunning! Every bridge is out down the valley except the railroad bridge and there are a few things I don't tackle; one is the Crawling Stone on a tear. No, this was across a little break in this man McCloud's track. I came, to be frank, from the Dunning ranch to look up two women who rode away from there at seven o'clock to-night, and I want to say that they gave me the ride of my life," and Whispering Smith looked all around the circle and back again and smiled.

Dicksie spoke in amazement. "How did you know we rode away? You were not at the ranch when we left."

"Oh, don't ask him!" cried Marion.

"He knows everything," explained McCloud.

Whispering Smith turned to Dicksie. "I was interested in knowing that they got safely to their destination—whatever it might be, which was none of my business. I happened to see a man that had seen them start, that was all. You don't understand? Well, if you want it in plain English, I made it my business to see a man who made it his business to see them. It's all very simple, but these people like to make a mystery of it. Good women are scarcer than riches, and more to be prized than fine gold—in my judgment—so I rode after them."

Marion put her hand for a moment on his coat sleeve; he looked at Dicksie with another laugh and spoke to her because he dared not look toward Marion. "Going back to-night, do you say? You never are?"

Dicksie answered quite in earnest: "Oh, but we are. We must!"

"Why did you come, then? It's taken half the night to get here, and will take a night and a half at least to get back."

"We came to ask Mr. McCloud for some grain sacks—you know, they have nothing to work with at the ranch," said Marion; "and he said we might have some and we are to send for them in the morning."

"I see. But we may as well talk plainly." Smith looked at Dicksie. "You are as brave and as game as a girl can be, I know, or you couldn't have done this. Sacks full of sand, with the boys at the ranch to handle them, would do no more good to-morrow at the bend than bladders. The river is flowing into Squaw lake above there now. A hundred men that know the game might check things yet if they're there by daylight. Nobody else, and nothing else on God's earth can."

There was silence before the fire. McCloud broke it: "I can put the 100 men there at daylight, Gordon, if Miss Dunning and her cousin want them," said McCloud.

Marion sprang to her feet. "Oh, will you do that, Mr. McCloud?"

McCloud looked at Dicksie. "If they are wanted."

Dicksie tried to look at the fire. "We have hardly deserved help from Mr. McCloud at the ranch," she said at last.

He put out his hand. "I must object. The first wreck I ever had on this division Miss Dunning rode 20 miles to offer help. Isn't that true? Why, I would walk 100 miles to return the offer to her. Perhaps your cousin would object," he suggested, turning to Dicksie; "but no, I think we can manage that. Now what are we going to do? You two can't go back to-night, that is certain."

"We must."

"Then you will have to go in boats," said Whispering Smith.

"But the hill road?"

"There is five feet of water across it in half a dozen places. I swam my horse through, so I ought to know."

"It is all back-water, of course, Miss Dunning," explained McCloud. "Not dangerous."

"But moist," suggested Whispering Smith, "especially in the dark."

McCloud looked at Marion. "Then let's be sensible," he said. "You and Miss Dunning can have my tent."

"Is this where you stay?" asked Dicksie.

"Four of us sleep in the cots, when we can, and an indefinite number lie on the ground when it rains."

"Which is your bed?"

"I usually sleep there." He pointed to the one on the right.

"I thought so. It has the blanket folded back so neatly, just as if there were sheets under it. I'll bet there aren't any."

"Do you think this is a summer resort? Knisely, my assistant, sleeps there, but of course we are never both in bed at the same time; he's down the river to-night. It's a sort of continuous performance, you know." McCloud looked at Dicksie. "Take off your coat, won't you, please?"

Whispering Smith was trying to drag a chest from the foot of the cot, and Marion stood watching. "What are you trying to do?"

"Get this over to the table for a seat."

"Silly man! why don't you move the table?"

Dicksie was taking off her coat. "How inviting it all is!" she smiled. "And this is where you stay?"

"When it rains," answered McCloud. "Let me have your hat, too."

"My hair is a sight, I know. We rode over rocks and up gullies into the brush—"

"And through lakes—oh, I know! I can't conceive how you ever got here at all. Your hair is all right. This is camp, anyway. But if you want a glass you can have one. Knisely is a great swell; he's just from school, and has no end of things. I'll rob his bag."

"Don't disturb Mr. Knisely's bag for the world!"

"But you are not taking off your hat. You seem to have something on your mind."

"Help me to get it off my mind, will you, please?"

"If you will let me."

"Tell me how to thank you for your generosity. I came all the way over here to-night to ask you, for just the help you have offered, and I could not—it stuck in my throat. But that wasn't what was on my mind. Tell me what you thought when I acted so dreadfully at Marion's."

"I didn't deserve anything better after placing myself in such a fool position. Why don't you ask me what I thought the day you acted so beautifully at Crawling Stone ranch? I thought that the finest thing I ever saw."

"You were not to blame at Marion's."

"I seemed to be, which is just as bad. I am going to start the 'phones going. It's up to me to make good, you know, in about four hours with a lot of men and material. Aren't you going to take off your hat?—and your gloves are soaking wet."

A voice called the superintendent's name through the tent door. "Mr. McCloud?"

"What is it, Bill?"

"Twenty-eight and nine-tenths on the gauge, sir."

"VILLAIN! GIVE MUH THE PAPERS."

The last act of a little melodrama of real life, in which thre was a villain who wouldn't give up "the papers," and two languishing lovers, who couldn't get married without the papers, was played in the City Criminal Court at Elizabeth yesterday. And Judge Mahon, in a judicial way, was the hero who righted the wrongs.

Alois Petrovski was the "villain." As a friend of Rose Adunz, of 120 Court street, he sent to Germany some time ago to get her birth certificate, so that the young woman could marry. But Alois declined to give up the paper to the prospective bride for reasons of his own, and it is whispered that a defeated suitor was the cause of the wedding being held up. Repeated requests and demands were made that Alois turn over the certificate, but this he refused to do. The date set for the wedding passed, but the ceremony was not performed. Rose became disconsolate and upon the advice of friends and her lover she told her story to Judge Mahon.

After hearing the tearful story the judge took pity on the heartbroken girl and sent for Petrovski. Yesterday the man appeared in court. The court advised Alois to turn the certificate over to Rose, which he did.

MAN KILLED BY BASEBALL BURIED.

The funeral of William Kuhlmann, who died from the effects of a blow in the head from a batted ball, was held from his home, 212 Palmer street, Elizabeth, yesterday. Hundreds of persons, friends and acquaintances of the young man, called at the house to pay their respects to his memory.

The Rev. C. G. Fisher, pastor of the German Lutheran church, officiated. The following were the pallbearers: Henry Stapperfenne, City Councilman Owen Farrelly, James Devine, Harry Dill, Charles Ball, and Philip Christ, president of the Pleasure Circle, a club of young men to which Kuhlmann belonged. Interment was made in Evergreen cemetery.

"Dutch" had earned the reputation of a good, honest sport. Those who had dealings with him in life knew him and admired him because he was "always on the square." In his own quiet and humble way Kuhlmann was charitable, too. He gave according to his means, and gave freely and generously. During the years that the orphan asylum had held its train excursion Kuhlmann never once missed accompanying the little inmates to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove.

Brothers Meet After 27 Years.

There was a reunion at Elizabeth Saturday of two brothers who had not seen each other in twenty-seven years. They will remain a week in Elizabeth. Matthew Cooper for many years was in the service of the New Jersey Central Railroad, but is now in business for himself.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS OF GENERAL MEADE.

General Meade called at the executive mansion whilst the cabinet was in session. Most of the members, like myself, had never seen him. Blair and he were classmates at West Point, but they have never met since they graduated until today. He has a sharp visage and a narrow head. Would do better as second in command than as general-in-chief. It doubtless a good officer, but not a great and capable commander. He gave some details of the battle of Gettysburg clearly and fluently. Shows intelligence and activity, and on the whole (I) was as well or better pleased with him than I expected I should be, for I have had unfavorable impressions, prejudiced perhaps, since the escape of Lee. This interview confirms previous impressions of the calibre and capacity of the man. From the diary of Gideon Welles, July Atlantic.

"DO WRITE SOON!"

"There's a little habit," said the hostess, whose last guest had just departed, "that we are prone to fall into. It is but a little thing in itself, and probably not one in ten people would criticise it, but nevertheless it always nettles me when I find myself slipping into it. It is the habit we have of saying to a friend we have entertained 'Now, be sure to write soon.' I don't mean that we ought not to wish to hear before long, but it is the implied suggestion of what is proper to which I object. Of course, a person who has been entertained will consider it her privilege and her pleasure to drop a line as soon as she possibly can, after bidding farewell—a bread and butter note, if you like the expression; I don't. So, you see, it is really conveying a hint of what ought to be done, when a guest is asked to write soon. I always feel like biting my tongue when I have started to make this more or less conventional remark. I believe, as the result of careful thought, that I do not make it so frequently as I once did."

According to well authenticated rumors twelve one-story stores are to be built on Watchung avenue and two of the same dimensions on East Front street this fall. This is on the site of the Durlach property across the street from the Y. M. C. A. building.

Surveying for the work has been commenced and is well under way by Harry C. Van Emburgh. When asked by a Daily Press representative as to whether the stores would be built, he refused to either confirm or deny the report. The building of the stores will extend the business section of the town further eastward.

The pennies bear the profile of Lincoln on one side with the customary "In God We Trust" on them at the top. No other pennies of the United States have this. The reverse side is simple and has a small, but attractive design.

The first youngster in this city to receive the pennies is Ogden Lindzey, son of Jonothan Lindzey, of East Fifth street. The lad who enjoys this novel distinction was at the bank bright and early this morning to get a quarter changed for the coppers.

BASEBALL.

The Plainfield baseball team will play Rahway at Rahway next Saturday afternoon.

There will be three double headers at the American League Park in New York this week. Today, tomorrow and Thursday the Yankees will entertain McAleer's St. Louis Browns and as this team has always been a stiff proposition for the Highlanders there is all likelihood of some hard games.

Owing to the funeral of former president of the National League Pullfam yesterday, there were no games played in any of the four big leagues. But there will be a bunch of double events played to make up for the lost time.

HAND BOY COMES HOME

Mother's Illness Brings Temporary Freedom for Young Culprit.

THROUGH JUDGE W. N. RUNYON.

Probation Officer Irwin's Appeal Not Only Ends Jail Imprisonment But Brings Release.

Because of the extreme nervous condition of Mrs. Thomas Hand, mother of fifteen-year-old William Hand, who was committed to the County jail about a week ago in default of $100 bail for stealing a candy vending machine, City Judge Runyon has granted the boy's release that he may come home and be with his mother until he is arraigned before the Juvenile Court at Elizabeth in the fall. The boy's freedom was secured today, through Acting County Probation Officer Charles W. Irwin, of Elizabeth.

The probation officer applied to City Judge Runyon for the youthful prisoner's release today, urging that Hand, with Elmer White, colored, of Rahway, who is imprisoned on a larceny charge, might be removed from the County jail and committed to a home for boys, pending their appearance before the Juvenile Court. City Judge Runyon consulted with Thomas Hand, the local boy's father, about the matter, and learned that Mrs. Hand's condition is serious. She is on the verge of nervous prostration, brought on by brooding over her son's act, and a physician is in attendance.

Having learned of her precarious condition, the Judge, who had already sent word to the probation officer, granting permission for young Hand's release, telephoned to Elizabeth and ordered the boy to this city. He arrived this afternoon with Mr. Irwin, and is now free to stay at his home until his hearing before the Juvenile court.

Hand, in company with Milton Shoemaker, ten years old, were caught by William Lane on Park avenue Monday night, June 28, as the pair were about to make off with a chocolate vending machine wrenched from the front of C. L. Thorn's store. The Shoemaker boy was released on his parents' recognizance to await the action of the Juvenile court, but Hand, who has a police court record, was remanded to the County jail in default of $100 bail, imposed by City Judge Runyon.

It is said that young Hand is the leader of a gang of boys who have their headquarters in a secret cave on the shores of the brick yard pond in the East End. A search of the cave by the police revealed no other other booty.

SERVICES AT NETHERWOOD CAMP LAST NIGHT.

A good sized delegation from the Scotch Plains Baptist church Young Peoples' Society reached Netherwood Camp last night and conducted an interesting and helpful service. Scripture verses, Bible stories, and Bible characters were given by the children showing the remarkable memory of some of these children. Yesterday Miss Curry brought another large company of children from New York with her, having taken a number back in the morning. The work is speeding on, and is proving the best season the Camp has known in years.

Friday evening of this week, the Young Peoples' Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will conduct the service with the assistance of George E. Hall at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp. This society has long been one of the best friends of the Camp, co-operating with Miss Curry in all the interests of the Camp. All are welcome.

Successful Drug Clerk.

Roy Adams, assistant clerk for C. H. About a month ago he passed the New York Board. He is the only Plainfielder among several who took the examination who succeeded in passing. He will remain with C. H. Hall for the present.

Liquor Loosened His Tongue.

Henry Cordes, whose home is in Rahway, developed a vile line of conversation after taking lots of drink yesterday, and was arrested at North and Watchung avenues by Patrolman Myers, for using language unsuitable for a public place. SETTLE WITH STOCKHOLDERS.

Old Firm's Books Show the Liabilities to Be $388,907.50 and the Assets to Be $449,298.28.

In the matter of the settlement of the affairs of the Manganese Steel Safe Company, which has been in litigation for a long time, it is now reported that the Taylor Iron & Steel Company, of High Bridge, the directors of which have also been financially interested in the local concern, have arranged to take over the plant in this city and pay $40,000 over and above the liabilities to the stockholders. This action is on the suit of Henry D. Hibbard against the company on dissolution proceedings in which the directors were appointed trustees to wind up the affairs of the company.

The company was dissolved and trustees are now closing out the assets. The liabilities are stated to be $388,907.50, besides which there are three suits which the Taylor Iron assume. One of these it is said, will assume. neO of these is that of the Norris Safe & Lock Company, in the United States Circuit Court for the Western Division of Washington, to recover $159,916.26.

The assets according to the inventory filed amount to $449,298.28. The Manganese Steel & Safe Company owe the Taylor Iron & Steel Company $300,648.98, and it can be seen that the report that the High Bridge concern is quite likely to be true.

In the suit of the Rodmans against the Manganese Steel & Safe Company, the complainants sought to prevent the company from selling the business to the Mosler Safe Company, of Hamilton, Ohio, and in this they succeeded. The Taylor Iron & Steel Company have the exclusive right to the use of manganese steel and no doubt the local plant will continue to be operated after the settlement of affairs.

The case of Joseph Schwartzman, of West Third street, whose wife brought charges of assault and battery against him before City Judge Runyon a week ago, was settled in court this morning, when Mrs. Schwartzman refused to press the charge, and petitioned the court that her husband take his belongings out of the house and leave her and her child alone, to support themselves. The court ruled according to Mrs. Schwartzman's request, and the man and wife have separated.

PLAINFIELD IS HEALTHY

DEATHS SAME AS JULY, 1908.

New Regulations for Milk Production Read—Licenses Granted—Application Tabled.

This city has reason to congratulate itself on its healthy condition as according to the report of the Board of Health there has been a minimum of deaths and very few from communicable diseases. This is due in a large measure to the activity of the members of the board who have carefully safeguarded the city's health and isolated whatever of possible contagion has existed.

During the month of July there were but twelve cases of communicable diseases, as follows: Scarlet fever, 4; diphtheria, 2; tuberculosis, 1; measles, 2; and chicken pox, 3. Two of the scarlet fever cases are at the isolation ward of Muhlenberg hospital. The report of the board shows the following vital statistics for the month: Marriages, 17; births, 36; still births, 2; deaths, 23. Singularly enough the number of deaths are the same as reported for the same month a year ago, while the marriages were only eight as compared with seventeen this year. Last year's births exceeded this year's by five.

In July, 1908, the communicable diseases were less than for the month just passed. There were but five cases reported then, three being tuberculosis, one scarlet fever and one chicken pox. In other respects the reports for the two years are very similar.

During July seventy-five samples of milk, thirty samples of cream, twenty samples of ice cream and fifteen samples of cream used in the manufacture of ice cream were collected and analyzed in the board's laboratory. Samples of milk were also taken from all the stores in which the fluid is dispensed in addition to the samples taken from the regular dealers.

The work of analyzing the ice cream made in the city was begun during the month and will be continued until the product of all the manufacturers has been tested. Forty-three dairies and bottling places were inspected during the month and the general condition was found to be good.

A map showing the ponds in and about Plainfield was submitted and it is the intention of the board to take steps to have many of them drained and filled in as they are breeding places for mosquitoes. Permits were granted to F. T. Ostrom to sell ice, John G. Staats and Frank M. Smalley to sell milk, and the bond submitted by J. J. Heideloff was ordered filed. The application of Joseph Zgrzbacy, for a permit to collect garbage, was laid on the table.

Plumbing inspections were made to the number of ninety-eight and the number of general inspections were three hundred and sixty-nine.

New rules and regulations regarding the production and transportation of milk passed the first reading last night. Those present at the meeting were Drs. Hedges and Davis and Messrs. Dunham and Dunn.

CAPT. AND MRS. HUMPHREY WILL GO TO MANILA.

Prior to leaving for Denver, Col., today, where she will join her husband, Captain Chauncey Huhphrey, there was a family gathering last night at the home of Mrs. Humphrey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Waring, on Park avenue. Mrs. Humphrey has been visiting her parents for several months, her husband also being here for a time. Recently he left for Ft. Logan, Denver, where he is stationed as quartermaster of the 21st U. S. Infantry.

On September 6, Captain and Mrs. Humphrey will sail for the Philippines, where the captain will be stationed about 700 miles from Manila. They will be in the islands for two years at least, unless something should intervene.

Enjoy Dinner-Dances.

While a majority of the members of the Plainfield Country Club are away on their vacations, there are still a number at home who enjoy the privilege of playing on the course, and especially the Saturday night dinner-dances. The plan to continue the Saturday night affairs has served to boom the club and new members are constantly being elected.

FUNERAL OF E. E. WHITE; FAMILY TO STAY HERE

The funeral of Edward E. White took place this morning at the undertaking parlors of A. M. Runyon & Son, at 10 o'clock, Rev. Ora J. Shoop officiating. The pall bearers were W. A. Coddington, John J. Kenney, A. E. Force, M. C. Van Arsdale, E. H. Bird, J. A. Staats, Judge William N. Runyon and ex-Mayor Newton B. Smalley. The interment was in Hillside cemetery.

Among the friends of the family who were present and accompanied the body to its last resting place were Colby Barcalow, of Trenton; Mrs. L. H. Demarest, of Somerville; Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Schley, of Maplewood; Mrs. C. Barcalow, of Somerville, and J. H. Semel, of New York city.

Young Mr. White when seen this morning said that the reports regarding financial reverses due to unwise speculation indulged in by his father were unqualifiedly false. The only cause known to the family for taking his own life was illness. His relations were of a happy character and no trouble than insomnia was known to have existed. Mrs. White and her son will remain in Plainfield for the present, or at least until the will of the late Mr. White is probated.

ELKS' PARTY GIVEN A BIG RECEPTION

A party of twenty-five Elks of this city journeyed to South Plainfield last evening to meet the eighteen delegates from this city who have been at the annual convention of Elks in Los Angeles. When the party got to South Plainfield they learned that the train on which the delegates were riding would not arrive until very late. Hence, rather than wait at the depot, the Plainfielders went to New Brunswick, where they paid a fraternal visit to the lodge there.

At New Brunswick they spent the time in an informal social manner, partaking of the hospitality of the Middlesex county Elks. At about 1 o'clock this morning the party went back to South Plainfield by automobile where shortly afterward the train with the delegates pulled in.

The cordial Elk greeting was then extended all around and fireworks helped to make the event more fraternal. These were displayed for several minutes. Red fire helped out the display. The party returned to their homes in this city.

IRON WORKER MEETS WITH SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Charles Noble, aged 42 years, of Dunellen, employed by Levering & Garrigues at their iron works at West Dunellen, fell from the top of a derrick in the yards this afternoon, a distance of twenty feet, landing on a pile of scrap iron, a piece of which pierced his side. He also broke three fingers on his hand. He was found by fellow-employes and removed to his home in a critical condition. He is now under the care of Dr. Platt, of Dunellen, who was summoned.

Noble, who has been employed at the iron works for many years, was engaged in taking care of a pile of scrap iron in the yards. His work necessitated that he climb a derrick. In making a turn his feet slipped and he fell sideways with great force on the heavy iron. Noble is married and has always been a steady faithful workman.

JACKSON OUT ON BAIL

Former Mayor Newton B. Smalley was the bondsman for William Jackson, the negro who was remanded to the county jail at Elizabeth last Friday for an atrocious assault upon Patrolman Tobias W. Nolan, on Richmond street, on Tuesday last. The bail furnished was $3,000, for efforts to have it reduced were thwarted by Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., who would not consent to reduction because the charge is a serious one. The prisoner, whose home is on East Third street, was freed last night at 6 o'clock. William G. De Meza represents Jackson.

GREEK NAVY ASSISTED

SPYROS MATSOUKAS GETS $300.

Peculiar Ceremony at East Bound Station—Twenty Greeks Kissed by Emissary.

Spyros Matsoukas, an emissary from the Grecian government, who is in this country collecting funds for the upbuilding of the Greek navy, arrived in Plainfield yesterday afternoon, and before he left had depleted the bank accounts of the twenty wealthy Greeks in this city by about three hundred good United States dollars. This amount was subscribed by the local Helenic patriots in an incredibly short time.

Mr. Matsoukas is of a pleasing personality and had no difficulty in enlisting the sympathy of his fellow patraits in the scheme to help the mother country. He has been in the United States but twelve days and in that time has aggregated a fund of over $20,000, which is being forwarded to Greece today.

The east bound station was the scene of a peculiarly Athenian ceremony at 6:45 last evening, when Mr. Matsoukas took his departrue for New York. He made a speech to his compatroits who had accompanied him to the train and at its finish kissed eac hone of compatrots goodby. It is said that Mr. Matsoukas has performed this customary and characteristic obligation no less than a thousand times during his visit to this country.

This seeker after funds for the Greek navy has visited all the Jersey towns east of Philadelphia and after today will go through Pennsylvania, where a large amount of money is awaiting him.

SALVATION ARMY CHILDREN'S OUTING.

A large number of children and mothers enjoyed an outing in the country yesterday in the care of the local Corps of the Salvation Army. The farm of Thomas Mair, on Leland avenue, was the spot chosen for the expedition. The beautiful weather and the pleasant country combined to make an ideal day.

All kinds of amusements were afforded the children; games of football, baseball, races, for which suitable prizes were awarded; swings for the children and swimming for the boys. Ice cream and cake were served twice in great plenty, and also lemonade. No accidents occurred and all returned safely at 5:30 o'clock on the trolley after a very happy and pleasant day.

REVOLVER WAS NO GOOD

Edward Conger Arrested in Newark—Taken to Hospital Injured.

BOLD ATTACK FRUSTRATED.

Edward Conger, who gave his address to the Newark authorities as 435 West Second street, this city, is held a prisoner in St. Michael's Hospital for an attempted hold up on a confectioner near Rahway. He was arrested in company of another youth while driving through Newark and it was on account of wounds on his head that he was removed to the hospital.

According to reports received here this afternoon Conger attempted to hold up Henry Schulties, proprietor of a road-house just outside of Rahway, at the point of a revolver. Schulties resisted and succeeded in snatching the gun from the would-be hold-up man and in giving him the beating which necessitated his removal to the hospital.

Schulties says that the young man entered his store and demanded the cash from the register, but that he declined to fork over the money and defied the robber to shoot. His point of view appears to have been the right one as the gun when examined proved to be useless as well as unloaded. The beating Conger received will detain him in the hospital for some days.

GUION H. FOUNTAIN WILL TRAMP ACROSS THE COUNTRY.

Guion H. Fountain, of West Seventh street, who took some long walks to the Jersey Coast last summer, is planning to repeat the feats again this summer. Next week he plans to go down to Asbury Park on a local Sunday school excursion, stay over night there, and in the morning return to this city on foot. The trip is fifty eight miles long, and according to Fountain who has been over it several times, is delightful.

Last year Fountain made his trips to different parts of the State in company with friends. This year interest in pedestrianism is somewhat slack, and it is likely that he will have to go alone.

E. W. Westcott's Father Ill.

E. W. Westcott, of East Front street, who returned this morning with the Elks from Los Angeles, went immediately to Philadelphia to see his father who is reported to be critically ill.

TO MAKE TYGARD ENGINES

CAPITAL STOCK IS $250,000.

J. W. Tygard Has Patent on Seven Engines and Gears and Shops May Be Built Here.

Articles for the incorporation of The Tygard Engine, to manufacture engines and gear transmissions invented by James Tygard, of 920 South avenue, were filed at the County Clerk's office, Elizabeth, yesterday. The incorporators are Fred C. Tygard, Guy M. Neagley and William E. Buhl, of Pittsburg; Elizabeth A. Tygard and Asa F. Randolph, who is named as statutory agent of the company.

"The Tygard Engine" is a chartered, profit-sharing corporation organized to manufacture and sell a new type of engine for all power purposes, for which patents have been granted in this country and in Europe. The new engine is applicable to the use of gasoline, gas, alcohol, compressed air and steam, and is claimed to be the lightest, simplest most compact and noiseless engine on the market, capable of operation at a low cost.

Because of its lightnes and compactness, the motor, which is made in sizes of from 5 to 5,000 horsepower, is forecasted by prominent mechanical engineers to be of great value for airships and aeroplanes, and points of superiority are claimed for its use in driving automobiles, motor boats and steamships, and for use in all power plants and for agricultural purposes.

The company owns and controls the entire rights on seven patents secured for inventions by the Plainfielder. These are on the Tygard double action, four cycle gas and gasoline engine; the continuous action four cycle rotary gas and gasoline engine; the positive expansion reversible rotary gas and gasoline engine; an automobile transmission, known as the "Variable Diameter Wheel;" speed changing gear for bicycles and horseless vehicles; a new system of carburetor for gasoline engines, granted on vibrative atomizers, and a rotary internal combustion engine. These various types of engines are being made at a small shop built at Mr. Tygard's home on South avenue.

Seen at his office at the Babcock building by a Daily Press reporter today, Asa F. Randolph, one of the incorporators, said that the company has as yet no plans for the location of a factory for the manufacture of the various types of engines, but added that steps for securing property and constructing a factory are under consideration, and hinted that the plant might be started in this city.

Mr. Tygard, who has been perfecting his patents in this city for years past, gave a demonstration of one of his engines at the Carnegie Technical School, Pittsburgh in June and the interest of several prominent engineers, among them the Pittsburgh incorporators, was aroused by the new invention. Experts claim that the engine will revolutionize the world of power, and say that the type is especially adaptable for use in airships and aeroplanes.

INVESTIGATING WARREN TOWNSHIP AFFAIRS.

An examination of the affairs of Warren township is being conducted today at the office of Hugh Gaston, of Somerville, who has been appointed by Justice Parker, of the Supreme Court, to investigate charges of a misappropriation of funds in the township. County funds to the amount of about $2,600, it is said, have been misappropriated.

Mr. Gaston, the examiner, said today that it is probable that the proceedings will last for nearly two weeks, at the end of which time he will make his report to Justice Parker. A number of persons in Warren township have been subpoenaed to appear before Mr. Gaston for examination.

FEIGN ILLNESS TRYING MILITARY PRISON ESCAPE.

At the sick call Monday three of the military prisoners in the prison camp, at Sandy Hook, complained of feeling unwell. Their names were entered on the sick report and a guard was directed to take them to the hospital at Fort Hancock, about half a mile away, for a doctor's examination.

When near the bridge that spans a small creek about 200 yards below the hospital, the prisoner carrying the sick record dropped the book in which the records are kept and the others bent over and watched him as he was in the act of picking it up. As the guard, who was walking behind them, came up they turned on him and one of them snatched his rifle out of his hand and aimed it at him. The rifle was locked and would not respond to the trigger. The guard had quickly drawn his short bayonet, and he attacked the prisoners with it, giving the one with the gun several severe jabs in the arm. He recovered the rifle and then marched the three prisoners back to the camp.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

"Paid in Full" at the Astor Theatre in New York last Monday night repeated the brilliant success into which it leaped on that same stage, when two seasons ago the Eugene Walter play had its first production. The triumph "Paid in Full" won at the outset was the dramatic sensation of the time, and the play has gained in popularity to the present, as was demonstrated by the enthusiastic audience that packed the Astor at the reopening of the special two weeks' engagement Monday night. This return of "Paid in Full," to the birthplace of its exceptional career is a notable event, which has awakened liveliest public interest. The Wagenhals & Kemper Company has given especial attention to the production, and has assembled the greatest cast that has ever been seen in this the most celebrated play of the time. Fritz Williams as Joe Brooks, gave an ideal portrayal of this noted character, and it will stand as his most effective work and add distinctly to the fame of this talented actor. Katherine Florence as Emma Brooks was absolutely true in character. Never has this gifted actress scored so effectively as in "Paid in Full." The other parts were in the hands of players who and made New York hits in them. William Riley Hatch was Capt. Williams, Ben F. Wilson was Jimsey Smith, Florence Robinson was Mrs. Harris, Pauline Darling was Beth Harris, and George Belden was Sato. The special engagement is for only a fortnight, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday. Everybody should see this great play with this great cast.

Rev. James M. Whiton, of New York, brother of John M. Whiton, of this city, will preach at the Congregational church on Sunday.

There will be no preaching service at the First Baptist church on Sunday, but the Sunday-school session will be held at the usual morning hour.

The First Baptist church which has been closed for services for two weeks is undergoing a thorough cleaning. Some minor repairs are also being made.

Rochester, which is leading in the Eastern League, has identically the same percentage that Providence, the then leaders had at the same time last year—.590. In games won and lost there is a difference of but thirteen games between the leaders and tailenders, Rochester and Jersey City. A remarkable condition which shows how evenly matched are the teams of the Eastern League.

John Releigh, pitcher on the Vernon team of the Pacific Coast League, has been sold to the St. Louis Nationals. He has been in professional baseball only a month, but during that time has shown a remarkabe pitching ability. He is but nineteen years old.

Ned Jefferson, who played first base at Yale this year, is said to have decided to enter professional baseball and accepted terms with the Johnstown club of the Tri-State League. He will join the club in a few days. Jefferson is a native of Dennisville, this State. He was graduated at Yale this year.

Frank Farrell, of the Marion, O., State League team, was sold yesterday to the New York Americans for $2,500. Charles A. Comiskey, president of the Chicago White Sox, was also after Farrell, but was outbid. Pittsburg, Kansas City and Cincinnati were also after the player. Farrell is batting .323 and is the only .300 hitter in the Ohio State League. The scout who purchased him saw "Red," as he is known, break up a game in the twelfth inning with a drive to the fence.

GOLF.

After the usual midsummer lull in the open tournaments there will be a return to competitive activity this week in the annual invitation tournament of the Shinnecock Hills Golf Club, Friday and Saturday. The Southampton season is now at its height, and numbered among the cottage colony are scores of golfers more or less prominent. As a general thing Walter J. Travis, the Metropolitan champion, accepts an invitation to play there, and it is a matter of record that the Garden City expert has accounted for the chief trophy oftener than any other individual.

A feature of the Shinnecock affair is that it is practically a two days' tournament. Contestants start with an eighteen-hole qualifying round on tomorrow morning, and in accordance with the conditions classify themselves into eights. This brings the tournament proper to a close on Friday evening, although most of those on hand remain for the thirty-six hole handicap on Saturday. Since the amateurs competed there a year ago a number of traps have been added, so that as a scoring proposition the course is slightly more difficult than formerly.

A competition of minor importance is the eastern tournament of the National Freight Traffic Golf Association to be held at Far Hills this week. The affair will start with an eighteen-hole qualification round, the best sixteen to qualify for the Donnalley memorial trophy, emblematic of the championship. Coincident with this round will be a handicap against bogie.

Match play for the chief trophy will be in order today, the first round in the morning and the second round in the afternoon. There will also be a beaten eight division. On this day the program also calls for an eighteen-hole handicap. On Thursday the semi-final and final match rounds will be decided. There will also be an extra handicap event for members who have never covered an eighteen-hole course in less than one hundred strokes.

In a trifle more than a month's time golfers the country over will be working their way toward the links of the Chicago Golf Club for the amateur championship tournament, September 6 to 11. This competition is open to all persons belonging to clubs which are members of the United States Golf Association and to those foreigners visiting this country who may be invited by the executive committee of the association.

SAVED FROM SUICIDE IS NOW BRIDE OF RESCUER.

Edward Sweeney, the seventeen-year-old son of Expressman Charles Sweeney, of Atlantic Highlands, and Freda Noah, of West Farms, New York, were married Monday night by Rev. J. H. Schaeffer, pastor of the Presbyterian church. The marriage is the culmination of a romance that began with an attempt at suicide by the bride some time ago.

On June 20 Mr. Sweeney and Miss Noah went to Highland Beach for a trolley ride. They occupied seats on the Boardwalk there. Upon their decision to return home the girl made a leap for the railing along the Boardwalk alongside old ocean, drinking something from a bottle at the same time.

The young man caught her just as she was throwing herself into the waves. In spite of her struggles he succeeded in getting her into a hack and taking her to a nearby drug store, where it was learned she had swallowed iodine. She was then brought here and put in the lock-up over night and next day taken to Freehold, where physicians examined her as to her sanity. Despondency was said to be the cause of her act. She was soon released. The young couple are living with the bridegroom's parents.

Indignant Over Justice's Parole.

There is surprise and indignation in Trenton over the action of the Court of Pardons in granting a parole to Arthur Barlow, a former Trenton justice of the peace, who was sentenced by Judge Rellstab to five years for extortion. In sentencing him Judge Rellstab scored Barlow severely for taking advantage of his position to mulct money from ignorant and unsuspecting persons. He had been in jail nine months.

Judge Rellstab Back from Europe.

United States District Judge John Rellstab arrived in Trenton Monday night from Europe, looking the picture of health, and ready for a season of hard work. Judge Rellstab sailed for Europe on June 9 and has since been in Holland, Germany and in Switzerland. He traveled for rest and pleasure.

EDITORIAL ASSOCIATION CLAM BAKE AUGUST 30

The New Jersey Editorial Association has decided to hold its annual clam bake at Pleasure Bay this year and invitations have been issued for the event. This decision was reached at the recent meeting of the association held at Lake Minnewaska. In the circular announcing the event the committee says "Those who have been there (Price's) do not need to be sold of the greatness of the spread, and those who have not should be on hand this year to learn what the real thing is in clam bakes."

At this bake there will be an opportunity for newspaper men who are not members of the association to join. The plan is to meet at Price's Hotel at 12 o'clock sharp on August 30, and hold a business meeting of one hour at which time reports will be read and a general discussion of topics of interest to the members of the fraternity will take place. The clam bake will take place at 1 o'clock. It is expected that more than two hundred members of the association will attend.

PLAN BIG TIME ON DEMOCRATIC OUTING.

Arrangements are about completed for the fourteenth annual outing of the Democratic City Committee, which will be held on Wednesday, August 18. The Iron steamboat Sirius has been chartered for the occasion and the destination of the excursion will be Witzel's Point View Grove, L. I.

The committee in charge is planning for 1,500 persons this year. Last year there were 1,200 persons on the boat. A brass band of twenty-five pieces has been engaged.

Upon the arrival of the excursion at the grove the Democrats will march to the grandstand and have their pictures taken in a group. After dinner there will be political talk, games and other amusements. Hugh F. Boyle, who has been intrusted with the athletic part of the day's offering, promises a lot of fun in the way of potato races and fat men's races.

The boat will leave the city dock, Elizabethport, at 9 o'clock. On the return trip, which will begin at 6 o'clock, the boat will lie off Coney Island, to give the excursionists an opportunity to view the electrical display over the water.

HOWELL NOT ALLOWED TO LEAVE WASHINGTON.

Five Representatives were victims of a rude shock Monday night when they were "held up" at the Union Station, Washington, by the sergeant at arms of the House and compelled to remain in the city until a vote is taken in the Senate on the tariff bill. They are: Howell, of New Jersey; Denby, of Michigan; Ashbrook, of Ohio; Kelliher, of Massachusetts, and Cassidy, of Ohio.

The Representatives had purchased their tickets and were about to board an outgoing train for their homes when the officer of the House stepped up and spoiled their plans. Countless excuses were offered, but the officer was firm.

When the House adopted the conference report on Saturday members began to flock away from Washington and Representative Dwight, the Republican "whip," is having a difficult time holding enough of them to transact public business. He sent telegrams far and wide last night urging the absent members to return.

SEEKS TO ENJOIN AN UNAPPROVED SEWER.

Attorney-General Wilson, acting for the State Board of Health, has filed a bill in the Court of Chancery, Trenton, for an injunction to restrain the Bettlewood Land Company, a New Jersey corporation, from using a sewer system built on its property in the borough of Oaklyn, Camden county.

The State Board of Health claims that the system of sewers was built without its approval. It is averred also that the sewage from the houses connected with the sewers pollutes the waters of Newton creek.

NEW GRAY JEWELRY.

After lying dormant for more than half a century the fancy for silver jewelry is reviving. The metal has had a classic association ever since the ancients consecrated it to Diana.

A custom prevailing even to this day in some provinces of France permits maidens only to adorn themselves with silver jewelry, but outside these provinces old and young, matron and maid, may wear the artistic ornaments that are being created. Designs and prices are alike inviting.

The latest idea in silver jewlry consists of the combination of gems with hand engraving in French gray finish. Amethysts are the stones par excellence. The blending of sofe gray and liquid purple is delightful.

Other stones used are topaz, lapis lazuli, turquoise matrix, tourmalines—especially pink—and pearls. Lapis lazuli is enjoying a vogue. Enamel is also used to advantage.

Gray jewelry has been developed in Paris to wear with the prevailing gray fabrics. While it looks particularly chic with gray, says Harper's Bazar, this jewelry can be worn with any color. Care should then be taken to have stones and fabric of like hue. The stones give color, but it is possible to be a study in gray even then. Gray agate cut en cabochon or moss agate of a grayish cast should be selected.

Such subdued effects are refreshing after the brilliancy and imposing nature of many recent ornaments. Necklaces are none the less handsome because inconspicuous. The stones are lapis lazuli, while the enamel is of the same shade making a pleasing harmony.

Buckles with delicate traceries of handwork are in perfect accord with the frock. An engraved monogram is sometimes the only decoration on these buckles. There is a directoire element about most brooches in their several dangling pendants. Some are quite four inches long; others have little blinking drops that nod with the slightest movement. Oval and button shaped brooches and other conventional forms, will be worn.

Shirtwaist finger rings are invariably brought out in dull silver. The settings, either oxidized or grayer over, are hand wrought and are skillful in conception and workmanship. Blister and button pearls and various semi-precious stones are mounted in this way.

There is a difference between the French gray and the oxidized silver. The latter is dull with dark mottlings. French gray is an even shimmering gray color with neither high lights nod dark shadows ,a sort of silver stain.

Fillgree work is again appearing. The wonderful Parisian lace jewelry is finding its counterpart in rhinestones and silver. The turnover lace collar gives an idea of the filmy nature of these laces for the neck. It is riveted to a wide black velvet ribbon. Touches of black are much used by means of lether ribbon or jet.

Silver and steel jewelry is a novelty. The fad dates back to the eighteenth century fashions, whose earmarks are seen in many present styles. Buckles for belts, slippers or garters look extremely well in this combination. When set with stones the tiny points of steel closely resemble rhinestones. Without discounting the beauty of the new silver jewelry, it can be affirmed that all silver ornaments are in good form, even though they be heirlooms.

A TAM-O'-SHANTER.

The tam-o'-shanter is always in good style for the small child, and it is so often necessary to make instead of buying it for the very reason that it may be desirable to have it of material to match the coat. This is one of the hats that may be made by rule and measurement instead of pattern. Linen and pique, white serge or colored broadcloth are all likely materials for either Joseph or Josephine, and the following sizes will work out to a nicety if directions are followed: Cut two disks, one sixteen inches in diameter and one fourteen. This sounds large, but is intended to be so, because all of the patterns provided for this style of hat are undesirably small. For either the boy with bobbed hair or the charming little girl with fascinating hanging looks the huge "tam" is most picturesque.

In the fourteen-inch disk cut a circular central opening five and a half inches in diameter, which will fit any ordinary child. Now seam together the two disks, holding in the extra fullness of the larger disk after dividing that fullness evenly when tacking the quarter sections together. After this seam is sewed by machine press it open and stitch it on each side with a row of tailored stitching. Now bind the opening with a bias piece, which will more conveniently conform to the shape of the head than a stiff band. This hat may also be made of upholsterer's felt, and if white be chosen fuller's earth may be depended upon to clean it.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF ORGANISTS CONVENES.

The second annual meeting of the national convention of organists convened in the Ocea Grove Auditorium yesterday and will continue for the next ten days. The association will hold business sessions each day and there will be music every evening. Will C. Macfarlane, official organist of this resort, is the presiding officer, and Tali Esen Morgan, musical director of the Auditorium, is honorary president and founder of the organization.

David Bispham, baritone, will give a recital at the Auditorium this evening in connection with the convention, and tomorrow evening a piano recital by Signor G. Aldo Randegger, assisted by Miss Helen von Sayn, will be given.

One of the musical treats to be given in the way of singing at the Auditorium will take place Saturday night, when "The Elijah" oratorio will be rendered by a chorus of 700 voices, assisted by the Ocean Grove Orchestra and a quartet consisting of Caroline Mihr-Hardy, Mrs. Bishpam, Adah Hussey and Reed Miller.

The latest announcement from the Auditorium is that Mme. Rosa Olitzka, a member of the Boston Opera Company, has signified her intention of singing here later in the season. She is a contralto.

NEW LINCOLN PENNIES SAID TO BE FAULTY.

The new Lincoln cent has been only one day in circulation and already it is declared that a serious blunder was made by the mint authorities and that a new die may have to be made to eliminate the objectionable feature. This will in all probability make the coins which have already been placed in circulation of value above their face.

The objectionable feature is that the initials of the designer, Victor D. Brenner of New York, appear on the coin in minute raised letters. It is asserted by those who know that the initials have no legal right there. The initials are close to the edge of the coin on the reverse side below the sheafs of wheat.

Although very small they can be seen with the naked eye when one's attention is directed to them. The attention of the Director of the Mint will be called to the matter today by coin collectors and he will be asked to rule upon it.

At Proctor's.

The fine show at Proctor's theatre attracted another capacity audience last night. The two sketches are great as fun-producers, while Kit Karson displays unusually ability as a sharp-shooter. The life motion pictures are especially noteworthy, being the best produced in this or any other country. There will be an entire change of bill tomorrow for the balance of the week.

She Declines.

"He keeps telling me that his heart is shattered."

"Maybe he expects you to put it together again."

VACATIONS FOR NEW YORK WORKING GIRLS.

The most striking fact in a study of vacation resources for New York working girls is, of course, the inadequacy of the accommodations in respect to the number of working women who, by the census of 1900, numbered 367,437. Of these, 294,828 are classified as single, and 261,081 fall between the ages of 10 and 35. Nine years have surely worked a vast change and swollen the ranks of the army of working girls; but nevertheless a comparison of ither of these figures with that of the 6,874 girls for whom the clubs, settlements, churches and stores of New York provide vacations during the summer is, to say the least, disheartening. A trifle over 2½ per cent. are provided for. It is safe to assume that if the number of working girls in 1909 was known this percentage would shrink from 2½ per cent. to 2 or even 1½ per cent. Of course this represents only organized and official effort. It is impossible to take into account the number of girls who are able and willing to pay for a summer vacation or those who are benefited by individual acts of kindness, the isolated cases where a generous employer or philanthropic patron may select one or more girls for a vacation in the country.—From the July Survey.

DUNELLEN PUPILS TO BE TAUGHT TO SING

Dunellen will inaugurate a course of musical instruction in its schools this fall, following the recommendation of County Superintendent H. Brewster Willis. An instructor whose home is in New Brunswick has been engaged to teach music in the Dunellen schools and he will act as supervising instructor, as well as serving as a class teacher periodically, as is done in the schools of Plainfield and other cities.

The course in the Dunellen schools will include the element of music, such as every boy and girl should know, and will be a preparation for Dunellen pupils who go to the Plainfield High School to pursue the advanced course in music here.

Charles Clark was engaged by the Dunellen school board as janitor at a salary of $59.75 per month. The other business transacted was of a routine nature.

Of Course.

"What was the best job you ever did?" inquired the first barber.

"I once shaved a man," replied the second barber.

"Go on."

"Then I persuaded him to have a haircut, shampoo, facial massage, singe, seafoam, electric buzz, tar spray and tonic rub."

"What then?"

"By that time he needed another shave."—Washington Herald.

The Usual Question.

Over in Italy an artisan claims to have made a clock that will run a hundred years without winding.

And very likely the future owner will look up at the clock face on the morning of the 101st year and yell: "Well, ding burn it all, why didn't somebody in this family of feather-headed idiots remind me to wind that derned clock."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

December 1, 1870.

We have received a specimen number of "The Major & Knapp Illustrated Monthly," published at 71 Broadway, N. Y. It is one of the handsomest illustrated monthlies we have seen for some time, artistically and typographically, and is well worth the price of subscription, $2 per year.

The main building of the Singer Sewing Machine Manufactory, at Elizabeth, which is to be built shortly, will have 1,000 feet front and the wings will extend 3,000 feet. There will also be a water front of 1,000 feet where the docks will be built. The entire area of the land purchased by the company comprises thirty acres.

The Times thinks we ought to have a $30,000 depot erected in this city. So does every right minded individual think so and we hope the Central Railroad Company will think so, and commence at once. The old depot is a disgrace to our beautiful city.

The pretty misses of Passaic Valley, N. J., on Friday last, amused themselves by shooting at a target with bows and arrows. The prize was a gold medal worth $100, and was awarded to Miss Celia Mackey.

The first lecture of the course delivered under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. of this city, by Prof. G. W. Samson took place in the Second Pres. Church on Monday last. The church was crowded, and the remarks of the learned gentleman were listened to with rapt attention by his appreciative audience.

Have you seen the new Gas Machine at Bronk & Vail's Real Estate Office, near the depot. If not go and see it, and we will guarantee that you will purchase one at once. It is a perfectly safe arrangement, gives a beautiful light, and can be burned for half the cost of coal gas. In fact it is just what every family needs See advertisement of "Wood's Hydrocarbon Gas Mechine" in this paper.

CLEVER NEW RUCH.

A rather new little ruch to be worn with soft summer silk of other onepiece frocks is made of liberty satin, or chiffon, with long ends that look almost like a sash.

The material is fastened around a boned collar lining, fastened at the back, and is laid either in flat plaits or is tucked in clusters of thread tucks.

To conceal the opening, which comes a little to the left rather than in the middle of the back, is a small rosette of the material, from which hang two long ends that come well below the waist.

Sometimes these ends are finished in a long pendant ornament of jet or silk the color of the stock. Again they have silk fringe, and occasionally they are hemstitched across the end in several rows.

With a gray silk frock a charming stock of this order could be made of tucked net a tone darker than the dress. Each tuck could be run with a line of silver thread. The fluffy rosette could have a flat button in the center darned with the silver thread, and the ends can be accordion-plaited with a deep silver tinsel fringe. If preferred, tiny silver bugles can be sewed to the bottom of the streamers.

Any clever-fingered girl can make herself one of these fashionable new stocks—and use her wits to give odd touches and charming color effects.

TRIFLES TO REMEMBER.

A whiskbroom which has outlived its usefulness can have the bristles shortened to a thick, rather square edge and be used to clean out the sink. It is more convenient than the ordinary sink brush.

Fruit can be hulled much more quickly and comfortably if a bowl of cold water is kept close at hand, into which fingers are dipped whenever a crushed berry sticks to them.

Left over biscuit, which are far from palatable warmed over, can be cut in slices and toasted or buttered on both sides, cut into dice and browned in the oven as a substitute for croutons.

In scraping fish always hold it under water to prevent the scales from flying. If dipped for a second in boiling water this scraping is much more quickly done.

TO TIE BOWS.

Little girls often have their hair "bobbed" and the mothers of nurses who must tie on the large bows are often perplexed as to how to fasten these large ribbons to the small wisp of hair.

Here is a very good arrangement which overcomes the difficulty and at the same time preserves the ornamental bow, without necessitating retieing it each day.

Make the large bow and sew a strip of stout baby ribbon of the same color underneath.

Wind the narrow ribbon around the hair several times, tie in a tight bowknot and it will hold nicely.

Don't Be A Furnace Slave

The BOYNTON

Square Fire-Pot

reverses the usual order of furnace facts. It requires the least amount of fuel and the least amount of care. In return it gives the biggest, hottest fire you ever knew; a clean, clinkerless fire. It burns all the coal and when you shake it all the dust goes up the chimney. BOYNTON furnaces are clean. They give the maximum of heat for a minimum of expense. We will gladly give you the name of the nearest BOYNTON dealer, so that you may investigate.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for Steam or Hot Water. Also Ranges.

BLOCKADED.

Mrs. Anna Holmes, New Market, N. J., says: "Some years ago I gave a statement for publication regarding what Doan's Kidney Pills had done for me and I now willingly confirm what I then said. Sharp pains in my head, back and sides made me miserable. If I sat down for any length of time or attempted to rise quickly from a reclining position, the trouble would always be more severe. I gradually grew worse and my work became a burden. Having Doan's Kidney Pills brought to my attention, I procured a box from Randolph's Pharmacy and was helped from the beginning of their use. I improved steadily from that time on and was soon entirely relieved."

LIFE PROBLEM AND SCIENCE.

"The first obvious thing about any "living" being is the substance of it—the pounds of material of which it is composed, writes Robert Kennedy Duncan in Harper's Magazine. Is there anything about the "make" of this matter or material that is esoteric; anything that might show the action or the presence of this "Life?" There is this about the substances that constitute a "living" being; there is the bewildering complexity of them, and their lability or irritability. These two characteristics of "living" matter are so salient as to appear at first sight transcendental. But this is not so; the complexity of these substances is due chiefly to the carbon atoms that in such large measure comprise them. There is nothing transcendental about this power of the carbon atom; it is a long known, perfectly recognized fact of general chemistry—"vitality" has nothing to do with it.

As for the lability of "living" matter, it is due in the main to the nitrogen atom, the most powerful, mutable entity in nature. There is nothing occult about it; in fact, the restless character of the nitrogen atom is much more pronounced in guncotton, nitroglycerine, and in gunpowder, than it is in the proteids of the animal tissues. There is thus about the two most salient characteristics of "living" matter nothing that is mysterious, ultra-knowledgeable, or extra-scientific.

As for the intrinsic nature of these substances, there is this to be said: that when the chemist can make in his laboratory bodies identical in composition and in property with substances of vegetable or animal origin, there is no longer any mystery in these substances per se—i. e., except in so far as everything is mystery. He has been able to do this, and every year brings its increasing swarm of synthesized natural products. To take a few examples; he has recently made in his laboratory the indigo of the indigo plant; vanillin of the vanilla pod; chrysin of popular buds; apigenin of parsley; luteolin of the broom plant; fisetin of yellow cedar; quercetin of sumac; kampferol of the blue larkspur; galangrin of the galanga root; camphor of the camphor tree, and even nicotine of tobacco.

Others have been made in the laboratory that are the products of the animal organism—dozens of compounds—such as cystein and cystine, leucine, indoleacetic acid, and even turacin, the red piment of the feathers of the plaintain eating birds. Searching through the nooks and crannies of living things, and, of course, taking the easier ones first, the chemist is gradually building up by the artificial means of his laboratory the natural substances of the animal and the plant.

WOMEN AND THE PICNIC.

An investigator, fired with a desire to find out just how far woman had been really a helpmate to her alleged lord during the recent era of economy, took a reckless plunge into a stormy sea of figures and came up, breathless, but clutching various statistical pearls. There was truly no doubt that America had been saving money, even in the most important matter of woman's apparel and adornment. For where were the duties levied on diamonds and pearls? So small as almost to escape notice. As for ostriches, if they were not allowed to retain their crowning glory, at least the feathers were not plucked for the American market. Lace, too, was conspicuous by its absence, and silks and satins made but a poor showing. The dtuies levied under the heading "Gowns, French," were positively pathetic.—Van Norden.

THE ALMSBAG.

One of the newest wrinkles of fashion and a quaintly pretty and useful one is the "almsbag." These hanging pockets are made in many ways and of all kinds of materials. Some belong to the belt, others a part of the gown. One shown in a suit of white linen was about five inches wide in the greatest width. The embroidery and monogram were in white cotton and a pearl button fastened the flap. It was lined with lawn, and the stitching on the outside edge kept it flat. Linen fringe gave a finish to the bottom, and stitched straps suspended it from the belt.

Whispering Smith

McCloud looked at his companions. "I told you so. Up three-tenths. Thank you, Bill; I'll be with you in a minute. Tell Cherry to come and take away the supper things, will you? That is about all the water we shall get to-night, I think. It's all we want," added McCloud, glancing at his watch. "I'm going to take a look at the river. We shall be quiet now around here until half-past three, and if you, Marion, and Miss Dunning will take the tent, you can have two hours' rest before we start. Bill Dancing will guard you against intrusion, and if you want ice water ring twice."

CHAPTER XIX.

A Talk with Whispering Smith.

When Whispering Smith had followed McCloud from the tent, Dicksie turned to Marion and caught her hand. "Is this the terrible man I have heard about?" she murmured. "And I thought him ferocious! But is he as pitiless as they say, Marion?"

Marion laughed—a troubled little laugh of surprise and sadness. "Dear, he isn't pitiless at all. He has unpleasant things to do, and does them. He is the man on whom the railroad relies to repress the lawlessness that breaks out in the mountains at times and interferes with the operating of the road. It frightens people away, and prevents others from coming in to settle. Railroads want law and order. Robbery and murders don't make business for railroads. They depend on settlers for developing a country, don't you know; otherwise they would have no traffic, not to speak of wanting their trains and men let alone. When Mr. Bucks undertook to open up this country to settlers, he needed a man of patience and endurance and with courage and skill in dealing with lawless men, and no man has ever succeeded so well as this terrible man you have heard about. He is terrible, my dear, to lawless men, not to any one else. He is terrible in resource and in daring, but not in anything else I know of, and I knew him when he was a boy and wore a pink worsted scarf when he went skating."

"I should like to have seen that scarf," said Dicksie, reflectively. She rose and looked around the tent. In a few minutes she made Marion lie down on one of the cots. Then she walked to the front of the tent, opened the flap, and looked out.

Whispering Smith was sitting before the fire. Rain was falling, but Dicksie put on her close-fitting black coat, raised the door-flap, and walked noiselessly from the tent and up behind him. "Alone in the rain?" she asked.

She had expected to see him start at her voice, but he did not, though he rose and turned around. "Not now," he answered as he offered her his box with a smile.

"Are you taking your hat off for me in the rain? Put it on again!" she insisted with a little tone of command, and she was conscious of gratification when he obeyed amiably.

"I won't take your box unless you can find another!" she said. "Oh, you have another! I came out to tell you what a dreadful man I thought you were, and to apologize."

"Never mind apologizing. Lots of people think worse than that of me and don't apologize. I'm sorry I have no shelter to offer you, except to sit on this side and take the rain."

"Why should you take the rain for me?"

"You are a woman."

"But a stranger to you."

"Only in a way."

Dicksie gazed for a moment at the fire. "You won't think me abrupt, will you?" she said, turning to him, "but, as truly as I live, I cannot account for you, Mr. Smith. I guess at the ranch we don't know what goes on in the world. Everything I see of you contradicts everything I have heard of you."

"You haven't seen much of me yet, you know, and you may have heard much better accounts of me than I deserve. Still, it isn't surprising you can't account for me; in fact, it would be surprising if you could. Nobody pretends to do that. You must not be shocked if I can't even account for myself. Do you know what a derelict is? A ship that has been abandoned but never wholly sinks."

"Please don't make fun of me! How did you happen to come into the mountains? I do want to understand things better."

"Why, you are in real earnest, aren't you? But I am not making fun of you. Do you know President Bucks? No? Too bad! He's a very handsome old bachelor. And he is one of those men who get all sorts of men to do all sorts of things for them. You know, building and operating railroads in this part of the country is no joke. The mountains are filled with men that don't care for God, man, or the devil. Sometimes they furnish their own ammunition to fight with and don't bother the railroad for years; at such times the railroad leaves them alone. For my part, I never quarrel with a man that doesn't quarrel with the road. Then comes a time when they get after us, shooting our men or robbing our agents or stopping our trains. Of course we have to get busy then. A few years ago they worried Bucks till they nearly turned his hair gray. At that unfortunate time I happened into his office with a letter of introduction from his closest Chicago friend, Willis Howard, prince of good men, the man that made the Palmer house famous—yes. Now I had come out here, Miss Dunning—I almost said Miss Dicksie, because I hear it so much—?

"I should be greatly set up to hear you call me Dicksie. And I have wondered a thousand times about your name. Dare I ask—why do they call you Whispering Smith? You don't whisper."

He laughed with abundance of good-humor. "That is a ridiculous accident, and it all came about when I lived in Chicago. Do you know anything about the infernal climate there? Well, in Chicago I used to lose my voice whenever I caught a cold—sometimes for weeks together. So they began calling me Whispering Smith, and I've never been able to shake the name. Odd, isn't it? But I came out to go into the real estate business. I was looking for some gold-bearing farm lands where I could raise quarts, don't you know, and such things—yes. I don't mind telling you this, though I wouldn't tell it to everybody—"

"Almost criminal, wasn't it?"

"I wanted to have evening clothes."

"Yes."

"And for once in my life two pairs of suspenders—a modest ambition, but a gnawing one. Would you believe it? Before I left Bucks' office he had hired me for a railroad man. When he asked me what I could do, and I admitted a little experience in handling real estate, he brought his fist down on the table and swore I should be his right-of-way man."

"How about the mining?"

ROSSETTI FOND OF JOKES.

Among the visitors to Rossetti in his last days, Hall Caine, in Appleton's tells especially of one daring and adventurous creature, whose humorous audacity had overcome nearly all fear of his unscrupulousness. Beginning life as the secretary of Ruskin, he had ultimately lived on his wits, doing anything and everything for a living. Ingratiating himself into the graces and worming himself into the confidence of nearly all the painters of Roseti's immediate circle, and making Rossetti, in particular, his conscious victim.

One day this soldier of fortune turned up unexpectedly at our bungalow, and was received with the utmost cordiality. He was a somewhat battered person, with the face of a chipped cab horse, but so clever, so humorous, so audacious, that Rossett's flagging spirits were wonderfully awakened by his visit. I think the poet remarked that the last time they had met was when his visitor had bought a "tidy bit of blue" (blue china) for him.

"And what are you doing now, Charlie?" said Rossetti.

"Buying horses for the King of Portugal," said the soldier of fortune, and then Rossetti laughed until he nearly rolled out of his seat.

Our visitor stayed all day, telling stories, veracious and apocryphal, of nearly everybody known to us in the world, and mentioning to me, in a sort of parenthetical aside, that when he was a young man he had written nearly all Ruskin's early books, which was probably true enough, since he had almost certainly copied them from the author's manuscript in those better days when his fingers had done the work which was now being discharged by his nimbler wits.

Feeble as Rossetti was at the time the visit of this unaccountable being did him good, and he laughed all evening after the man had gone, talking of his adventures of various kinds, as well as telling his familiar stories over again.

Her Cruel Inquiry.

"I'm suah," said Chollie Softleigh with a drawing lisp, "that I don't know what I shall do when I get out of college. Motah ants me to be a minithtah, but I have a leaning toward litratchah."

"Did you ever think of becoming an actress?" she asked cruelly.—Judge's Library.

Three boys, each of whom gave his age as sixteen years, were arrested in Camden, Monday, charged with breaking into the bank and store of Cinni & Tasco, 1126 South Ninth street, on Sunday, while those connected with the place were attending the funeral of a daughter of one of the members of the firm. The accused gave their names as Frank Pangero, John Michatel and Joseph Prota. They were picked up on suspicion when it was discovered that they were trying to dispose of postage stamps, a gun, cartridges and other articles. The boys were put under a sweating process, and it was alleged they broke down and confessed to the robbery.

Street Improvement Completed.

The repairing on West Front street, between Grant and Clinton avenues, is about completed. The Councilmanic street committee has decided to repair only one side of the road between those points this year, owing to the expense, but the other side will be given a top dressing, making that quite an improvement. Next year the work will be completed.

J. H. Manning will lead the prayer meeting at Warren Chapel tonight, taking as his subject the letter to the Hebrews. All are welcome.

THIRD REGT FILLING RANKS AT CAMP FORT, SEA GIRT.

Out of a total membership of 819, the Third Regiment of Camden now has in camp at Sea Girt, a total of 754. It is expected, before the close of the camp, that the regiment will again have an even 100 per cent. a record it made last year, and which has not been equaled yet by any other regiment in the State. Strenuous efforts are being made by the different captains to get every man here.

The two battalions, the First and Third, which had the field work yesterday, the Second being on the rifle range for rifle practice, were given training in skirmish work, and the formations were as near what might be expected in actual warfare as possible. The drill was what is known as "extended order," and the men were instructed in scout duty and outpost work by the majors in charge of the battalions.

As the cavalry drill of the signal corps last week attracted the attention of the visitors, so the work of the Second Troop proves to be of special interest. Captain Field has had years of experience, and the troop is in fine shape. Captain Boyd, of the regular army, who is here this week from the Tenth Cavalry, is aiding Captain Field with excellent suggestions from time to time.

General D. F. Collins and Major H. P. Moorhead were the guests of Governor Fort at dinner Monday night.

Flemington's fourth annual carnival opened yesterday. Delightfully clear and cool weather throughout the day brought large crowds from many towns in this section, and it was by far the largest attendance that has witnessed the opening of any of the carnivals. It was a gala day for the firemen. The different companies marched through the principal streets, the Flemington concert band furnishing the music. In the parade with the firemen were the members of the Board of Village Trustees, some of the county officials and prominent politicians and residents of the city.

The vaudeville entertainments did not open until 7:30 o'clock. Half-hour entertainments were given by Flemington's amateur actors. The carnival grounds are brilliantly illuminated with electricity.

JOSEPH SAWNER POSSIBLY RECEIVES FATAL INJURIES.

Joseph Sawner, of Newark, who has a cottage at Lake Hopatcong, was perhaps fatally injured last evening in an automobile mishap at that place. His breast bone was broken and one of his hips dislocated. He is at his cottage under the care of Dr. Nelden, of Stanhope.

Mr. Sawner was walking along the east drive from the Lackawanna station, having come up from Newark. Two automobiles, one owned by Hudson Maxim and the other by Dwight B. Smith, were on the road coming in opposite directions. Mr. Sawner and the two automobiles came together at a sweep in the road, and in order to avoid running down Mr. Sawner Mr. Smith swung his car over into that driven by Mr. Maxim. Both cars shut off, but their momentum carried them forward into a collision. Smith's car swung around and knocked Mr. Sawner down.

WILL MOVE HOUSE FROM MAINE TO NEW JERSEY.

Taking apart, piece by piece, his old farmhouse, in Abbott, Maine, and removing it to his summer estate, at Lake Hopatcong, there to reerect it without changing its former appearance, is the project contemplated by Hudson Maxim, the inventor, who has just completed a week's visit to his native State.

Mr. Maxim revisited many familiar scenes and persons. At Guilford he found his old school teacher. He visited the brickyard at East Dover, where he once worked, and Lorenzo Dow, for whom he had toiled as a farm hand. Before departing he announced the plan for the removal of the house, which, he said, would be begun as soon as arrangements could be made.

Robert J. Burdette Seriously Ill.

Dr. Robert J., Burdette, the humorist and pastor of the Temple Baptist church in Los Angeles, Cal., is reported seriously ill. He has not fully recovered from a severe injury to the spine which he sustained in a fall last March. Dr. Burdette said yesterday that his resignation was in the hands of the church trustees and that he would not resume his pastoral duties.

Mrs. Van Nerden, of Lyman place, and children, Agnes, Fred and Walter, left Plainfield today for several weeks' stay in Asbury Park.

SENATE PROBERS MEET AND ELECT

The Senate Committee appointed to investigate into the causes for the non-use of the Delaware and Raritan Canal met in the director's room at the Mechanics' National Bank, Trenton, yesterday, and perfected an organization by the election of Senator William J. Bradley, of Camden, chairman, and Senator George S. Silzer, of Middlesex, as secretary. After the election of these officers it was decided to employ Elwood L. Moore, of this city, as the official stenographer to take down the testimony when the committee starts to take it. No sergeant-at-arms was selected, it being the opinion of the committee that the work could be accomplished without the latter officer.

When the committee adjourned it was decided that the next meeting would be held some time during the latter part of the present month. Just when and where the meeting would take place and the nature of the work they intended to do when they do meet was not decided at today's meeting.

It is understood, however, that the committee has received all sorts of letters, making almost numberless complaints and claiming that the writers are in possession of facts to show that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has been guilty of numerous abuses. None of these documents was made public, the committee deciding to make a formal investigation of the many matters complained of before they would consider them public documents. These letters, however, will be made public either at the end of the investigation or during the meetings to be held during the taking of testimony.

Methodist Excursion Tomorrow.

All of the Sunday-schools of the Methodist churches of the city, borough and Dunellen, will enjoy their annual excursion to Asbury Park, tomorrow. The weather prophet has promised a fine day and the prospects for a big crowd are promising. The excursionists will have an opportunity of hearing the organ recital at the Asbury Park auditorium at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when a program will be rendered by prominent members of the Pipe Organists of the World, in convention at the shore this week.

MISS ANNA MAY CRATE BRIDE OF GROVER SCHUCK.

A belated, but nevertheless interesting announcement was made this morning in which all Plainfielders will be interested. Mr. and Mrs. Melvin A. Crate, of Watchung avenue, announce the marriage of their daughter, Anna May, to Grover C. Schuck, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Schuck, of Vine street. The couple were married on April 2 while on a "joy ride." They are going to commence housekeeping on the first of next week at 230 Watchung avenue, where they will be glad to welcome all their friends. Mr. Schuck is employed in the market of W. L. Smalley & Co.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE BEGINS FIFTH YEAR TODAY.

The Plainfield theatre begins its fifth year today. Five years ago it was opened with George Ade's comedy, "The County Chairman." In the past five years the playhouse has been conducted successfully. Mr. Counihan says that Plainfield is appreciative of the best productions that have appeared here.

Beginning today the title will be changed to the "Plainfield theatre." "Plainfield," said Mr. Counihan, "is one of the best towns to support a good theatre that I have ever come across in all of my experience."

West End Avenue Dusty.

Many complaints are received from persons who have occasion to drive through West End avenue, the borough, regarding the terrible dust. That thoroughfare is used almost constantly, and the borough has made no effort to keep the dust down during the dry spell, possibly because there are no dwellings along that thoroughfare. A coating of oil would prove a great blessing to travelers.

F. C. Sutro at the Camp.

F. C. Sutro, of Basking Ridge, with the assistance of able soloists, will have charge of the service at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp, on Sunday. Mr. Sutro has made many friends at the camp among the workers and children and all are looking forward to his coming. He has been a great help to Miss Curry for a number of years.

"Jeff" Not to Train Here.

James J. Jeffries will not train at Fitzsimmons' farm in Dunellen for his fight with Jack Johnson, the negro champion, as was reported. Jeffries will train at his own farm out west, and will come east for a few preliminary touches.

Keely Coal Co. Improvements.

The Keely Coal Company, of South avenue, is now building an up-to-date trestle and expect to complete the same within a month, when the yards will be opened with increased facilities. The new pockets will hold 3,000 tons of coal.

New Jersey's Leading Grocers and Butchers

All Over.

While work on a new building was going on in a Southern town not long ago an old negro employed as a hod carrier suddenly slipped while nearing the third story and plunged headlong to the ground, relates the New York Times. Several passers-by rushed over, expecting to find a man dead with a broken neck, as the old fellow had struck squarely on the top of his head. Finding the old man still alive, some one emptied the contents of a whiskey bottle down his throat. In a few moments the old negro sat up and looked around.

"How do you feel now, uncle?" asked a bystander, kindly.

"Well, sah," came the reply, "I wuz sorter confused when I fust started, but now dat I's hit, I's all right!"

An Odd Decoration.

For a table decoration on a very warm day, it would be hard to find anything more dainty and refreshing than the following: Fill a rose bowl with sparkling mineral water, and immerse in it the stems of nasturtiums with a few of the leaves below the surface, after a short time the blossoms and foliage will become covered with a mass of frost-like moisture, which is very cool and attractive in appearance.

—The Councilmanic street committee continues to spread oil on the streets of the city and finds that it affords the relief from dust which was such an annoyance under the old style of street sprinkling.

PLAINFIELDER IN TOILS

HELD UP THE STORE KEEPER.

Taken Ill in Cell Was Removed to Hospital—Will Be Arraigned Today.

Three hours after he is alleged to have entered a confectionery store in Rahway and attempted to rob the place at the point of a revolver, Edward Conger, who gave his address as 230 Second street, this city, was arrested in Newark early yesterday morning. He was driving the horse and carriage, it is asserted, he stole from in front of the Rahway store. Conger was picked up at Bank and Wickliffe streets, by Patrolman Patrick Arnold, of the Fourth Precinct. He was hardly in his cell when he was taken violently ill with stomach trouble, and is now in the City Hospital.

Arnold was patroling his beat at 1:25 o'clock yesterday morning, when he noticed Conger driving a bay mare attached to a light, rubber-tired runabout.

The horse was covered with foam, and seemed to have been driven hard. The policeman paid little attention to it, but when he saw the rig several times later, and observed that the driver seeemd to be unfamiliar with the locality, Arnold stopped and questioned him. Conger failed to give a satisfactory account of himself. Arnold called up the Fourth Precinct and notified Desk Sergeant McGovern, who sent two policemen to take the horse and driver to the station-house.

Conger at first stoutly maintained that he owned the rig and said he lived in Central avenue. He gave the number and, when asked what cross street it was near, could not tell. Then he broke down and told Sergeant McGovern that he had stolen the rig from Rahway and gave the Plainfield address as his home. Chief of Police Wright, of Rahway, was communicated with. He said that a rig answering the description of the one Conger was driving, had been stolen from Rahway. He gave no details, but declared he would go to Newark today after Conger.

In the meantime Conger had been placed in a cell. He complained of feeling ill and a few minutes later was found in a faint and hurried to the City Hospital. The police expressed the opinion that the man was badly frightened, but the hospital physicians said he was really ill.

Chief Wright later went to Newark, accompanied by George Lukans, also of Rahway. It was then that the story of Conger's alleged attempt to play the "bold, bad man," was revealed in Newark.

Lukans, who lives at 267 St. George avenue, declared the horse and carriage belonged to him. He said he was sitting with a friend in the confectionery store of F. C. Bauer, in Irving street, Rahway, about 10 o'clock last night. They were eating ice cream, the horse being hitched in front of the store.

Conger entered the place, Lukans declared, and, walking up to Mrs. Bauer, drew a revolver and demanded the money from the cash drawer. Mrs. Bauer pluckily refused to give it up and screamed. Conger seemed to lose his nerve, Lukans went on. He grabbed at a box of cigars that stood on the counter and shoved a handful in his pocket. Then he backed out, threatening to shoot any one who attempted to follow. He started down the street on a run, Lukans continued, apparently changed his mind, and untying the horse, sprang into the runabout and disappeared around the corner.

When Conger was searched twenty-nine cigars were found in his pocket. He declared at the time that he had bought them. After communicating with the hospital authorities, Chief Wright decided to wait till Conger was able to leave the institution, which the doctors think will be this afternoon. He will be turned over to the Rahway authorities, and the rig will be taken back with the prisoner. The directory gives 415 West Second street as Edward Conger's address.

Licenses Revoked Next Time.

William Bird and Wells Cregar, two young hackmen, were arrested by Patrolman Myers at the North Avenue station early yesterday afternoon for a violation of the cab ordinance. Sentence was suspended at their hearing before City Judge Runyon today, but both prisoners were given to understand that a repetition of the offence would result in the recalling of their licenses. Bird is employed by M. J. Kennedy and Cregar is a driver for Edward Seader.

MALONE IS NON-SUITED

PROBABLE CAUSE PROVED.

In the suit of Donato Malone for $500 damages for false arrest, imprisonment and malicious prosecution, against Salvatore Isolde, sometimes known as Salvatore Saldo, before Judge Isaac P. Runyon and a jury in the District court this morning, some difficulty was experienced in obtaining a jury. After nine men had taken their seats in the jury box the panel was exhausted.

Some considerable hustling on the part of Justice Hezekiah Hand, which took fifteen or twenty minutes resulted in filling the vacancies in the box and the trial proceeded. Attorney F. J. Blatz appeared for the plaintiff and George V. W. Moy was the defendant's counsel.

According to Attorney Blatz's opening speech to the jury, Malone was accused, arrested, tried and acquitted on the charge of attempted criminal assault on the four-year-old daughter of Saldo on February 6, last, and for this Malone seeks to recover damages in the sum above noted.

City Judge William N. Runyon was the first witness for the plaintiff and testified to the issuance of the warrant for the arrest of Malone. Dr. Alvin R. Eaton, of Elizabeth, was then called, but was excused from testifying on objections raised by Attorney Moy and sustained by Judge Runyon.

Donato Malone, the plaintiff in the case then took the stand and told through interpreter Skelley the story of the alleged crime and the arrest and imprisonment he suffered, besides the clubbing he received from Saldo.

Dr. Eaton was recalled to the stand and testified as to Malone's condition when the doctor examined him in the jail at Elizabeth. Dr. Eaton's testimony was all expert and had reference to the possible effect on hernia of a crime such as Malone is alleged to have attempted.

Attorney Moy pleaded for nonsuit in the case alleging that the probable cause for Saldo's action in having Malone arrested had been proved.

Judge Runyon, after listening to a strong presentation of the facts of the case by Mr. Blatz, decided that Malone had no ground for suit and discharged the jury. Judge Runyon decided the case on the testimony of the plaintiff himself, which is of a character which prevents its publication, and the decision rendered in the case of McFadden vs. Lane, 60 Atl. Dep. 365, by Judge Pitney. "Malice in law is the intentional doing of a wrongful act without just cause or excuse. A sworn accusation of an attempt to assault or other crime made as the basis of a criminal prosecution is excusable if probable excuse exists for the accusation, although acquital follows."

"To support an action for malicious prosecution, the defendant must show by preponderence of evidence that the defendant instituted the proceedings against him without reasonable or probable cause."

SOMERVILLE GIRL WEDS COUNCILMAN'S SON.

William Wilson, son of Councilman W. W. Wilson, of West Third street, and Miss Bertha Colvin, daughter of Michael Colvin, of Somerville, were married yesterday afternoon at the Catholic church in Somerville, Rev. Father Bogaard officiating. The bride was attended by Miss Ella Lappin, of this city, as bridesmaid, and Miles Wilson, a brother of the groom, was best man.

Westfield Man Entertains.

Plainfielders who took the 9 o'clock train from New York this morning were entertained and disgusted by the actions of a well-known Westfielder who was intoxicated. On the way out he sang college songs, hymns and gave orations; was accosted by a colored porter and a peddler, whom he offended, and but for the fact that he was with his wife would have been put off at Elizabeth.

Mrs. L. T. Titsworth, of West Fifth street, has returned from Westerly, R. I.

KNIGHTS' GREAT NIGHT

Orange Pythians Present the Charity Altar to Unity Lodge, Tonight.

FUNDS FOR THE PYTHIAN HOME

Altar to Go to Somerset Lodge Next Monday—To Be Passed On to Other Lodges.

Plato Lodge, No. 122, of Orange, will make a fraternal visit to Unity lodge, No. 102, of Plainfield, tonight for the special purpose of presenting to the local lodge the Pythian Charity Altar, which is being presented from one lodge to another throughout this State. This miniature altar was given to the Knights of Pythias of New Jersey at the session of the Grand Lodge held at Trenton in February, 1908, by the present Grand Chancellor of the State, Col. Henry A. Heinrichs, of Paterson, who has promised to talk to them on Pythian matters in general and the future Pythian Home of New Jersey in particular.

Needless to say local Pythians will turn out in large numbers to greet their chief executive official and those who accompany him on this visit. The purpose of this little altar is to create an interest in the future Pythian Home in New Jersey, and encourage to a greater extent the fraternal mingling of the various lodges of the State who are expected, one after another, to receive this Pythian emblem and make a fraternal visit to the next lodge and present the same to them. Innovations of this character serve to inspire mankind of the present era to look and provide ahead for those who through misfortune may need the helping hand of their more fortunate brethren.

History repeats itself every day and it may be that some of the very Pythians who may on this occasion be present and inscribe their names as having taken part in this movement, may at some future day be inmates of this very institution. That historical work, "Damon and Pythias," which dwells on a friendship that has never been excelled is the foundation of the Knights of Pythias of the present day, and a better foundation is very hard to obtain. One needs to but read that history to get an inkling of the ideas and practices of this grand fraternity.

Every Pythian, no matter what lodge he may hail from, is extended a hearty invitation to be on hand at this meeting in the K. of C. hall, No. 218 East Front street, tonight.

On Monday next Unity Lodge, No. 102, will make a fraternal visit to Bound Brook and present the Pythian Charity Altar to Somerset Lodge, No. 56, of that place. It is expected that a large delegation of the local lodge will go there, where they will be met by delegations from Somerville, New Brunswick, Neshanic, High Bridge and other places. From there the altar will go from one place to the other in the order named as follows:

To Enterprise Lodge, No. 28, at South River, August 16, 1909.

To Raritan Lodge, No. 116, Sayreville, August 17, 1909.

To Sir Walling Lodge, No. 109, Keyport, August 19, 1909.

To Matawan Lodge, No. 142, Matawan, August 25, 1909.

To Shrewsbury Lodge, No. 72, Red Bank, August 27, 1909.

To Seaside Lodge, No. 47, Seabright, September 2, 1909.

To Ocean Lodge, No. 83, Long Branch, September 7, 1909.

One brother has already offered a large country mansion and a large farm of some 50 or 60 acres, suitable for the Pythian Home. There are sufficient funds to secure and hold it.

Mr. Heinrichs is G. C. of Schubert Lodge, No. 118, K. of P. Colonel of Myrtle Company, No. 2, U. R. K. of P. Secretary of Section No. 5842, I. D. K. of P. P. G. of Benevolent Lodge, No. 8, I. O. O. F. P. M. Joppa Lodge, No. 29, F. & A. M.

L. L. Baker Locates Here.

L. L. Baker, of Newark, who for five years was the assistant purchasing agent for the National Biscuit Company, for its seventy factories, has purchased the ice cream and confectionery business of T. B. Kolb on West Front street, and will make a number of improvements, with a view to conducting a first-class place. Mr. Kolb will go to his farm at Keyport.

FREIGHT THIEF CAUGHT

HE IS HELD IN $1,000 BONDS.

John Raymonds, a Russian Pole, of Newark, was arrested Saturday, July 31, at Park View by park officer Haines, of Newark. He had on his person a remnant of a piece of cloth, seven papers of tobacco and parts of a German chemists scale, which corresponded with the description of goods stolen from a Lehigh Valley Railroad fast freight at South Plainfield on July 30.

Five cars were entered, three of them bonded cars to be taken to Rochester, N. Y., while the freight was taking water at South Plainfield. The scale was valued at about six hundred dollars and was of very fine workmanship. Raymonds was taken to Newark by Leigh Valley Railroad Detective John Finlay, and was araigned in the first Precinct court of Newark. He was to be held for ten days pending further information, but when it was discovered that the fast freights were robbed at South Plainfield he was taken there and arraigned in Judge Smith's court yesterday.

Before this when questioned at Park View by Detective Finlay he declared he had bought the cloth from an Italian on the railroad for $1.10, and that he found the tobacco and pieces of scale in the dump at Park View. He said he had been bumming for three weeks and during that time had not had any money, but when Detective Finlay asked him where he got the $1.10 to buy the goods, he declared that he had worked last week and reecived $11 Saturday night.

This could not happen as he was arrested on Saturday morning. He contradicted his story several times. He was committed to the county jail at New Brunswick to appear before the grand jury, and was taken there by William Rielley, the local constable. He was held in $1,000 bonds.

DOG DIDN'T GO MAD; MUST BUY A LICENSE

"If a pup worth $50 is likely to die in fourteen days, is it worth while to pay $2 more for a license for it?" was the perplexing problem that confronted William Waters, of Harrison street, last week. He felt that a pup two months old was under the age limit, too, and for this reason didn't get a license for it. As a result, Marshal Culver served Waters with summons to appear in the borough court this morning to show reason why the dog was not properly licensed.

Waters bought the Great Dane two weeks ago, and at the time of the mad dog scare in the borough, had it coralled for fourteen days—the time that superstition says that rabies will develop if any traces are present. Just as he figured that the dog was not going to have rabies he was haled to court. His story satisfied Mayor Townsend, and on consideration that Waters gets a license for the canine at once, no fine was imposed.

Charles Holman, of Regent street, also received a suspended sentence by the Mayor. His dog was transported to the country and made its way back again before Holman had time to secure a license. Holman took out a license immediately. He was summoned to court by Marshal Pope. The two arrests this morning are in line with the activity of the borough authorities in having the new dog ordinance obeyed. Hereafter no leniency will be extended to violators of the ordinance, as sufficient warning has been given them.

Dr. Wormley Goes South.

Dr. B. C. Wormley, who has been practicing dentistry here for the past three years, has accepted the position of assistant demonstrator in the dental department of Howard University, Washington, D. C. He will leave this city some time during the present month to reside and practice at 1922 Eleventh street, N. W., in that city, where his wife and son now await him. He will probably be succeeded here by Dr. J. L. Baxter, of Newark, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania.

—Among the principal exhibitors entered at the Dog Show, to be held next Saturday at Hollywood Park, Long Branch, is W. C. K. Anderson, owner of the Boreas Kennels, of this city.

He's travelled East and travelled West, and North and South as well.
It must be great to be a man who's travelled like Travell.
And since he's out to boom the town in every sort of way,
We're glad his travels led him here, and hope he's going to stay.

A THOUSAND METHODISTS LEAVE FOR THE SEASHORE

A party of one thousand excursionists left the North avenue station this morning in two sections for a day at Asbury Park and Ocean Grove. The Sunday schools included in the outing were the First Methodist, the Grace M. E., the Dunellen M. E., the Monroe Avenue churches and the Wilson Memorial chapel. There were two sections. The first had twelve cars and the second, nine. As only seven of the last section's coaches were filled, the two empty ones were dropped off at Roselle.

The weather was threatening early this morning when the first excursionists began to gather at the station with their lunchboxes and other equipment for a day of pleasure at the shore, but by the time the train pulled in, the clouds had cleared for the most part, and the sun was shining.

There were no "left overs" this morning. This might have been due to the fact that the train left a few minutes after the schedule time. The excursionists will leave the shore at 7:15 o'clock tonight and will arrive in this city about 9:15.

WOODROW WILSON TO SPEAK IN THIS CITY

The reorganized Democratic party of the city held an enthiastic meeting at their headquarters in the Coward building last night. Le Roy J. Ellis was in the chair. J. O. Stevens was elected treasurer and Frank Shattle secretary. In considering the question of dues, it was decided to make the annual fee $2. A considerable sum was paid in at the meeting.

Various names were recommended to comprise the local election boards and these will be forwarded to the Union County Democratic Executive committee for approval.

It was suggested that prominent Democrats be secured to come to Plainfield and make addresses, and in this connection it was stated that Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton University, had expressed his willingness to speak in Plainfield in the near future. Others mentioned were State Senator Stizer and Joseph Tumulty, the latter of Hudson county.

Regarding the failure of those in charge to present the petitions asking for special election to abolish the voting machines, it was explained that not a sufficient number of signers had been secured. It is hoped to present the petitions at the meeting of the Common Council Monday night.

Knights of Columbus Excursion.

The annual excursion of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus to Asbury Park, on Thursday, August 12, promises to be one of the most popular of the season. The committee in charge is leaving nothing undone toward making the outing a success.

MAY COMBINE PUBLIC PARK WITH PLAYGROUND

The park commission of the borough will hold a conference with the Councilmanic public affairs committee in the office of Mayor C. J. Fisk tonight to further discuss the question of establishing a public park in the West End of the city and borough. In discussing the matter today, Mayor Samuel Townsend, of the borough, said that inasmuch as the tract of land proposed for park purposes is so large it might be well to combine it with a playground. A section of it could be set aside for such purpose or could be included in the park. This suggestion will be considered.

The proposition for a public park meets with general approval as this tract seems to be about the only one within easy access of all parts of the city as well as the borough.

Green brook runs through the property and it is believed that an artificial lake could be built at little expense. The tract of land is level and the expense for grading and laying it out into a park should not be great. The plans call for a street to be cut through from Compton avenue into the borough, but this matter so far as the expense is concerned has not been determined.

STILL WRESTLING WITH SANITARY SEWER PROBLEM

The city and borough sanitary sewer commission will hold a conference within a few days to consider plans for a joint sewage disposal plant that will also include Dunellen as well as Schotch Plains and Fanwood. On Tuesday night at a meeting in the office of Mayor C. J. Fisk the provisional plans were discussed.

A large disposal plant that will care for the communities named is the aim of the commission, and the members are still working with that end in view. Joseph O. Osgood, chairman of the borough commission, has been investigating conditions in other cities and looking into the more advanced ideas of sewage disposal. It is expected that he will present these suggestions at the coming conference.

"THE WHITE STORE" OUTING WAS A GREAT SUCCESS.

The employes of "The White Store," A. E. Force & Co., proprietors, enjoyed their annual picnic on Tuesday at Riverside Park, on the Raritan river. It was originally planned to go to Chimney Rock, but when the party reached there they found another large outing party at the Rock and decided to make the change.

Every convenience was afforded at the Park for the Plainfielders, and all agreed that it was the best day's outing yet held. During the day all sorts of games were enjoyed, and at night the young people found the pavillion a delightful place for dancing. At noon a fine dinner was served.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Warren chapel will hold its picnic at the chapel tonight instead of at John Herrmann's home, as planned.

FIGHTERS AS PLAYERS

GIRLS WOULD PAY THE FINE.

Michael Quigley Fined Eight Dollars For Assault on John Hurley In an East End Stable.

"The Fighting Groom, or Poor Board at Hurley's," was the title of a matinee performance presented in a Netherwood stable yesterday afternoon, the final act of which was given in the city police court today. The production, starring Michael Quigley, in title role, and John Hurley in a "heavy" part, includes an argument, an invasion of the police, a fast fight between the principal characters, aided—or hindered—by a bull dog; an $8 fine, imposed by His Honor (City Judge Runyon); heart-drama by two fair maids, each of whom would pay Quigley's fine, and glowering looks between the principals as the curtain goes down.

The action in the matinee starts when Quigley, The Fighting Groom, engages in conversation with Hurley, the coachman, about the quality of meat he gets for dinner as Hurley's lodger. Both are in the stable, and sundry drinks are in Michael. Some stirring "heavy" lines by the coachman cause the groom to develop pugilistic wrath, and a fight is avoided by Hurley, who jumps on a bicycle and pedals off stage to get the police. The curtain falls leaving Quigley well up stage, whispering in the ear of his bull-dog, who sneaks in upper left, as Hurley departs.

The police patrol is seen in the second act, manned by Driver O'Gorman and Patrolman Flatley. The principals face each other, and the grinding of their teeth (meaning hate), can be heard as far back as row J. The coachman gives the order to close in on The Fighting Groom. Patrolman Flatley steps forward, hastily assuming a do-or-die expression. Suddenly the groom springs for his opponent. (To quote Hurley from the trial scene in the last act: "He made a drive at me like a snappin' turtle, makin' a lot of Bob Fitzsimmons passes.") The men close, and The Fighting Groom carves his initials neatly under the coachman's left eye with his finger-nails. The policeman springs forward, but the bull-dog enters suddenly and rushes to him, becoming very much attached to his trousers' leg. The Patrolman's do-or-die expression suddenly changes to a do-or-be-killed expression, and there are seventy seconds of quick action all around.

But right triumphs. The act terminates as the policeman leads his prisoner to the hurry up wagon, and the final glimpse of the stage shows the coachman sopping gore from his carved features.

The last act shows a police court scene. City Judge Runyon, Chief Kiely and Patrolman Flatley are on stage as The Fighting Groom is led from his cell. Far up stage, two young women are seen, and during the entire scene their bated breathing can be distinctly heard. The Fighting Groom, the coachman and the policeman have good monologues, but the real thrill comes with City Judge Runyon's lines: "Eight dollars or twenty days." Then it is that the two young women rush to the prisoner, the one thrusting a fat pocketbook into his hands and the other using attractive stage business. The Fight Groom pulls a twenty-dollar yellow-back from his jeans, but the Chief asks for green paper, and the exact amount of the fine is soon forthcoming. Muffled threats of a lost job are heard from the coachman as The Fighting Groom goes off stage, followed by the ardent glances of the two young women.

He will stop at the principal commercial centers of the west, where he will meet friends and relatives and after visiting the exposition will take a southern trip on his way home.

Mr. Osgood is a student of New York University and will complete his college course next year. He is the son of Joseph O. Osgood, chief engineer of the Central Railroad of New Jersey.

SUIT FOR CORN PRODUCES TAX

Attorney-General Edmund Wilson said yesterday that although he had not decided upon the exact form of proceedings by which the State will seek to recover taxes due from the Corn Products Company, he would surely begin suit without unnecessary delay.

This announcement followed a conference between the attorney general and former Prosecutor George Berdine, of Middlesex County, who acted as counsel in the proceedings by which it is claimed the Corn Products Company was enabled to defraud the State of a large amount due in taxes.

Mr. Wilson said he had been investigating the case for several weeks before the fraudulent methods resorted to by the company had become known to the public and was firmly convinced that the State had been victimized.

Legal complications, however, he said, had caused a doubt as to the best method to pursue to recover the money, and it was the consideration of these questions which caused action against the company to be deferred as long as it has been.

Mr. Wilson intimated that the effort would be made not only to recover the amounts actually due from the Corn Products Company and its underlying corporations, but to safeguard the interests of the State against similar frauds in future.

WOULDN'T BE "DARED;" LOST HIS LEFT LEG.

In the presence of several companions who dared him to jump a moving freight train going east on the Lackawanna Railroad, at Morristown, at 11:20 o'clock, Tuesday night, Hugh Ducey, eighteen years old, made a leap to one of the cars. The jump was a bad one, Ducey missed his footing, and his left leg went under the cars. Before he could roll away, the wheels of a car passed over his leg between the foot and knee, severing it completely.

The screams of the boy frightened his companions and they ran from the railroad station calling for help. Policeman Wilday, who was near by, hurried to the depot, and pulled the boy from the tracks. Then the policeman took a handkerchief from his pocket, wrapped it around the injured leg, making a hard knot, in an effort to stop the flow of blood. Losing no time the officer secured a stretcher from railroad employes at the station and hurried Ducey to Memorial Hospital, which is only a short distance away.

Police Surgeon Glazebrook was called to the hospital. He put the boy on the operating table at once and bound up the torn parts of the flesh where the leg had been severed. It is thought he will recover. Ducey is a son of Thomas Ducey, of Olyphant Park. He had been around the railroad station for some time last night with a crowd of boys.

BOYS RESCUED WHEN SAILBOAT CAPSIZED.

Willie and Eddie Hahn, of Philadelphia, and John Ritter, of Paulsboro, whose ages range from twelve to fourteen years, narrowly escaped drowning Tuesday in the Delaware River, off Brammil's Point, below Lincoln Park, when their sailboat overturned.

The Hahn boys were spending the summer with Ritter and the latter planned a trip on the river in a fourteen-foot sail boat. They left Billingsport wharf, not realizing the heavy wind that was blowing, and when they had gone about a mile a heavy wave struck the boat and the next minute all three were overboard. They tried to cling to the boat, but the current was too strong and they were carried up the river. All three could swim a little, but with presence of mind they turned over and floated with the tide.

Oliver Sheets Jr., Captain C. H. Magee and Joseph Banks saw the boys floating, and getting in a rowboat started after and rescued them. The rescue party then went after the boat and found a fox terrier, which had accompanied the boys, sitting on the capsized craft, waiting for help to arrive.

John Burns, proprietor of the Hotel Kensington, who recently had a cateract removed from his eye, had the bandage taken off yesterday and is compelled to remain in a dark room until the eye can be accustomed to the light.

GOLF.

There is talk of arranging an exhibition match between George Sargent, the national open champion, and Jerome D. Travers, the amateur title holder, over the Montclair course. Travers, since his return from Muirfield, has confined most of his golf to Montclair, and he has had two rounds of 71 within the last week. In the opinion of Tom Anderson, the veteran greenkeeper, Travers can defeat any professional in a match at Montclair.

Members of the New York Athletic Club are again discussing the old question as to the feasibility of securing golf links for their use. Although only a percentage of the membership in this athletic organization can be classed as golfers, it has been ascertained that at least six hundred of the members do play the ancient game. There are few out and out golf clubs in the metropolitan district able to boast of six hundred members.

It requires considerable time and careful management for a golf club in this vicinity to make ends meet, but by combining with a powerful organization like the New York Athletic Club, a golf club would be able to continue at a decided saving. James H. Haslin, president of the New York Athletic Club, has expressed himself in favor of the project. Then there is James T. Batterson, who has figured prominently for years as a golfer at Fox Hills, Lakewood and Garden City. Batterson would like to see the New York Athletic Club and the Fox Hills Golf Club come to some understanding, and he thinks that the two might be able to get together, the athletic club taking over the Fox Hills lease for the remainder of its term. In discussing the project one member said:

"It seems to me that before any decided action is taken it might be well to have a one or two days tournament for members of the club at some of the neighboring golf links, which can easily be secured. I might cite such places as the Dunwoodie, Country Club, Fox Hills, Hackensack, Oakland, Nassau Country, Apawamis and Wykagyl. I have spoken to a good many members on the subject, and this proposition has met with considerable enthusiasm."

The governors of the Chicago Golf Club announce that the house and course will be open to all visiting contestants during the week previous to the tournament and that lockers will be reserved in order of application. The Chicago Golf Club is twenty-eight miles from Chicago and one mile from the village of Wheaton. From present indications the coming tournament will prove a memorable affair, and added interest will be lent because of the reappearance of H. Chandler Egan, the title holder in 1904 and 1905. It is also expected that the East will be well represented. Undoubtedly Jerome D. Travers, champion for the last two years, will go on to defend his title, while Travis, the Metropolitan champion, may be counted upon to try again.

Competitions of one form or another continue regularly at the Pittsfield Golf Club. In the second round for the Edmister trophy Dr. Richardson beat H. H. Ballard, 3 up and 2 to play; C. C. Chesney beat J. Vance, 3 up and 2 to play; H. Peck beat A. H. Rice, 4 up and 2 to play, while A. E. Jones and H. N. Wilson finished all square. Irving and Clark, the Pittsfield professionals, went to Stockbridge recently and defeated Charlie Smith, the Lenox "pro," and Kline, of Stockbridge, by 4 up and 2 to play, in a four-ball match.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

National cycle champion Frank Kramer and Jackie Clarke, the phenominal Australian rider, are going to be given another opportunity to settle the much mooted question of supremacy between them, for Manager John M. Chapman, of the Newark Velodrome, where the men are riding at meets twice a week, has signed them up for another team match race there next Sunday afternoon, with Willie Fenn and Joe Fogler as partners. He has done so too, under changed conditions and in order not to have a result similar to last Sunday when Kramer refused to ride a fourth heat after each had won one and the third was declared a dead heat. This time the rules will declare that the men shall ride until one or the other wins two heats, irrespective of how many are held. There will be a big card of six other races at the meet.

FORESTERS PLAN FOR GREATEST REUNION.

All arrangements are now complete for one of the largest reunions of Foresters ever witnessed in Southern New Jersey. The affair will take place at Riverside on Saturday, when the combined courts of the State, comprising nearly 5,000 members, will attend. The headquarters will be at Kiessling's Grove, where Court 190, of Riverside, will act as host.

It is expected that 300 Foresters will be in line to parade, and that many hundreds of visitors will come to witness the procession.

Athletic sports will be held at the grove, and several handsome prizes will be awarded. A baseball game will be one of the features of the afternoon sports. Special athletic events have been arranged for women contesants.

At 6 o'clock a dinner will be served. A handsome display of fireworks will be shown during the evening, after which a ball will conclude the day's celebration.

GEN. COLLINS HAS NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

General D. F. Collins narrowly escaped death in an automobile while going over a crossing in front of an approaching Pennsylvania flyer with a party of friends yesterday afternoon. The party was going over the West Belmar crossing of the Shark river road, when a flyer which was going westward just missed them by an arm's length.

The brakes failed to work and the chauffeur turned the machine in the same direction that the train was going. The car ran alongside of the train for 500 fet before it could be brought to a stop. It bumped the ties not six feet from the train, and but for the skill of the chauffeur who steered a serious accident would have resulted.

Dr. Norman H. Probasco, of Seventh street, has returned from Monhegan Island, where he has been spending the past month.

TO CONSIDER AMENDMENTS

Union County Bar Association to Take up Constitutional Changes.

A CAMPAIGN OF EDUCATION.

Efforts Will be Made to Arouse Interest—Election on September 14.

The Union County Bar Association will meet tomorrow morning in the Courthouse to discuss the proposed amendments to the Constitution to be voted upon at the election Sept. 14.

The meeting will probably discuss several amendments and aid in the campaign to educate the citizens of the county to understand just what reforms the amendments are intended to establish. The State Bar Association is now disseminating information on this subject and it is possible the County Bar Association will aid in the campaign.

Among the changes to be brought about by these amendments are the following:

They propose that judicial power shall be vested in a court for the trial of impeachments, a supreme court, county courts and such other courts inferior to the supreme court as may be established by law, which inferior courts the legislature may alter or abolish as the public good shall require."

The supreme court shall be organized in three divisions—namely, the appeals division, presided over by a presiding justice, styled a "chief justice," and the chancery division, presided over by a presiding justice, who shall be styled the "chancellor."

The appeals division shall consist of the chief justice and six other justices to be assigned by the governor. The remaining justices shall be assigned by the supreme court to the law or chancery division, as the business of the court may require.

The appellate division shall have and exercise the appellate jurisdiction and such original jurisdiction as may be incident to the complete determination of any cause or review.

The law division shall exercise the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the supreme court and the circuit courts in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute in the absence of statute by the supreme court.

The chancery division shall exercise the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the court of chancery and the chancellor in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute or in the absence of statute by the supreme court, but the justices of this division shall be under such control and supervision by the chancellor as shall be provided by the supreme court.

NEW JERSEY WOMAN WOULD RUN "CATTERY."

James Tawney, chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations—and friend of homeless cats—has received a letter from May Cline, of Harmony, Warren county, who offers to relieve Mr. Tawney of all of his worries in the cat line by running—for a consideration, of course—a cat boarding house to be endowed by the government.

Mr. Tawney has received lots of "cat letters" since he openly championed the cause of homeless cats on the floor of the House.

Some of Miss (or Mrs.) Cline's views on the "cattery," as contained in her kind offer to the government, follow:

"My folks have ten cats and I can give you a correct estimate of the cost of 1,000 cats. It costs $9 a year for one cat—conservative estimate—if milk is given. But since the government cats would probably get buckets full of sweet skimmed milk, with a lot of bread in it, the cost would be probably as low as $8 a year. Next the help. As a manager I ask $40 a month and an assistant. This man I know right here. He is made for the job, and is a good farmer besides—honest, happy, old-fashioned, humorous, industrious, kind and a lover of animals and justice. He will exalt the job. Besides, he will live anywhere.

GEN. WOOD AND STAFF GUESTS OF THE GOVERNOR.

An interesting incident in the visit of General Wood to the State Encampment at Sea Girt, today, is that the general, accompanied by his staff left New York at 10 o'clock this morning on the New Jersey Central's Sand Hook Route Steamer, "Sandy Hook." At Atlantic Highlands the party boarded the private car "Central," which was run special to Sea Girt. It was hauled by the inspection engine No. 900 and reached Sea Girt at 11:45.

After luncheon at Governor Fort's cottage, which was attended by the physicians of the State, General Wood and his aides reviewed the State troops and United States Marines in camp, returning to New York later in the afternoon by the same route.

WHEN MEN DID FANCY WORK.

During the old regime in France, about which so much glamour remains to us, the very men who were living and making the history of the empire of Louis, passed their leisure time in a way that seems to us of today utterly ridiculous, says a writer in Appleton's Monthly. In all the fancy work on which ladies employed themselves, the men seem to have taken part.

Poinsinet, in one of his comedies, represents a young marquis entering a room where two fair damsels are embroidering. One is working a piece of dress trimming, the other a Marly flounce. The beau examines the embroidery with the eye of a connoisseur, points out here and there the specially good touches, and is too polite to notice any defects. He takes a little gold tube out of the pocket of his richly decorated waistcoat, and selects a dainty gold needle. He goes to the frame at which Cidalise is working, and finishes the flower which she had begun. From her he moves to the sofa, and, seizing one end of the flounce, assists Ismene, to whom he pays special attention, to complete her task.

At this time it was the custom of the ladies invariably to carry their work-bags with them to the evening receptions, in which they had not only their embroidery materials, but the last novel, the popular song, and their patch boxes and rouge pots. Gentlemen also carried deftly embroidered little bags into company, which held "a whole arsenal of cutlery and fancy articles, such as boxes of different shapes filled with lozenges, snuff and scent."

At another period the fashion of the day was to cut out drawings from books and pamphlets, and to paste them on screens, lamp shades, boxes and vases. The skill in this was to so arrange the drawings, or ports of different drawings, as to produce a curious or amusing effect. Then there came a season when all the rage was for charades and riddles, which gave a peculiarly good opportunity to exercise the light and rapid wit so conspicuous in the French.

Every evening the drawing-rooms were converted into impromptu charades. Some lady would suggest a word or phrase and forthwith it of a sprightly little play. Many of the word games now current with us in America had their origin in the necessity the French salons were under in the last century to divert themselves.

In some of the salons the fashion of keeping a daily chronicle of news, which was too often a mere chronicle of scandal, was adopted. Madame Doublet de Person issued bulletins which she called "Nouvelles a la main;" in her apartments two registers were kept, one of the authentic news received here and there by her guests, the other of floating rumors and on dits; and from these the budget of her chronicle was made up and circulated throughout France.

A FEW SEASHORE TIPS.

A steamer rug is good, but a large rubber sheet is even better to spread on the beach when baby and the very small children are taken to the seashore, or even to the mountain camp.

There are times when, notwitastanding the heat of the sun and the fact that the tide is well out, the sand stays moist—far too moist for a small child to sit on for any considerable time. The dragging of cushions to the beach, even in the smaller resorts, is not possible, because of the distance; camp chairs will help out the situation for mother, but not for baby, and the rubber sheet alone will satisfactorily supply the need.

Oil paper is a most necessary all-summer possession, for there are innumerable little things that should be stowed away in trunk or box, but which will mildew or spot without extra wrapping during a stay of some duration. Cotton wadding and oil paper are the natural resources of the seashore packer. We have heard, too, of packing dainty kid gloves in a tightly screwed quart jar as a precaution against the small yellow spots that show by the end of the season on even the most ordinary colors and qualities.

An extra flooding with oil will be necessary for the sewing machine, and as a protection for the metal parts a large square of wool flannel should be shrouded around it while not in use.

Needles should be stuck through oily flannel, and the various scissors should be rubbed with oil occasionally.

Hair pillows are better for seaside use than those stuffed with down or feathers, and wall paper is a good scheme generally for any house in a region where there is perpetual damp.

The walls of the seashore cottage should be smoothed over carefully to fill in all cracks, and then painted with three separate coats of heavy paint in soft and restful tones to reflect the subdued "light that never is on land or sea" near the sandy coast.

WINTER HOME FOR BIRDS.

In Bowdoinham is a bird nursery where all through the winter months the apple and cherry trees are filled with bluejays, woodpeckers, and others, eight varities of birds having been seen here last season by Mrs. W. B. Kendall, says the Kennebec (Me.) Journal.

In the trees the Kendalls place long strips of suet suspended by wires, and further down in the branches of a cherry tree is a big box fastened securely and always well filled with corn. "We never use cracked corn now," said Mrs. Kendall, "as the English sparrows get it all away from the others. Some days the box is blue with the bluejays. There are two kinds of woodpackers.

"Morning is the best time to watch the birds, though; they come in great numbers for their breakfast. When it is very cold the Canadian sparrows or winter chippies come down from Canada. Then there are the pine gros beaks—big flock of them—and that red-headed woodpecker you see swinging away as he hangs to that piece of suet is very tame. I go out and talk to him often and he is never the least bit frightened. One chickadee family—father, mother and baby—is very interesting.

"We have the hairy and downy woodpecker, the nut hatches, chickadees, Canadian sparrows and the English sparrows, the bluejays and the pine gros beaks, and sometimes the shriek or butcher bird makes his appearance. The other birds are frightened of him, for he kills them when he gets a chance."

CARDINAL SEES MORAL DANGER IN PROHIBITION.

"The establishment of prohibition in Chicago or other large cities would be impracticable and would put a premium on the illegal sale of intoxicating drinks," was the opinion expressed by Cardinal Gibbons.

Coming from the only cardinal of the church in America, and in Chicago at a time when 15,000 Catholic total abstinence advocates are gathering there to adopt measures for a further advancement of their cause, this statement is of especial importance.

Cardinal Gibbon's brief visit in Chicago was an incident of his trip across the country to Salt Lake City, where he is to attend the dedication of the new cathedral. He was the guest here of E. O. McCormick, and with Mr. and Mrs. McCormick left last evening in the McCormick private car for the West.

"I am heartily in sympathy with the total abstanence movement," said the cardinal. "It is a campaign of great import and wide influence, and I hope it will spread to the furthest corners of the nation.

"In the rural parts of the country and in the smaller towns and cities there are signs of progress which must mean widespread prohibition. However much I am in favor of total abstinence, though, I fear that in the large cities like Chicago prohibition by law would not prove feasible.

"At the same time I am convinced that the total abstinence movement will continue to make headway. It is a cause worthy the best there is in American citizenship.'

The thirty-ninth national convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union opened Tuesday. In the formal assembly of the delegates Bishop J. Regis Canevin, of Pittsburg, delivered the principal address.

NO WOMEN'S CARS FOR SUBWAY IN MANHATTAN.

William McAdoo abandoned as a failure his "cars for women" in his tubes recently, and the Public Service Commission Tuesday refused to grant the application of several woman's reform leagues for similar cars in the New York Subway. In making this ruling the commission says:

"Undoubtedly women suffer inconvenience and sometimes indignities in the subway cars, but wo do not believe that the operation of special cars will ameliorate these conditions. Moreover, we do not believe that there is any preponderant demand among the women of the city for special cars."

December 8, 1870.

"The papers are all having a good deal to say about this glorious fine weather, just as if the people didn't "know how it is themselves."

The worthy landlord of the "Fanwood House," Scotch Plains, B. Britton, Esq., has raised this year, in his garden, some remarkably long eared corn. We, ourselves measured one ear, which was 17½ inches in length, and well developed. Who can beat it?

The city of Plainfield can justly boast of possessing the model public school of New Jersey. High honors attaches to the names of Stillman, Titsworth, Kirkner and Merwin. They are the right men in the right place. Education forever.

Improvement is at work in Plainfield. Cheer on her noble efforts. Every citizen will be benefited, even those antediluvians who want mud, darkness, old-fashioned fire buckets and no "edication." Go ahead, Improvement.

Workmen are now engaged in straightening the track of the Central Railroad between Mechanic street, and the depot. No, not the "depot," but the old modern structure that is designated by that name.

We learn that friends E. P. Thorn and Wm. Hilman, of this city, have formed a co-partnership, and opened large and first class dining rooms in Cedar street, New York, under the firm name of "Hilman & Thorn." The opening day will be on Saturday next. Of course, "Edd" will be glad to see all his friends and acquaintances, and will give them a hearty welcome, should they call on him when in the city.

Constantinople has at least 1,200,000 people, including 200,000 Greeks, 10,000 Germans, 7,50 English, and possibly 500 Americans. The natives are of all degrees of Turkish and Arab origin. Thousands of them are well to do or wealthy broad-minded, and ready for the awakening to which the nation and Constantinople in particular are rapidly advancing. STY LOTION.

A simple and helpful lotion consists of camphor water one ounce, and muriate of morphine, two grains. Apply with a bit of cotton. Do not strain the eyes, as the pain will only be increased. The best way is to have the sty lanced, but many people object to the knife. However, the operation is a very simple one in the hands of a physician, and in a case where stys come on the eye several times a year, they have been apparently checked by lancing.

Spending His Wealth.

"I can't last much longer, my dear," said old Mr. Kloseman, who was nearing his end; "but ah! it's good to think that even after death I'll be near you and watch over you."

"Well—er—really," replied the soon-to-be young widow, "if that's true, Silas, I'm afraid my extravagance will pain you terribly."—Catholic Standard and Times.

NEW FIRE APPARATUS WILL ARRIVE HERE NEXT WEEK.

The Councilmanic fire committee met last night and discussed the completion of equipment for the new East End fire house. It is expected that the new combination chemical and hose wagon, which is being made by a Philadelphia firm, will be ready for delivery next week. The contract price for it was $1,465.

The plan is to have the equipment complete by the time the apparatus arrives so that everything can be put in commission at once. The new house was finished several weeks ago and workmen have since been busy putting in the necessary equipment.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

The fourth annual convention of postmasters of the third and fourth classes will be held in the Hotel Chalfonte, Atlantic City, on August 17 and 18.

The sloop Calena, Captain John Townsend Chance, left Leesburg yesterday with a party of Philadelphians for the fishing grounds in Delaware Bay.

By an overwhelming vote the citizens in five precincts of Camden last night decided they preferred the old-style ballot to the voting machines now furnished them. Only 314 votes were cast.

Mules attached to Fred Wolf's beer wagon ran away at Woodbury yesterday, struck a post on Hunter street, upsetting the wagon and beer flowed down the street for about a half square.

The Burlington County Board of Taxation met Tuesday to receive from the assessors their duplicates for this year, and announced that the books can be seen at Mt. Holly at any time by taxpayers.

Arrested in front of the city hall in Camden last night on a charge of exceeding the speed limit in his automobile, W. B. Klein, a real estate dealer at Atlantic City, furnished $55 cash security for a hearing Friday. The arrest was made by Motorcycle Policeman Pedigree.

Accused of breaking the left arm of Georgina Catawitz, of 1704 Master street, with a chair during a quarrel at a party, George Gerditch, of 1702 Master street, was held in $200 bail by Justice of the Peace Thompson, in Camden, yesterday. He declared that the woman threatened him with a rolling pin.

Attorney-General Wilson, for the State Board of Health, has filed a bill in the Court of Chancery for an injunction to restrain the Bettlewood Land Company from using a sewer built on its property in the borough of Oaklyn, Camden county. The State Board of Health asserts that the sewer was built without its approval.

Borough Recorder Lyons, of Vineland, has reserved his decision in the case of a professional man charged by a merchant with disorderly conduct. The professional man bought a cantaloupe of the merchant and found too much juice and seed inside to suit his taste. Returning to the store high words ensued between the two men, and the professional man smashed the melon, juice and all, over the head of the merchant.

George Beebe was pitching his tent near the head of Union Lake, Millville, yesterday, when he was surprised to see a huge rattlesnake crawl upon the pile of canvas and rattle a warning. Beebe secured a club and battled with the reptile for three hours before he succeeded in killing it. The snake measured five feet one inch in length and had eleven rattles and a button. Rattlesnakes are rarely seen in South Jersey.

Atlantic City police are puzzled over the disposition to be made of a pair giving their names as Mr. and Mrs. Morris Levy, of Nashville, Tenn., arrested yesterday on a charge of stealing small articles from a boardwalk shop. The pair had more than $5,000 worth of jewels when arrested and assert being wealthy property owners in their home city. They are being held until their friends and relatives can be found.

Captain Charles Smith, of the Gloucester ferryboat Peerless, while on a trip to this city from Philadelphia yesterday discovered a blaze on the coal barge Powell, anchored in the Delaware river, opposite Monmouth street, Gloucester, having a heavy cargo of coal and waiting to leave for Boston, Mass. He ran his boat alongside of the barge and the crew quickly quenched the flames. The captain of the barge and his two sailors were fast asleep in the cabin. Damage is about $100.

Thinking by keeping the matter quiet and thus aid in arrests, it was not until yesterday that the Moorestown Pursuing and Detective Company offered a reward of $75 for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who attempted to poison three horses belonging to William H. Hoffman, a well-known farmer, who lives near Riverside. On the evening of July 29 last some miscreant put a pound of paris green in the manger of each of the horses, but fortunately for Hoffman he turned the animals out to pasture that night.

ASK FUND FOR PLANS FOR TRANS-HUDSON SPAN.

Francis J. Macauley, of North Bergen, appeared before the Hudson County Board of Freeholders Tuesday afternoon and urged that body to appropriate $10,000 allowed by law for the preparation of plans for the proposed bridge over the Hudson River in the North Hudson section.

The board took the matter under advisement, and later at the special meeting of that body a communication was read from the Bridge Commission appointed by Governor Fort requesting that the $10,000 be set aside for their use. It was stated that New York State had set aside $20,000 for the same purpose.

Acton on the mater was deferred until the next meeting.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 8, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Why war should be abolished.—Isa. ii, 2-4; Matt. v, 38-48.

Living in the twentieth century with all the history of the past behind us, it should scarcely be necessary to discuss the subject of why war should be abolished. Once the glory of victory in war was the ideal of the nations of the world. Persia, Greece and Rome were constantly at war, each in their order becoming the supreme nation of the time. And that which was gained through the glory of war was, after all, very little, and one nation soon overcame the other. At such a time, however, such a question might have been raised without any seeming lack of necessity, but that today it should still be necessary to discuss it is one of the dark spots on modern civilization. Isaiah speaks of a time when nations "shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift sword against nation; neither shall they learn war any more." The time seems to be approaching when this prophecy shall be fulfilled.

1. The curse of war shoud lead to its abolition. General Sherman's definition of war is well known, and it is well known to be true. There has never been anything on earth so typical of the place of perdition as war. If we had the statistics of all who have died in or because of war, if we knew the number of widows and orphans made by war and what they have suffered, if we had certain knowledge of all who have escaped death and wounds, but who have been morally and spiritually ruined while engaged in war, we might be enabled to slightly estimate what a curse war has been to the human race. It arouses the basest passions of men, and, like wild beasts, they are made more inhuman by the sight of blood in time of battle and burn with but one desire—namely, to destroy their fellow men. Nations have been ruined in a day, and even the curse of war has led to awful slaughter and bloodshed in the church of Christ.

2. The expense of war should lead to its abolition. What the wars of the world have cost in money cannot be estimated, but if it could the figures would be enormous. The money spent today on armies and navies, even in time of peace, is beyond human conception. And the people bear the burden. If there were no war departments to support, no war vessels to build, no standing armies to support, no pensions to pay, what a financial burden would be lifted from the people of every nation. Billions of dollars could be spent for schools, the talented poor could be educated in art and music, and hundreds of blessings could be made possible which are now impossible because of the great war expenses in time of peace.

3. The supremacy of Christianity should lead to the abolition of war. Christ came to bring peace—not in a day, but by the gradual growth and acceptance of His teachings. War is un-Christian. It is based upon selfishness, jealousy, hate—all of which are un-Christian. We are to love our enemies and not to fight them. The Golden Rule, if practiced by nations, would abolish war in a day.

4. There is no necessity for war today, and for this reason it should be abolished. Diplomacy and arbitration could settle all international disputes without war. Moreover, they would if it were not for the fact that the nations are armed to the teeth. Disarmament of all nations is the only sure guarantee against wars. So long as nations "learn war" there will be wars. A nation trained to fight will always be ready to fight. Turn all implements of war into tools of industry, cease to train armies and build navies, and "nation shall not lift up the sword against nation." Universal peace will prevail.

BIBLE READINGS.

Job i, 13-20; Lev. xxvi, 17, 31-39; Ps. xlvi, 8-11; Isa. ix, 5-7; xi, 1-10; Luke ii, 8-15; Ps. lxviii, 30; Rom. xii, 9-21; Rev. ix, 1-21.

Zealous Samoan Endeavorers.

"The Samoan islands," says Rev. J. W. Hills of Upolu, Samoa, "divided between Germany and America politically, are filled with ardent Christians, and these are imbued with the utmost enthusiasm for missions to other parts of the Pacific, while nowhere in the world is there a larger proportion of Christian Endeavor work. Indeed, much of the very best of our missionary work among this charming race is done on the Christian Endeavor plan, which has peculiar attractions for them and forms a solid, integral and permanent part of our system.

"The missionary work in which these Endeavor societies take an invaluable share is a marvelous one. We are now each year sending five or six couples of native evangelists to New Guinea. That immense island is now looked upon as our great field of missionary enterprise. The climate is dangerous, yet we always find eager and able recruits ready to fill all gaps. And all the work is done at little expense to the London Missionary society, for even our students in the training college build their own houses and cultivate their own crops for their food. In a very few years we were able to place native ministers in every village in Samoa. The societies pay the salaries of the few missionaries from home; that is all."

Mr. Hills has been in Samoa since 1887 and knows the people and their needs. His words are a splendid tribute to Christian Endeavor.

Whispering Smith

Whispering Smith waved his hand in something of the proud manner in which Bucks could wave his presidential hand. "My business, Bucks said, need not interfere with that, not in the least; he said that I could do all the mining I wanted to, and I have done all the mining I wanted to. But here is the singular thing that happened: I opened up my office and had nothing to do; they didn't seem to want any right of way just then. I kept getting my check every month, and wasn't doing a hand's turn but riding over the country and shooting jack-rabbits. But, Lord, I love this country! Did you know I used to be a cowboy in the mountains years ago? Indeed I did. I know it almost as well as you do. I mined more or less in the meantime. Occasionally I would go to Bucks—you say you don't know him?—too bad!—and tell him, candidly I wasn't doing a thing to earn my salary. At such times he would only ask me how I liked the job," and Whispering Smith's heavy eyebrows rose in mild surprise at the recollection. "One day when I was talking with him he handed me a telegram from the desert saying that a night operator at a lonely station had been shot and a switch misplaced and a train nearly wrecked. He asked me what I thought of it. I discovered that the poor fellow had shot himself, and in the end we had to put him in the insane asylum to save him from the penitentiary—but that was where my trouble began.

"It ended in my having to organize the special service on the whole road to look after a thousand and one things that nobody else had—well, let us say time or inclination to look after: Fraud and theft and violence and all that sort of disagreeable thing. Then one day the cat crawled out of the bag. What do you think? That man who is now president of this road had somewhere seen a highly-colored story about me in a magazine, a ten-cent magazine, you know. He had spotted me the first time I walked into his office, and told me a long time afterward it was just like seeing a man walk out of a book, and that he had hard work to keep from falling on my neck. He knew what he wanted me for; it was just this thing. I left Chicago to get away from it, and this is the result. It is not all that kind of thing, oh, no! When they want to cross a reservation I have a winter in Washington with our attorneys and dine with old friends in the White House, and the next winter I may be on snowshoes chasing a band of rustlers. I swore long ago I would do no more of it—that I couldn't and wouldn't. But it is Bucks. I can't go back on him. He is amiable and I am soft. He says he is going to have a crown and harp for me some day, but I fancy—that is, I have an intimation—that there will be a red-hot protest at the bar of heaven," he lowered his tone, "from a certain unmentionable quarter when I undertake to put the vestments on. By the way, I hear you are interested in chickens. Oh, yes, I've heard a lot about you! Bob Johnson, over at Oroville, has some pretty bantams I want to tell you about."

Whether he talked railroad or chickens, it was all one; Dicksie sat spellbound; and when he announced it was half-past three o'clock and time to rouse Marion she was amazed.

Dawn showed in the east. The men eating breakfast in tents were to be sent on a work-train up a piece of Y-track that led as near as they could be taken to where they were needed. The train had pulled out when Dicksie, Marion, McCloud and Whispering Smith took horses to get across to the hills and through to the ranchhouse.

CHAPTER XX.

At the River.

They found the ranchhouse as Marion and Dicksie had left it, deserted. Puss told them every one was at the river. McCloud did not approve Dicksie's plan of going down to see her cousin first. "Why not let me ride down and manage it without bringing you into it at all?" he suggested. "It can be done." And after further discussion it was so arranged.

McCloud and Smith had been joined by Dancing on horseback, and they made their way around Squaw lake and across the fields. The fog was rolling up from the willows at the bend. Men were chopping in the brush, and McCloud and his companion soon met Lance Dunning riding up the narrow strip of sand that held the river off the ranch.

McCloud greeted Dunning, regardless of his amazement, as if he had parted from him the day before. "How are you making it over here?" he asked. "We are in pretty good shape at the moment down below, and I thought I would ride over to see if we could do anything for you. This is what you call pretty fair water for this part of the valley, isn't it?"

Lance swallowed his astonishment. "This isn't water, McCloud; this is hell." He took off his hat and wiped his forehead. "Well, I call this white anyway, and no mistake—I do, indeed, sir! This is Whispering Smith, isn't it? Glad to see you at Crawling Stone, sir." Which served not only to surprise but to please Whispering Smith.

"Some of my men were free," continued McCloud; "I switched some mattresses and sacks around the Y, thinking they might come in play here for you at the bend. They are at your service if you think you need them."

"Need them!" Lance swore fiercely and from the bottom of his heart. He was glad to get help from any quarter and made no bones about it. Moreover, McCloud lessened the embarrassment by explaining that he had a personal interest in holding the channel where it ran, lest a change above might threaten the approaches already built to the bridge; and Whispering Smith, who would have been on terms with the catfish if he had been flung into the middle of the Crawling Stone, contributed at once, like a re-enforced spring, to the ease of the situation.

Lance again took off his hat and wiped the sweat of anxiety from his dripping forehead. "Whatever differences of opinion I may have with your company, I have no lack of esteem personally, McCloud, for you, sir, by heaven! How many men did you bring?"

"And whatever wheels you Crawling Stone ranchers may have in your heads on the subject of irrigation," returned McCloud, evenly, "I have no lack of esteem personally, Mr. Dunning, for you. I brought 100."

"Do you want to take charge here? I'm frank, sir; you understand this game and I don't."

"Suppose we look the situation over; meantime, all our supplies have to be brought across from the Y. What should you think, Mr. Dunning, of putting all the teams you can at that end of the work?"

"Every man that can be spared from the river shall go at it. Come over here and look at our work and judge for yourself."

They rode to where the forces assembled by Lance were throwing up embankments and riprapping. There was hurried running to and fro, a lent dragging about of willows, and a good deal of shouting.

Dunning, with some excitement, watched McCloud's face to note the effect of the activity on him, but McCloud's expression, naturally reserved, reflected nothing of his views on the subject. Dunning waved his hand at the lively scene. "They've been at it all night. How many would you take away, sir?"

"You might take them all away, as far as the river is concerned," said McCloud, after a moment.

"What? Hell! All?"

"They are not doing anything, are they, but running around in a circle? And those fellows over there might as well be making mud pies as riprapping at that point. What we need there is a mattress and sandbags—and plenty of them. Bill," directed McCloud in an even tone of business as he turned to Dancing, "see how quick you can get your gangs over here with what sacks they can carry and walk fast. If you will put your men on horses, Mr. Dunning, they can help like everything. That bank won't last a great while the way the river is getting under it now." Dancing wheeled like an elephant on his bronco and clattered away through the mud. Lance Dunning, recovering from his surprise, started his men back for the wagons, and McCloud, dismounting, walked with him to the water's edge to plan the fight for what was left of the strip in front of the alfalfa fields.

When Whispering Smith got back to the house he was in good humor. He joined Dicksie and Marion in the dining room, where they were drinking coffee. Afterward Dicksie ordered horses saddled and the three rode to the river. Up and down the bank as far as they could see in the misty rain, men were moving slowly about—more men, it seemed to Dicksie, than she had ever seen together in her life. The confusion and the noise had disappeared. No one appeared to hurry; but every one had something to do, and, from the gangs who with sledges were sinking "dead-men" among the trees to hold the cables of the mattress that was about to be cast, and the Japs who were diligently preparing to float and load it, to the men that were filling and wheeling the sandbags, no one appeared excited. McCloud joined the visitors for a few moments, and then went back to where Dancing and his men on lifelines were guiding the mattress to its resting place. In spite of the gloom of the rain, which Whispering Smith said was breaking, Dicksie rode back to the house in much better spirits with her two guests; and when they came from luncheon the sun, as Smith had predicted, was shining.

"Oh, come out!" cried Dicksie, at the door. Marion had a letter to write and went upstairs, but Whispering Smith followed Dicksie. "Does everything you say come true?" she demanded as she stood in the sunshine.

She was demure with light-heartedness and he looked at her approvingly. "I hope nothing I may say ever will come true unless it makes you happy," he answered, lightly. "It would be a shame if it did anything else."

She pointed two accusing fingers at him. "Do you know what you promised last night? You have forgotten already! You said you would tell me why my leghorns are eating their feathers off."

"Let me talk with them."

"Just what I should like. Come on!" said Dicksie, leading the way to the chicken-yard. "I want you to see my bantams, too. I have three of the dearest little things. One is setting. They are over the way. Come see them first. And, oh, you must see my new game chickens. Truly, you never saw anything as handsome as Caesar—he's the rooster; and I have six pullets. Caesar is perfectly superb."

When the two reached the chicken house Dicksie examined the nest where she was setting the bantam hen. "This miserable hen will not set," she exclaimed in despair. "See here, Mr. Smith, she has left her nest again and is scratching around on the ground. Isn't it a shame? I've tied a cord around her leg so she couldn't run away, and she is hobbling around like a scrub pony."

"Perhaps the eggs are too warm," suggested her companion. "I have had great success in cases like this with powdered ice—not using too much, of course; just shave the ice gently and rub it over the eggs one at a time; it will often result in refreshing the attention of the hen."

Dicksie looked grave. "Aren't you ashamed to make fun of me?"

"Of course."

"Good. Let me watch this hen for a few minutes and diagnose her. You go on to your other chickens. I'll stay here and think."

Dicksie went down through the yards. When she came back, Whispering Smith was sitting on a cracker box watching the bantam. The chicken was making desperate efforts to get off Dicksie's cord and join its companions in the runway. Smith was eying the bantam critically when Dicksie rejoined him. "Do you usually," he asked, looking suddenly up, "have success in setting roosters?"

"Now you are having fun with me again."

"No, by heaven! I am not."

"Have you diagnosed the case?"

"I have, and I have diagnosed it as a case of mistaken identity."

"Identity?"

"And misapplied energy. Miss Dicksie, you have tied up the wrong bird. This is not a bantam hen at all; this is a bantam rooster. Now that is my judgment. Compare him with the others. Notice how much darker his plumage is—it's the rooster," declared Whispering Smith, wiping the perplexity from his brow. "Don't feel bad, not at all. Cut him loose, Miss Dicksie—don't hesitate; do it on my responsibility. Now let's look at the cannibal leghorns—and great Caesar."

CHAPTER XXI.

Between Girlhood and Womanhood.

About nine o'clock that night Puss ushered McCloud in from the river. Dicksie came running downstairs to meet him. "Your cousin insisted I should come up to the house for some supper," said McCloud, dryly. "I could have taken camp fare with the men. Gordon stayed there with him."

Dicksie held his hat in her hand, and her eyes were bright in the firelight. Puss must have thought the two made a handsome couple, for she lingered, as she started for the kitchen, to look back.

"Puss," exclaimed her mistress, "fry a chicken right away! A big one, Puss! Mr. McCloud is very hungry, I know. And be quick, do! Oh, how is the river, Mr. McCloud?"

"Behaving like a lamb. It hasn't fallen much, but the pressure seems to be off the bank, if you know what that means?"

"You must be a magician! Things changed the minute you came!"

"Oh, I know all about that. Don't you want to freshen up? Should you mind coming right to my room? Marion is in hers," explained Dicksie, "and I am never sure of Cousin Lance's—he has so many boxes."

When she had disposed of McCloud she flew to the kitchen. Puss was starting after a chicken. "Take a lantern, Puss!" whispered Dicksie, vehemently.

"But get a good one, Puss, and make haste, do! Mr. McCloud must be starved! Where is the baking powder? I'll get the biscuits started."

Puss turned fiercely. "Now look-a heah, yo' can't make biscuits! Yo' jes' go se' down wif dat young gen'm'n! Jes' lemme lone, ef yo' please! Dis ain't de firs' time I killed chickens, Miss Dicksie, an' made biscuits. Jes' clair out an' se' down! Place f'r young ladies is in de parlor! Ol' Puss can cook supper f'r one man yet—ef she has to!"

"Oh, yes, Puss, certainly, I know, of course; only, get a nice chicken!" and with the parting admonition Dicksie, smoothing her hair wildly, hastened back to the living room.

DRIFTING BOAT SAVED BY MOTORBOAT CREW.

John Blackburn, son of Mrs. Ida Blackburn, of Philadelphia, whose cottage residence is on the beach front at Cape May Point, is in the habit of taking a morning row in the sea and, attempting this exercise Tuesday with a companion, he placed himself in a serious predicament. The sea was running high and the tide strong, and even the most experienced seamen declined to tempt the waters in a small boat. In their experience with such conditions they were unable to control the boat and were fast swept out to sea.

The Cape May Life Saving crew noticed this, put to the rescue in their motorboat recently provided by the government, and begun the task of towing the imperiled men ashore. The tow line broke however, and the boat again drifted away, being overtaken by the life boat with difficulty.

The endangered amateurs were finally brought ashore, but it is doubtful if they could have been caught without the aid of the motorboat.

JUDGE NEWCORN DECIDES AN IMPORTANT CASE.

Judge Newcorn handed down a decision this morning awarding to Alfred Canfield possession of the pool tables and accessories for which Canfield sued Albert Kadish to recover, in replevin proceedings, on July 22. Judge Newcorn allowed six cents damages, cost of fees and counsel fee of $5.

This case was defended by Kadish through Harry C. Runyon and involved a delicate question of law, and took two weeks to decide after the case was tried.

Canfield sold Samuel Thornton two pool tables with cues, racks, etc. on partial payments. Thornton owed L. Moledesky for rent, the latter seized the pool tables and sold them at auction; Kadish bought them. Judge Newcorn decided that Moledesky had no right to seize the tables because notice had been served on Moledesky that the tables were simply leased and still the property of Canfield.

AUTO 'BUSES ARRIVE; LINE SOON TO START.

The two chassis for the 'buses to be operated by the Plainfield-Metuchen Auto 'Bus Company arrived today from the Rapid Motor Car Company, of Pontiac, Michigan, and have been taken to a local garage where the 'bus bodies are being put on. The line will probably be in operation within two weeks.

The new automobile 'buses will be painted royal green and two cars will be put on at the outset. Each will accommodate fourteen "inside" passengers and a fifteenth with the driver. The large twenty-five passenger 'bus, which has been netting the company a neat revenue during its few weeks' operation, will be used regularly for pleasure parties.

The company will have its local traffic office at Rowley's drug store, on West Front street, and in Metuchen the office will be in the office of Truman Pierson, the postmaster, in the National Bank building. The company has not yet appointed a local manager.

EARLY MORNING BLAZE AT HAND'S BRICK YARD.

The borough fire department was summoned to the brick yard of Ernest Hand at 3:30 o'clock this morning to put out a fire on the roof, over one of the large brick kilns.

The brick yard is located on Mountain avenue, near Raymond avenue, and is just outside of the borough. The run of two miles was made in good time by the fire department, and two chemical tanks were required to extinguish the flames. The Plainfield steamer was telephoned for, but by the time that it reached the scene the Borough fire laddies had extinguished the blaze.

The fire was caused, it is believed, from sparks from the brick kiln. Workmen covered the kiln with the usual sand last evening, and it is supposed that the heat from the kiln became so intense that the dry timber of the roof became ignited. Flames had gathered considerable headway when the department was summoned by telephone.

GAMBLERS MENACE BASEBALL AT HUB.

Upon their promise that they will co-operate with the police in putting a stop to gambling in their respective parks, the American League and the National League baseball teams will be allowed to continue to play the national game in Boston. The necessary licenses, which expired on July 31, have not yet been renewed by Mayor Hibbard, but it is understood they are being held up only to give the club managers a chance to show their intention to make good the word they gave the police authorities to aid actively in the suppression of gaming.

Police opposition to the licenses, made in the initiative of Capt. John J. Hanley of the Roxbury Crossing station, has been withdrawn as a result of his receiving assurances from both clubs. Owing to the demand of the Roxbury court that the transfer of money be proved in order to effect a conviction for gambling, the police have been unable to wipe out betting on the baseball playing.

Capt. Hanley says that he had no doubt that the licenses will be renewed, and both Treasurer Hugh McBreen of the Americans and Secretary Peter F. Kelley of the Nationals express like confidence. Secretary Kelley said the club would assuredly carry out the anti-gambling ideas of the late George Dovey. The Americans had signs warning against gambling put up on their grounds yesterday.

REV. M. A. ALEXANDER QUITS THE PULPIT.

The Rev. M. A. Alexander, pastor of the Shiloh Baptist church has tendered his resignation from that office and is now in the South. The resignation was presented to the church body at a church meeting on July 26, when the congregation refused to take action in the matter. Hence it was laid on the table for further consideration.

A second meeting of the congregation was called yesterday and the matter was discussed, with the result that all relationship between the pastor and the church was dissolved and the pulpit was declared vacant.

The Rev. Mr. Alexander has been with the church since it was founded fifteen months ago, and has been a satisfactory preacher. Recently, he has had trouble with his eyes. Temporarily the pulpit will be filled with supply pastors, and in about three months, another pastor will be engaged. The salary is $50 a month. Sunday, the Rev. Mr. Flowers, of Orange, will occupy the pulpit.

The bonds will be secured by a blanket mortgage and will bear interest at the rate of 5 per cent. The underwriters are J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., of New York, and Drexel & Co., of Philadelphia. The Fidelity Trust Company, of Newark, will handle the issue. The bonds, it is said, will be placed on the market at 92½

THOUGHT OF EMPLOYES; REFUSED INJUNCTION.

Because granting an injunction would throw 2,000 people out of work and delay the firm in carrying out a government contract, Vice-Chancellor Garrison yesterday refused to grant the application of residents who wanted the Keuffel & Essex Co. restrained from using certain machines. The firm is one of the largest manufacturers of drawing implements in the country and has a factory at Hoboken on Third and Grand streets.

Leon Abbett, representing property owners and residents adjacent, declared that the operation of the heavy machines in sections of the factory made it impossible to occupy the houses nearby. It was alleged that the vibration had cracked the walls of some of the houses.

The firm denied that conditions were as represented.

The vice-chancellor said the affidavits were so conflicting that he would not grant an injunction on the showing made by the applicants without further investigation, since such large interests were involved. He fixed September 8 as the date when he will hear further evidence in Jersey City, and then decide as to whether he will issue the injunction.

HUNTINGTON LEAVES A FUND FOR RECTORS

Through a codicil attached to the will of the Rev. Dr. William R. Huntington, late rector of Grace church, who died at Nehant, Mass., on July 26, it became known yesterday that the promise made by him in December, 1908, that he would apply the $40,000 given to him at that time by his parishoners on the twenty-fifth anniversary of his rectorship as a trust fund for the support of retired rectors or their widows has been fulfilled.

The codicil is dated Dec. 8, 1908, nearly two years after the original will, which was executed March 8, 1907.

The codicil ends by giving to the trustees under the will the same powers over the fund during the time that it is held by them, as is conferred upon the executors and trustees of the will, and is signed William R. Huntington. The executors of the will, and thus of the trust fund, up to the time of Dr. Huntington's daughter death are his son, Francis C. Huntington, and his sons-in-law, Royal Robbins and William G. Thompson.

It was learned yesterday that the fund at the present time amounts to a few hundred dollars over $4,000 and the disposition made by the codicil is in direct line with Dr. Huntington's statement on receipt of the gift on Nov. 30, 1908, that he would create such a trust fund for retired rectors and their widows.

OFFICIAL'S NOVEL PLEA IN REFUSING TO QUIT.

Despite the fact that he is illegally holding office as a member of the Rutherford Shade Tree Commission, B. Pym Codrington, president of that body, did not send in his resignation to the Council Tuesday night, as it was expected he would do. Contrary to the decision of Borough Counsel Bell that Codrington is not a freeholder, the latter is said to have contended that while his property is in his wife's name he considers that he is a freeholder because if the estate were sold he would have to sign with his wife to dispose of the same. The latter two commissioners, William J. Allen and James L. Wilson, who are not freeholders, sent in their resignations, which were accepted. R. E. Sohst and James Rathay were appointed by Mayor Evans to fill the unexpired terms. Mr. Bell gave it as his opinion that all the acts of the commission were legal.

Edward J. Turner demanded that a fine of $42 be returned to him. The penalty was imposed by Recorder Mileham because Turner did not obtain consent of that body to plant four trees on his property. Mr. Turner bases his demand on the ground that the commission is illegally constituted. The borough attorney has decided to the contrary.

HAND PROMISES GOOD BEHAVIOR DURING PAROLE.

William Hand, the fifteen-year-old son of Thomas Hand, of South avenue, who was committed to the county jail at Elizabeth last week in default of $100 bail for stealing a candy vending machine from a Park avenue store, was in court this morning, following his release from jail through the intervention of City Judge Runyon yesterday. The young culprit was told that he had been temporarily freed because of the illness of his mother, who has been brooding over the theft and is under a physician's care.

Hand agreed to be a good boy during his parole and at the suggestion of the Judge, he will report at court each Monday morning that the police may keep an eye on him and see that he stays out of mischief until his hearing before the Juvenile court in the fall.

ATLANTIC AUTHORITIES BALK GAMBLING GAME.

Balked in former efforts to punish gamblers by the refusal of grand juries to find indictments, Prosecutor Goldenberg and Chief of Police Woodruff have adopted a new method to break up an alleged poolroom, whose opening had been advertised enough to draw a big crowd of local and Philadelphia sports to a building near Pacific and Missouri avenues, Atlantic City.

Five policemen in uniform were on duty all Tuesday, and will be kept around the place until its backers are ready to quit business, according to Chief Woodruff.

She Was Too Quick.

There were three at the little table in the cafe, a lady and two men. Suddenly the electric lights went out, and the lady, quickly and noiselessly, drew back.

An instant later there was the smack of a compound kiss. As the electric lights went up each man was seen smiling complacently.

"I thought I heard a kiss," said the lady, "but nobody kissed me."

Then the men suddenly glared at each other and flushed and looked painfully sheepish.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

REV. DR. EATON, FARMER

Former Pastor of John D. Rockefeller's Church is Contented.

FARM IN WATCHUNG HILLS.

Says Work Is a Pleasure—Jersey the Finest State in the Union—No Better City Than Plainfield.

Surrounded by nature's best and toning up his system for the life of the city during the coming winter, the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, and formerly John D. Rockefeller's pastor in Cleveland, was found hard at work at his farm on Watchung Mountain last week. Hard work, according to the Doctor's definition of it, may better be termed limitless pleasure.

When seen first the Doctor was busily engaged putting the finishing touches on the barn like structure which he has built to cover a new gasolene ram recently installed.

"Do I like farm work?" he repeated. "Well, that is a very simple question and easily answered. Of course I love my work in the ministry and I love the work on the farm, and consequently I am happy 365 days in the year. The air is delicious and there is health in every breath of it, and when I look around, taking in the beautiful view, and think of the possibilities there spread out before me I thank God for it all. Nature is beautiful in every aspect, and in this particular spot I believe she is at her best.

Was an Abandoned Farm.

"This place was an old abandoned farm when I took hold of it two months ago, but now, even though the work is but half done, the change is wonderful. For some reason or other the place had been allowed to deteriorate for a long period, and some of the fields were not ploughed for years, but with a few weeks' work with the proper implements we have restored the place to something like its former beauty.

"I believe that Jersey is one of the finest States in the Union and to prove my faith in it I shall spend the greater part of each year on my farm. It is a farm and will be run just as any other farm would be conducted by any other farmer. The produce will be marketed and sold for the best prices I can obtain for it. Plainfield offers as good a market as any other nearby city, and I am sure that the tomatoes, cabbages and sweet corn raised here at Sunbright will compare favorably with those raised anywhere.

"As I said, I love farming for itself, not what it may produce in the way of income. I have selected the best of stock, and being as good a judge of animals as those who deal in them, I do not fear being mistaken in my selections. As to the actual work of cultivation I do my turn with the hired men and accomplish just as much as any of them can do and I find that the work agrees with me. There is nothing better in the world for a minister of the Gospel or any other man of sedentary habits than to get out close to nature and learn the lessons she teaches.

"Five years ago while in Cleveland I was a victim of typhoid fever and a year ago was stricken with the same disease a second time. I then made up my mind that the place for me was where such things do not exist, and today I feel as though my system is entirely rid of the germs of disease and that I am as strong and well as any human being could well wish to be.

Why He Selected Jersey.

"My reason for selecting New Jersey as a place for carrying out my ideas of farming was principally because of its accessibility. The railroad affords a train service that just suits me, and then the exquisite natural beauty of the hills here captivated me. You see, I am so near the city and yet, when that little ridge is betwen me and it I am away out in the forest. It hardly seems possible that just beyond that little hill lies the most beautiful city in the State, if not in the country, yet it is so.

"I shall spend at least a year studying the situation, and by that time I ought to be in a position to know just what is best in the way of crops and my mistakes of this year will be corrected. I have made the discovery this year that corn and cabbage will give excellent results under proper cultivation and, as you can see, I have set out enough plants to make quite a showing and they are all healthy and bid fair to yield more than enough for the use of my family.

"If you had brought your camera yesterday you might have obtained a picture which would have been illuminative, if not dignified, from the viewpoint of a farmer. I was ploughing that field next to where that corn

GEORGE M'VOY WEDDED ALMOST A YEAR AGO

Carefully keeping the secret of their wedding for ten months, George McVoy, a former ball player of this city, and Miss Beulah Cole, of Scotch Plains, today made announcement of their marriage on October 14 last in Metuchen.

The couple had been engaged for some time and while in Metuchen on a driving trip last October decided to meet life's battle together. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. W. Crocroft, of Metuchen. Mr. McVoy planned to announce his marriage last Christmas, but a trip South prevented this. He returned recently at the time of the death of his mother but decided not to make it public just then. The announcement was not made until today, although the fact that they were married was long suspected by intimate friends of the couple.

Mrs. McVoy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Cole, of Scotch Plains, and Mr. McVoy is the son of I. L. McVoy, of 305 East Front street. The latter was formerly a local ball player, who played on the Orange Field Club team, both in football and in baseball. He is now employed by his father as a plumber. Mrs. McVoy is a member of the choir of All Saints' Episcopal church of Scotch Plains, but has now tendered her resignation. She will continue teaching music.

SEEK TO REDUCE BOROUGH ASSESSMENTS

Assessments in North Plainfield were gone over this morning and compared with those in the other parts of the county by members of the Somerset County Board of Assessment, representatives from the four townships of Bernardsville, Bedminster, Hillsboro and Franklin. These assessors will meet Tuesday in Somerville to discuss the results of today's work.

From the County Board of Assessment there were in the party: P. V. D. Van Doren, of Millstone; S. A. Kenny, of Somerville, and Newton B. Smalley, of the borough, and Assessor Dr. J. H. Cooley, of North Plainfield; H. S. Van Nuys, Jr., of Millstone; Augustus McCullough, of North Branch; William Vanderbeek, of Gladstone, and Joseph Bucks, of Bernardsville.

The party inspected buildings and property in different sections of the borough and made notes on them. The trip to this city was made in two automobiles.

It is the aim of the borough officials, if possible, to secure a reduction of assessments on realty. Last year it was raised considerably and as a result there was a great deal of dissatisfaction in which some of the largest property-owners of the borough entered a vigorous protest.

Martin J. Whalen Surprised.

The girl was thrown heavily and ssutained painful bruises about the limbs. She refused medical attention and was able to go to her home.

PYTHIANS RECEIVE ALTAR

A LARGE SUM WAS RAISED.

Addresses by State Officials and Orange Pythians Mark Arrival of Altar on Its Tour.

One of the most enthusiastic and best attended meetings of Unity Lodge, Knights of Pythias, was held last evening in the lodge rooms, when a delegation from Plato lodge, Orange, came to this city and presented the famous Pythian altar to the local lodge. Over one hundred were present, and this is the largest number ever out at a local meeting since Unity lodge celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary two years ago.

Following the transaction of regular business a short recess was held until the members of Plato lodge arrived. With them were Grand Chancellor Henry A. Heinrichs, of Paterson, and Grand Vice-Chancellor Lewis A. Drucker, of Elizabeth.

The altar was presented by the Plato lodge members with due formalities and the speech of acceptance was made by Presiding Officer Samuel Rothberg, who expressed the sentiment of the local lodge in a few well-chosen words.

A neat sum of money was raised last evening to be added to the fund being raised for providing for aged Pythians. For the benefit of members of Unity lodge who were not present last night it is announced that further donations may be sent to Frank Putnam, keeper of records and seals.

Speeches were made by State Grand Chancellor Henry A. Heinrichs, of Paterson, Grand Vice-Chancellor Drucker, Deputy Frederick Sears, Chancellor Commander Powlison, of Bound Brook, Fred Douglas, of Perseverance Lodge; Past Chancellor B. J. Sureiner, Past Chancellor V. W. Nash, Jr., M. F. Gano and Horace J. Martin.

In his speech following the presentation, Grand Chancellor Heinrichs referred to the altar and its use in extending and making more binding the fraternal spirit in the Knights of Pythias throughout the domain of New Jersey, and he spoke of the awakening in Pythian lodges created by the friendships that it would bring about.

The altar will be escorted to Somerset Lodge, No. 56, of Bound Brook, next Monday night by a delegation from Unity Lodge. The lodgemen will leave this city on the 7:45 troller car, and a big delegation of local lodgemen is expected to make the trip.

Netherwood Services Enjoyed.

Last night Adjutant and Mrs. Straubel had charge of the camp service at Netherwood. A number of stringed selections were given under Mr. Straubel's directions which the children and mothers enjoyed very much. Mr. Theodore and Joseph Lupford handled the mandolins in a credible manner, while Miss Straubel played the guitar to advantage. Mrs. Straubel sang with her daughter some of the beautiful gospel hymns. The tired mothers and happy children went to bed saying it was one of the best things they had had this summer.

SEVERAL OTHER CANDIDATES.

Political Pot Beginning to Boil in Somerset County—Assemblyman Smalley to Be Renominated.

The political pot is now beginning to boil in Somerset county, and especially North Plainfield, in a way that is making the "wise ones" take notice. Already there is considerable talk as to the probable candidates for State, county and local offices. In North Plainfield, where many political battles have been waged there promises to be a lively campaign.

There is a strong sentiment among the Republicans of the borough in favor of nominating a party candidate for Mayor to succeed Mayor Samuel Townsend, whose term expires, although the Democrats will undoubtedly again name Mr. Townsend. The friends of James K. Arnold, former Councilman and borough clerk, are urging him to stand for the nomination, while the name of Councilman L. B. Woolston has also been prominently mentioned.

Of course, it is expected that Mr. Townsend, who has made a good record, will be urged to take a renomination, but it is said that the friends of William J. Conroy will endeavor to get his name at the head of the ticket.

In an interview with a prominent Republican of the borough today, a reporter for The Daily Press learned that it is not at all improbable that former Mayor Newton B. Smalley would be urged to take the nomination. Two years ago he declined further honors as the chief executive of the borough, but it is said that now he is willing to accept the office, provided the party is unanimous for his candidacy. Mr. Smalley during his long term as head of the borough government was said to be "the best Mayor North Plainfield ever had," and there is no doubt but that his friends would like to see him returned to office again.

The terms of two Councilen, Morris C. Van Arsdale and B. R. Waldron expire this year, but so far as can be learned, they will both be renominated, no apparent opposition having thus far developed.

The term of Assemblyman W. W. Smalley, of Bound Brook, also expires this year and there appears to be no question but what he will be renominated by the Republicans.

TOO MUCH SISTER-IN-LAW CAUSES TROUBLE IN HOME.

A sister-in-law, not a mother-in-law, is at the bottom of the martial troubles between Leonard Yung and his wife, who live at 27 Somerset street. Because of the sister-in-law, who lives across the hall from them in the same apartment, the relations between Mr. and Mrs. Yung became estranged some time ago. Yung forbade his wife to speak to her sister; and when the latter not only talked to her, but went out with her evenings also, Yung drowned his sorrows in the cup that cheers. This led to his losing a position as hospital assistant, and later as a barber.

The upshot of it all was that he could not earn enough to support his wife and fifteen-year-old son, and so decided to live by himself, ordering his wife to move out. This happened last night. The disturbance brought Chief Weiss, who placed Yung under arrest. In court this morning he was sentenced to three days in the borough lockup by Mayor Townsend. Mrs. Yung left the court room smiling.

Stereopticon for Camp.

George A. Chapman, of West Seventh street, who is much interested in the Netherwood Fresh Air Home, has presented the Home with a fine new stereopticon with which the children and others who may wish to attend will be entertained. Free entertainments will be given nightly, beginning tomorrow and everyone will be welcome to come.

Petition for Playgrounds.

A petition is being circulated about the city urging the establishment of playgrounds. When a large number of signatures have been secured it will be presented to the Common Council. Mayor Fisk this week in a special message to the Council urged the appointment of a playground commission.

Chester Denton, son of Mrs. L. J. Denton, of West Sixth street, has registered at the Hotel Philadelphia, at Asbury Park. Hhe will be there for several weeks.

He sitteth at the steering wheel, both dignified and calm,
And the power of sixty horses lieth curbed within his palm.
Ye vandal fiends, who burn the road, when all is said and done,
Ye'll ne'er know joy until ye drive like Mr. Harrington.

ADJUTANT STRAUBEL GOES TO LAKEWOOD

Adjutant and Mrs. Straubel, of this city, will leave early tomorrow morning with their son, Ernest, for their summer camp in the Lakewood pines. The adjutant and his wife are in charge of the Industrial Work of the Salvation Army of this city, and the good work done by them is worthy of notice. Mr. and Mrs. Straubel have been in the Army work for nearly 25 years, and the adjutant's musical talent has won for him many and well deserved letters of praise and commendation. Mrs. Straubel's sweet voice has won the hearts of many people among whom she has worked.

They have been in this city nearly a year, and the industrial work has been advanced and increased along many lines. Many dozens of men and boys have been found employment through Mr. Straubel's efforts, and more and larger plans are being exercised through which Mr. Straubel may reach the many unemployed who find it so hard to get work.

There are five wagons now at the Home, which give a number of men constant work, and if you have any newspapers, magazines, books, old clothing or any articles passed of use, these wagons will be gladly sent to gather them. The work shop, where these papers are sorted and packed, is one of the most interesting shops in the city, and at any time the workers there will be glad to show the visitors about.

Funeral of Mrs. James B. Clarkson.

The funeral of Mrs. James B. Clarkson, who died on Tuesday morning, was held at her late residence, East Fourth street, yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. In the absence of Rev. John Y. Broek, the services were conducted by Rev. Lewis Bond, an old friend of the family. Rev. Mr. Bond read a favorite poem of Mrs. Clarkson's entitled, "I will meet you at the gate," and a friend sang, "I heard the voice of Jesus say, come unto me and rest." Mrs. Clarkson was a charter member of Trinity Reformed church, and there was a large attendance of the members of the church at the services yesterday. The interment was in North Plainfield cemetery. Following were the pallbearers: Charles Tallman, John Morton, Simon Mantz, E. H. Bird, Nathaniel Pennington and Bateman Thatcher.

A "Sunset" Tea.

About forty members and friends of the Christian Endeavor Society of Warren chapel enjoyed a "sunset" tea in the parlors of the chapel last evening. It was originally intended to hold the event in the open air on the mountain but threatened cold weather caused a change in the plans and the young people had a fine time indoors. After the tea the evening was spent playing games.

PAINTER'S RING CAUSE OF MAINED FINGER

Frank Holenbeck, a painter who lives on Richmond street, may lose the little finger of his right hand as the result of a peculiar accident while at work on the Watchung avenue bridge over Cedar brook yesterday afternoon.

The painter was climbing down to the brook bed from a girder on which he had been working and seized the iron beam with his right hand. He slipped on the mossy stones and fell backward, and his ring, catching in the girder, tore the flesh from the finger for its entire length. Holenback was not injured by the fall. His fellow-workmen bound up the finger, the bone of which was entirely exposed, and took him to a physician, where the injury was attended. He was later able to go to his home. Holenbeck is employed by R. Bush, to whom the Board of Freeholders gave the contract for repairing the bridge.

BOROUGH GIRLS RAISE MONEY FOR BABY CAMP.

A number of charitably inclined borough girls raised $12.30 for the benefit of the King's Daughters' baby camp by a cake sale at the home of Daniel R. Douglas on Grove street yesterday afternoon.

The candy and cake tables were attractively decorated, and Japanese lanterns added to the scheme of decoration. The candy table was in charge of Miss Henrietta Stewart, and Miss Mabel Douglas presided at the cake table. The lemonade table was in charge of Miss Charlotte Wadams, and the fancy goods table was in charge of Miss Lucy Douglas. Ice cream was sold in a booth conducted by Miss Rose Andrews, and Douglas Marsland carved watermelon for the guests for a nominal fee per slice. Grab bags and other fair attractions helped to lend interest to the affair, and when it closed in the evening nothing was left save a few souvenir postal cards. Howard Riley ably assisted the girls in the work.

This is the second effort of the kind by the same coterie of girls. Last year they raised a substantial sum for the Day Nursery. They had good support in the neighborhood and purpose holding a similar fair annually.

Building Boom in West End.

The Home Real Estate Company has now in course of construction six dwellings on West Fourth street, two of which are nearly completed. These houses have seven rooms and reception hall, with all improvements. They are located in that part of the West End, where there has been a demand for just such houses and if the local shops resume on full time there will undoubtedly be more than twenty-five dwellings of this character erected during the coming year.

FELL DOWN ENBANKMENT

IS NOT SERIOUSLY INJURED.

Clarence Brouard Also Tumbles, but Is Not Hurt—Accident Due to Lack of Lights at Station—No Warning?

An accident which marred the excursion of the Methodist Sunday schools for Mrs. I. C. Schenck, of John street, occurred last night just after the train pulled into the Grant avenue station, and which nearly proved disastrous to Clarence Brouard. Mrs. Schenck fell down a twenty foot embankment and was seriously injured. Mr. Brouard fell in the same place and was not hurt.

According to eyewitnesses of the mishap, Mrs. Schenck alighted from the third car of the second section of the train and as there were no lights at the spot she could not see that she was on the brink of the embankment west of the station, and just as she expected her foot to touch solid ground she let go of the hand rail of the car and plunged down, striking on her face and landing in a heap at the bottom. Mr. Brouard, who followed and fell, shouted a warning to the other members of the party, thus averting what might have proved to have been a serious accident.

Dr. Stephen A. Aldrich, who was waiting at the station to take his folks home in his automobile, volunteered to remove Mrs. Schenck to her home, where Dr. Sarah D. Keeney examined Mrs. Schenck. The doctor found that no bones were broken, but will not be able to tell the exact extent of Mrs. Schenck's injuries until this afternoon. Mrs. Schenck's thigh and knee and the left side of her body are badly bruised and she was severely shaken up.

Those who were in the car and others who witnessed the accident say that the lack of lights and no warning of the place for debarkation were the causes of the accident. Others have said that a warning was given in each car that the passengers were to alight from the rear cars, as the platform and approaches to the station would not accommodate the long train. However this may be, Mrs. Schenck is badly hurt and Mr. Brouard had a narrow escape.

STILL DISCUSSING THE QUESTION OF A PUBLIC PARK.

The Park Commission of the borough and the public affairs committee of the Common Council of the city met in the office of Mayor Fisk last night, to discuss matters relative to the proposed park in the west end of the city.

Practically nothing of a definite nature was done. Maps with the proposed park plans were referred to in discussing minor details relative to certain limits of the park.

District Court Case.

The case of Otis B. Whitford vs. H. G. and Alice M. Matton, which was called before Judge William Newcorn this morning, was again postponed for a hearing until September 2. The case of Jacob Sachar against Simon Roth was adjourned to next Tuesday at two o'clock, and will be heard in chambers. The District court will hold no further sessions until September 2, but will be open for landlord and tenant cases which will be attended to by the clerk of the court, Horace G. Adams.

The contract case of Houghton, Miflin & Co., against Mrs. R. A. Barwise was settled out of court.

Baseball Tomorrow.

The Plainfield Baseball Club will play Rahway at Rahway tomorrow afternoon. The Y. M. C. A. team will play the Orange Y. M. C. A. at Crescent Oval tomorrow afternoon. This game will be called promptly at 3:30. These teams played a close game the last time they met and tomorrow's game ought to prove a good one.

Harry Weber Injured.

Harry Weber, the ten-year-old son of George Weber, of Westervelt avenue, while playing about the porch at his home yesterday afternoon, fell and broke his left arm. Dr. Rushmore was summoned and set the fractured bone, and the lad is laid up for the present.

MOTOR CAR COMPANY RECEIVER GIVES BOND.

Ray F. Anthony qualified Wednesday as receiver in bankruptcy for the Motor Car Company of New Jersey by furnishing a $30,000 bond. Mr. Anthony was appointed by United States Judge Rellstal in Trenton Tuesday afternoon, pursuant to a petition filed by Spaulding Frazer in behalf of three petitioning creditors, who were the Empire Automobile Supply Company, William S. Sheppard and the Newark Sunday Call.

The petition charged the preferential payment of $500 to the Diamond Rubber Company. While the petition did not set forth the assets and liabilities, it is said that the latter exceed the former by from $15,000 to $20,000. The principal stockholders of the alleged insolvent concern are Inglis M. Uppercu, a son-in-law of Gottfried Krueger, and William V. Snyder, Jr. Mr. Uppercu, who was treasurer of the company, is also head of the Detroit Cadillac Company of New York, which company has the control of the Cadillac automobile in New York and New Jersey.

The New York Americans have bought Shortstop William Roach from the Lancaster Tri-State League team for $1,900. He will stay with that team until the close of the present season. Te deal followed the recent visit of the Highlanders' scout Arthur Irwin. Last year Roach played with Youngstown, of the Ohio State League team. Brooklyn, of the National League, was also after Roach, but Irwin beat Ebbetts' man to the tape.

Pittsburg feels the loss of Honus Wagner's services these days. Yesterday a good batter would have done the trick for the National League leader, but the "good" batter was laid up with strained muscles.

Ira Thomas, the stalwart catcher of the Philadelphia Athletics, says of Connie Mack: "He never loses faith in his team," and quotes Mack as follows: "I known I've got a good ball team here, and hte only etam we have got to beat is the Detroits. You fellows can whip all the other teams as soon as you get into your stride. Supposing they do beat us today! We can beat 'em tomorrow and we'll beat 'em out at the end."

GOLF.

Jack Pearson, the Richmond County Country Club professional, showed that he was at the top of his game the other day by reeling off a 71 over his home course, thereby equalling the record held by himself. He went out in the exceptionally low score of 32, the best ever made. Although the first hole is about 400 yards, Pearson got it in 3, and his 2 at the 210-yard eighth was also excellent. The course covers a playing length of 6,006 yards. His card read as follows:

Out ...3 3 3 4 5 5 4 2 3—32
In ...4 4 5 3 5 5 4 3 4—39—71

Many of the professionals would like to have the date for the Metropolitan open championship tournament changed. The reason is that it conflicts with two important events—the Western open championship and the intercollegiate tournament, the first named to be held at Skokie and the other at Apawamis. The date for the Metropolitan tourney at Wykagyl has been set for September 15, 16 and 17, while the Western also falls on the last two dates. The college tournament will claim attention all that week.

While at Van Cortlandt Park recently Gilbert Nichols expressed the hope that the Metropolitan Golf Association would find it convenient to set a different time. His contention is that tournaments for professionals in this country are few enough at best, which makes it all the more unfortunate to have a conflict. Both he and George Sargent, the national title holder, said they would like to compete in the Western championship as well as the Metropolitan. If the Metropolitan Golf Association's officials care to make the change they might select the first three days of the following week of September 20, 21 and 22. This would make a solid week of competitive golf, for the reason that the invitation tournament at Morris county is scheduled for September 23, 24 and 25.

NEWARK'S PART OF THE BOND ISSUE

According to a report that is regarded in local financial circles as being well founded, out of the $8,000,000 bond issue that is to be made in the near future by the Public Service Corporation, $1,500,000 will be handled in Newark. It is understood here that sum will be allotted to the Fidelity Trust Company and that that concern will permit local banks and brokers to subscribe for a part of the allotment.

Those who are in a position to know the details as to prices declined yesterday to "talk in figures," as one of them expressed it, but it is said by brokers that the underwriting price will be 92½ and that the bonds will be put out at 97½. Whether or not these will be prices the Fidelity people decline to say. They refuse to discuss the matter in any of its phases. It was the same way at the offices of the Public Service.

"Our negotiations have been completed," it was said there yesterday, "but as we explained Wednesday the details are known only to President McCarter, and he's away."

It is said that when Mr. McCarter opened negotiations with J Pierpont Morgan & Co., of New York, and Drexel & Co., of Philadelphia, who are to do the underwriting, those concerns, following their usual custom in such cases, had experts examine the property and study its management. That they then agreed to underwrite the issue is taken as proof positive of the fact that they are well satisfied with not only the conditions of the property, but with its management.

So far as the Public Service securities are concerned things were very quiet in the local market yesterday. It was said by brokers that there was a good demand for the company's stock and certificates, but that offers of these securities were few and far between, and that little if any trading was done in them.

WM. E. BURNS, OF JERSEY, NOW HAS CLERKSHIP.

William E. Burns, of Elizabeth, who was appointed by Senator John Kean, in June, 1902, as a telephone operator in the United States Senate, has just been promoted to a clerkship in the State document room. In February, 1905, Mr. Burns was detailed from the secretary's office of the Senate to the document room, and soon showed adaptability to cope with the intricate files of that office.

The many friends of Mr. Burns rejoice at his well-earned promotion.

Fewer Failures Reported.

The total liabilities in commercial failures in the United States in July, according to Dun's Review, were the smallest of any month since March, 1907, the month of the so-called silent panic. In only six of the months since 1905 does the total of liabilities appear less. The number of failures was 1,105, as against 1,232 in July of last year. The liabilities in July were $9,527,893 in all, as compared with $12,607,122 in June of this year and $14,222,126 in July, 1908; $12,334,710 in July, 1907, and $6,919,014 in the same month of 1906. Banking failures during July number four with liabilities of $1,032,400.

NEW YORK IS PUT ON THE DEFENSIVE

Interesting developments have followed the communication of Edlow W. Harrison, an engineer in the employ of the Passaic Valley Sewerage Commission, to Hugh Gordon Miller, special assistant to the Attorney-General of the United States, regarding New York's pollution of the bay and the contention that, therefore, the Empire State's suit against the local commission and this commonwealth can have no standing in court.

The recoil of the boomerang, to which Mr. Harrison's communication gave increased impetus, neared home this week, when the pollution committee of the New York Merchants' Association made application to George W. Wickersham, Attorney General of the United States, to take action against Greater New York to begin proceedings to compel the city to improve its present methods of sewage disposal. It pointed out also that under a federal law fines amounting to nearly $66,000,000 have accumulated against the city. According to the committee's letter to the Attorney-General, the fine amounts to $31,200 daily.

But this is not all. It appears from the pollution committee's letter that, while the State authorities of New York have been actively engaged in the legal attempt to prevent New Jersey delivering purified sewage into the bay, they have utterly ignored a petition, which has long been on file in the Executive chamber at Albany, to compel their chief city to observe the law.

Several years ago, the letter goes on, the Metropolitan Sewerage Commission was created by the State of New York for the very purpose of studying and reporting on sewage disposal, and a strong recommendation was sent by the body to Mayor McClellan urging that "no further sewer work be done without taking into consideration the early need for sewage disposal." Despite the fact that numerous plans were submitted, the committee continues, no action was taken on the recommendation.

"In view, therefore * * *" the letter concludes, "of indifference of the municipality of Greater New York, we respectfully request that the Department of Justice institute such proceedings as may protect the health, the commercial interests and the general welfare of two of the most important States and the principal harbor of the United States."

Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., will meet tonight in regular session.

BULLDOG FASTENS ITS TEETH IN HORSE'S LEG.

A horse belonging to the Rahway Ice Company was bitten badly by a bulldog in Rahway yesterday. Rolla Pierce, superintendent of the company, dressed the injuries.

The horse, which was one of a team, was in front of Fire Chief D. E. Kennedy's place when the dog came up the street and bit the horse just above the fetlock.

The animal plunged and kicked until freed from the brute, which was hurried out of the way by a Hungarian, who disappeared before he could be identified or arrested. It is feared that the dog was rabid.

STOP MINTING PENNIES; NEW DIES TO BE MADE

Secretary MacVeagh of the Treasury Department announced yesterday that he had decided to have the minting of the new Lincoln pennies stopped for the present, and that new dies would be prepared as soon as possible, eliminating the initials of the designer, which now appear so prominently, and substituting the single initial B. in an obscure part of the design. The Secretary said that none of the pennies issued so far would be called in, but that the minting would be stopped because a sufficient supply was on hand. The initials V. D. B. are those of the designer, V. D. Brenner, of New York, and the single initial, in an inconspicuous place, will be left in the new dies as recognition of Mr. Brenner's work.

This decision as to changing the dies created much surprise, as it was announced at the Treasury Department Wednesday that the new coins would be continued in circulation for the present, at least and that the use of the initials on them was merely in line with a custom that had prevailed for years. The prominent position given the initials, however, awakened widespread criticism, and yesterday's action followed the further consideration of the matter.

Mr. MacVeagh said yesterday that he did not know that the initials would appear in embossed form on the pennies, and that he was surprised when he saw the prominent place they had in the design. It had been customary in the past to allow designers to cut one or more of their initials into the design somewhere, but these letters usually had been so small as to require a magnifying glass to discover them. On the Lincoln pennies Mr. Brenner's initials appear directly under the two heads of wheat, and are in the same character of letters, though not quite so large, as the denomination and the words "In God We Trust."

Demand for the pennies at the Treasury continues practically unabated. A large consignment was received from the Philadelphia mint yesterday, and no difficulty was experienced in meeting all requests for them.

Up to yesterday, according to figures given out at the Mint Bureau late yesterday afternoon, $265,000 of the pennies had been struck. Of this amount $76,000 worth were sent to Washington. Practically the entire amount has been disposed of by the Treasury.

KICKED BY HIS MASTER DOG COMMITS SUICIDE.

The drowning of John Marvin's dog Gyp yesterday in Beattie's Pond, near Montclair Heights, according to the story told by Marvin, was as clear a case of suicide as ever took place, Marvin, who is a farmer, owned the dog for nearly two years. The animal made itself useful on the farm, and had always been well treated.

Yesterday Marvin called on Gyp to chase the cattle out of a patch of woods, and the dog hastened to do his master's bidding. Gyp got them all out into the open except one young heifer, which gave him a great deal of trouble. The dog finally got it clear of the woods, and Gyp followed it, biting at its heels. Marvin called the dog several times, but Gyp was evidently determined to hunt the heifer until it joined the other stock. When Marvin reached Gyp he gave the dog a heavy kick in the ribs. Gyp did not run away, but looked pleadingly up into his master's face. This look was answered by another kick from the farmer's heavy shoe, which knocked the dog off its feet. Then the farmer walked on toward the barnyard.

As he neared his home Marvin looked around to see if Gyp was following him, but he saw the dog trotting away in the direction of the pond. Two hours later the children found the animal dead in about six inches of water on the shore of the pond. Marvin is inconsolable, as he feels sure that his treatment of the dog was the cause of the suicide.

CHILD SWALLOWS A BALLOON: OPERATION SAVES HER LIFE.

To save the life of 7-year-old Mary Yosh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Yosh, of Bay Way, who had swallowed a toy balloon, Dr. James Lynch performed an operation on her last night while removing the child in the ambulance to the Alexian Hospital, Elizabeth. The child was choking to death.

The surgeon made an incision in her neck and removed the balloon, which was lodged in the windpipe. He inserted a silver tube through the opening in the larnyx enabling the child to breathe. The little girl regained consciousness shortly after the wound was sewed up and was taken to her home.

She placed the rubber end of the balloon in her mouth to moisten it, and it accidentally slipped down her throat.

Plainfield is not afraid to enforce its dog ordinance. It charges $2.50 for a dog license, of which the city clerk gets 25 cents for issuing a tag. It has licensed 950 dogs and the clerk has received $237.50 and the city $2,137.50—New Brunswick Times.

TROLLEY COMPANIES BROKE COURT'S ORDER.

On the strength of an injunction granted by Vice-Chancellor James T Bergen in 1906, forbiddig railroad companies to lay tracks at Bradley Beach, proceedings have been installed declaring the Atlantic Coast Electric Railway Company and the Asbury Park and Sea Girt Railroad Company in contempt of court for the laying of 128 feet of roadway in the borough.

Charles E. Cook, counsel for the municipality, has had the papers served not only upon the two companies, but upon George B. Cade, superintendent, and Charles Hereth, overseer of construction

Last Friday Vice-Chancellor Garrison issued an order to show cause why the two companies should not be punished for contempt, and this order is returnable at Trenton Tuesday.

It is claimed by Bradley Beach that the railroad companies built 128 feet of track on Main street to overcome a switch, and that the work was done under cover of darkness July 26, despite the protest of several Bradley Beach officials, who discovered the work in progress.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"Graustark," or a Love Behind a Throne, at the Plainfield theatre on Monday night, August 9, is a theatrical offering worthy the serious consideration of all classes of theatre patrons. It is the product of America's most popular and successful novelist, George Barr McCutcheon, whose works for the past six years have outsold those of any other American author. It is also universally considered the best work he has ever written, for the sale of "Graustark" has exceeded the combined sale of all his other works which include "Brewster's Millions," "Castle Craneycrow," "Beverly of Graustark," "The Sherrods," "Nedra," "The Flyers," etc. The first scene of the play represents the exterior of the Hotel Regengetz at Edelweiss, the capital city of the principality of "Graustark." The second and fourth acts occur in the boudoir of the "Princess Yetive," while the third and fifth acts take place in the throne room of the castle. The locale of the play affords unusual opportunities for the display of rich and gorgeous costuming and elaborate scenic mountings, which has been taken advantage of in every possible manner.

PROPOSITION FOR SHORE THEATRE TURNED DOWN.

The Beach Commissioners have rejected the proposition of Walter Rosenburg to build an ocean theatre at Asbury Park, claiming that the $40,000 for a twenty-year lease is not sufficient. The offer was made at a meeting of the commissioners late yesterday afternoon. Commissioners Clarence S. Steiner and William L. Gordon did not agree on the matter. The latter thought that the offer was a liberal one and was in favor of making a contract with Mr. Rosenberg. Mr. Steiner, however, is set upon having the Casino Theatre converted again into a convention hall and given back to the public.

Mr. Gordon is enthusiastic over the erection of a new convention hall with $60,000 of the proposed bond issue of $150,000. He believes this money would be of better use in this way than utilized to extend the boardwalk to Interlaken, as has been planned. He figures that the convention hall could be built upon the fishing pier. So enthusiastic has the commissioner become that he asked E. A. Arend, an architect, to show a prospective drawing of his (Gordon's) idea.

It is the belief of the commissioner that a hall capable of holding 10,000 persons could be erected on the pier and thus increase the renting value on the beach front.

is growing and in some inexplicable way the team managed to back up far enough to mount the plough, and for a few minut s I was not certain whether the horses had decided to turn a back somersault or that it was some new way they had of ploughing in this State and which I had never learned. It was truly a comical sight for a few moments. But we got the hors s going again and we finished the last furrow without further incident. Then to fill out the day's work I got out the harrow and smoothed the whole thing out.

Days Grow in Beauty.

"The experiences of one day are much like those of another, except that each one brings to me more forcibly the fact that God in His goodness makes each one more beautiful. The sky takes on a more beautiful blue; the sun shines just a little brighter; there is just a little more radiance shed abroad, and it is reflected in everything around me. Oh, yes! the simple life as I live it here is the ideal life. It gets beyond the comprehension of man what an infinite pleasure lurks in every blade of grass; what a poem may be found in the leaf of every tree—the whole is a symphony of nature's handiwork to be comprehended only by a nature lover."

Dr. Eaton takes pride in pointing out the beauty about his farm. The farm is on a side hill in the centre of the long range and comprises about one hundred acres, practically all cleared. The farm extends all the way across the valley and its limits are the two sets of hills which stretch away for miles east and west. It is an ideal spot for the purpose for which Dr. Eaton bought—as a health resort without the usual accompaniments of fashion and fashion's exactions.

Here one may be comfortable to the last degree and still not be afraid of fracturing any of the laws laid down for the devotees of the mode. In the warmest weather the place is comfortable and blankets are needed at night. At the southern extreme of the farm is a sheet of water which irrigates the lower end of the fields in which the doctor's small herd of Jersey cows graze. The upper portion of the field is irrigated by water drawn from a well driven into the rock a hundred feet. This water is carried to the side fields by a series of canals, thus moistering a large area which would otherwise have suffered during the dry spell through which this whole section has just passed. That this system of watering the earth has been a success is proved by a glance at the vegetables growing on the hillside— row upon row of healthy tomato plants, lima beans, cabbages and other small garden truck and fields of waving corn.

Children Enjoy it Too.

The doctor's children, of which there are five—four girls and one boy—are healthy and plump and appear to have taken to the life of farmers' children with the same simple faith as they do the every day routine of school when in the city.

The doctor is the same irresistible personality in his farmer garb as when in the pulpit. Tall, vigorous, magnetic and the picture of health, as he stands leaning on the handle of the hoe which he has been plying among the weeds he is just as much at home as though standing before one of his immense audiences delivering a sermon.

Speaking of the problems that oftentimes confront men who follow agricultural pursuits, Dr. Eaton said: "From my earliest childhood I have been a natural farmer and the experience gained at the old farm in Ohio has enabled me to do the apparently hard things and solve the knotty problems of sewing and planting which the gentleman farmer usually leaves to his hired expert. Yes, experience is the best and most thorough teacher."

While the pastor of the Euclid Avenue Church in Cleveland, Dr. Eaton enjoyed his penchant for farming, but on a much smaller scale. He said that he finds the Jersey men cautious, sturdy and shrewd and believes the State to be one of the most delightful in which to live. Of Plainfield, the "City Beautiful," he has nothing but words of praise to utter. Not only the city itself but the people are so far above the average that he believes it can confidently be held up as a model, both in its government and its well kept streets and handsome residences. "And just to think it is only twelve minutes away from these forests is almost incredible," he said in parting.—N. Y. Herald.

OSBORNE THE CHOICE OF NEW IDEA PARTY.

Edmund B. Osborne, vice-president of the Municipal Art Commission, has been named as candidate for the legislature by the New Idea branch of the Republican party, at Montclair, and the Republican leaders of that place have also chosen him as their candidate for the same honor, so that he will in all probability be nominated on the Republican ticket.

Mr. Osborne is one of the most active factors in the Municipal Art Commission, which has undertaken the beautification of Montclair. He takes an active interest in all that pertains to the welfare of Montclair.

TARIFF BILL IS LAW; VOTE STANDS 47-31

The Payne-Aldrich tariff bill was signed by President Taft in the President's room of the Senate at five minutes after 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and at 6 o'clock the extraordinary session of the Sixty-first Congress stood adjourned without day.

Three hours earlier the conference report on the bill had been adopted by the Senate by a vote of 47 to 31. Seven Republicans, who have come to be known as "progressives," voted against the bill and one Democrat, McEnery, of Louisiana, was paired in favor of it. The seven Republican Senators were Beveridge, of Indiana; Bristow, of Kansas; Clapp and Nelson, of Minnesota; Cummins and Dolliver, of Iowa, and La Follette, of Wisconsin. There was no motion to recommit the measure.

President Taft went to the Capitol at fifteen minutes before 5 o'clock to sign the tariff bill, the Philippine bill and a few other measures that were awaiting his signature. It was the first time since he assumed his office that he had been called on to make a visit to the President's room in the Capitol building. He remained there about an hour and went away fifteen minutes before Congress adjourned. Mr. Taft, was accompanied by Fred W. Carpenter, secretary to the President; M. C. Latta, assistant secretary, and Capt. Archibald W. Butt, his military aid. The members of his Cabinet were all present except Secretary Ballinger, who is absent from the city.

At Proctor's.

The strong program offered at Proctor's theatre last night and for the balance of the week, attracted a capacity audience. Hearty applause greeted every performer and the vaudeville was pronounced the best yet presented at the popular playhouse. The films d'art were of exceptional merit and interesting. The vaudeville includes Edward Abbott & Co., in a comedy sketch, "A Fools Errand;" Bill Smith "The Village Bill Poster;" Stevens & Paul, comedians, and other headliners.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

The annual country fair of Energetic Lodge will be held at Westville Saturday evening.

Herbert Berringer, of Pennsgrove, who was stricken with paralysis Tuesday, is in a critical condition.

Rev. John Lesh has resigned the pastorate of the Cross Keys M. E. church to become vice-principal of a normal school in Pennsylvania.

Prominent Democrats of Burlington county will be entertained at dinner at the Florence Hotel Tuesday evening next by the Florence Democratic Club.

Collingswood ministers and laymen, representing the several churches, are organizing a church federation, embracing all evangelical churches in the borough.

A dance given at Rancocas Park last week for the benefit of the Burlington County Hospital at Mt. Holly netted the institution $100, so the managers announce.

Ocean City will hold its "Night in Venice," or bay carnival, on Tuesday evening, August 17. This decision was reached by the committee at a meeting Tuesday evening.

Former Judge Mulford Ludlam, one of the most prominent Democrats in the State, is critically ill at his home in Millville, and physicians state that he cannot recover.

The application of William Flynn for the transfer of his license, at Locust and Chestnut streets, Camden, to Thomas A. Williams, was granted by the excise board last night.

At a meeting of the Millville Board of Education last night a medical inspector was appointed to see that all conditions menacing to the health of school children be eliminated.

Several valuable dogs have been poisoned by pounded glass at Beverly. The S. P. C. A. agent is investigating the matter, and the arrest of a prominent resident may cause a sensation.

The Gloucester County Board of Elections organized yesterday, electing Theodore S. Burrows chairman and Thomas C. Dilkes secretary. The board meets again August 25 to appoint the local election boards.

Undaunted by the numerous failures on the proposition to improve the turnpike from Malaga to Millville, the Landis Township Committee has decided to try again to induce the Board of Freeholders to do the much-needed work, and the committee will agree to pay ten per cent. of the cost.

An ordinance introduced by Councilman Bentley, and a resolution signed by the majority of the residents of the thoroughfare, in Burlington, asking that a bitulithic pavement be put down, and presented at the monthly meeting of City Council last night, marked the first active move in the long-planned campaign to remedy the disgraceful condition of Broad street, otherwise known as "Mud Hollow," the city's principal thoroughfare.

The Gloucester Fire Department, at a meeting last night, appointed a committee, consisting of William J. Stetser, Fenton Byers, John Moore, Joseph Connolley, Augustus Schoettle, Joseph Haughey, Nathan Warfield, John D. Smith, Victor Eichenhoger and Patrick Mealey, to arrange for the celebration of the thirty-fourth anniversary on Thanksgiving Day. The department will have a parade and carnival, and will ask all of the fire departments in South Jersey to participate.

INSPECTOR CRUSHED TO DEATH BETWEEN CARS.

Endeavoring to aid a cripple who was trying to board a car, Thomas Foster, an inspector for the Public Service Corporation, was caught between two cars and crushed to death in the trolley shed at the foot of Exchange place, Jersey City, yesterday. The tracks run close together there.

Foster was unable to step aside as a Pacific avenue car entered the shed, and James Clancy, the motorman, was unable to check the car in time. Foster was dead when dragged from between the cars. Clancy was arrested, but paroled at once, as no blame is placed upon him. Foster leaves a widow and four children.

"Black Handers" Demand $100.

Another "Black Hand" letter has been received at South River, this time by Dominick Macello, who bought the shoemaker shop of Thomas Batello. It was postmarked Dearmont, Vt. The police have not disclosed the contents except that it demanded $100, to be paid on the receipt of another letter. The demand is in the same handwriting as that received by Batello last June, demanding $400 or his life. He sold out the next day and sailed for Italy.

CAPITOL EMPLOYES WANT ALL DAY OFF.

There was a rumor around the State house, Trenton late Tuesday afternoon that on the day the employes go to Sea Girt, on invitation of Governor Fort, Thursday, August 12, they would be required to do a half day's work, and then go down on the 1 o'clock train to the tented city by the sea.

The men seemed to think that they should go down on the early morning train, and argued that inasmuch as they come on duty early in the morning most of their work would be done in time for them to catch the 8:57 train in the morning, and thus give them a chance to see the sea and the whole camp while they called to pay their respects to Governor Fort.

It was taken for granted that there would be a half day's work required of them on that date instead of getting the whole day, and there is much grumbling.

The going of the employes to Sea Girt is by invitation of the Governor, and it is likely that he will fix the hour for their reception, and until that has been fixed there is no telling what duties will have to be performed for the public appearance of the building before the men can be allowed to go on their holiday.

Whispering Smith

But the harm was done. Puss, more excited than her mistress, lost her head when she got to the chicken-yard, and with sufficiently bad results. When Dicksie ran out a few moments afterward for a glass of water for McCloud, Puss was calmly wiping her hands, and in the sink lay the quivering form of young Caesar. Dicksie caught her favorite up by the legs and suppressed a cry. There could be no mistake. She cast a burning look on Puss. It would do no good to storm now. Dicksie only wrung her hands and returned to McCloud.

He rose in the happiest mood. He could not see what a torment Dicksie was in, and took the water without asking himself why it trembled in her hand. Her restrained manner did not worry him, for he felt that his fight at the river was won, and the prospect of fried chicken composed him. Even the long hour before Puss, calm and inviting in a white cap and apron, appeared to announce supper, passed like a dream. When Dicksie rose to lead the way to the dining room, McCloud walked on air; the high color about her eyes intoxicated him. Not till half the fried chicken, with many compliments from McCloud, had disappeared, and the plate had gone out for the second dozen biscuits did he notice Dicksie's abstraction.

"I'm sure you need worry no longer about the water," he observed, reassuringly. "I think the worst of the danger is past."

Dicksie looked at the tablecloth with wide-open eyes. "I feel sure that it is. I am no longer worrying about that."

"It's nothing I can do or leave undone, is it?" asked McCloud, laughing a little as he implied in his tone that she must be worrying about something.

"It's a pretty good plan not to worry about anything."

"Do you think so?"

"Why, we all thought so last night. Heavens!" McCloud drew back in his chair. "I never offered you a piece of chicken! What have I been thinking of?"

"Oh, I wouldn't eat it anyway!" cried Dicksie.

"You wouldn't? It is delicious. Do have a plate and a wing at least."

"Really, I could not bear to think of it," she said, pathetically.

He spoke lower. "Something is troubling you. I have no right to a confidence, I know," he added, taking a biscuit.

Her eyes fell to the floor. "It is nothing. Pray, don't mind me. May I fill your cup?" she asked, looking up. "I am afraid I worry too much over what has happened and can't be helped. Do you never do that?"

They left the dining room. Marion came down. But they had hardly seated themselves before the living room fire when a messenger arrived with word that McCloud was wanted at the river. His chagrin at being dragged away was so apparent that Marion and Dicksie sympathized with him and laughed at him. "'I never worry about what can't be helped,'" Dicksie murmured.

He looked at Marion. "That's a shot at me. You don't want to go down, do you?" he asked, ironically, looking from one to the other.

"Why, of course, I'll go down," responded Dicksie, promptly. "Marion caught cold last night, I guess, so you will excuse her, I know. I will be back in an hour, Marion, and you can toast your cold while I'm gone."

"But you mustn't go alone!" protested McCloud.

Dicksie lifted her chin the least bit. "I shall be going with you, shall I not? And if the messenger has gone back I shall have to guide you. You never could find your way alone."

"But I can go," interposed Marion, rising.

"Not at all; you can not go!" announced Dicksie. "I can protect both Mr. McCloud and myself. If he should arrive down there under the wing of two women he would never hear the last of it. I am mistress here still, I think; and I sha'n't be leaving home, you know, to make the trip!"

McCloud looked at Marion. "I never worry over what can't be helped—though it is dollars to cents that those fellows don't need me down there any more than a cat needs two tails. And how will you get back?" he asked, turning to Dicksie.

"I will ride back!" returned Dicksie, loftily. "But you may, if you like, help me get my horse up."

"Are you sure you can find your way back?" persisted McCloud.

Dicksie looked at him in surprise. "Find my way back?" she echoed, softly. "I could not lose it. I can ride over any part of this country at noon or at midnight, asleep or awake, with a saddle or without, with a bridle or without, with a trail or without. I've ridden every horse that has ever come on the Crawing Stone ranch. I could ride when I was three years old. Find my way back?"

The messenger had gone when the two rode from the house. The sky was heavily overcast, and the wind blew such a gale from the south and west that one could hardly hear what the other said. McCloud could not have ridden from the house to the barn in the utter darkness, but his horse followed Dicksie's. She halted frequently on the trail for him to come up with her, and after they had crossed the alfalfa fields McCloud did not care whether they ever found the path again or not. "It's great, isn't it?" he exclaimed, coming up to her after opening a gate in the dark. "Where are you?"

"This way," laughed Dicksie. "Look out for the trail here. Give me your hand and let your horse have his head. If he slips, drop off quick on this side." McCloud caught her hand. They rode for a moment in silence, the horses stepping cautiously. "All right now," said Dicksie; "you may let go." But McCloud kept his horse up close and clung to the warm hand. "The camp is just around the hill," murmured Dicksie, trying to pull away. "But of course if you would like to ride in holding my hand you may!"

"No," said McCloud, "of course not—not for worlds! But, Miss Dicksie, couldn't we ride back to the house and ride around the other way into camp? I think the other way into the camp—say, around by the railroad bridge—would be prettier, don't you?"

For answer she touched Jim lightly with her lines and his spring released her hand very effectively. As she did so the trail turned, and the camp-fire, whipped in the high wind, blazed before them.

Whispering Smith and Lance Dunning were sitting together as the two galloped up. Smith helped Dicksie to alight. She was conscious of her color and her eyes were now unduly bright. Moreover, Whispering Smith's glance rested so calmly on both McCloud's face and her own that Dicksie felt as if he saw quite through her and knew everything that had happened since they left the house.

Lance was talking to McCloud. "Don't abuse the wind," McCloud was saying. "It's our best friend to-night, Mr. Dunning. It is blowing the water off-shore. Where is the trouble?" For answer Dunning led McCloud off toward the bend, and Dicksie was left alone with Whispering Smith.

He made a seat for her on the windward side of the big fire. When she had seated herself she looked up in great contentment to ask if he was not going to sit down beside her. The brown coat, the high black hat, and the big eyes of Whispering Smith had already become a part of her mental store. She saw that he seemed preoccupied, and sought to draw him out of his abstraction.

"I am so glad you and Mr. McCloud are getting acquainted with Cousin Lance," she said. "And do you mind my giving you a confidence, Mr. Smith? Lance has been so unreasonable about this matter of the railroad's coming up the valley and powwowing so much with lawyers and ranchers that he has been forgetting about everything at home. He is so much older than I am that he ought to be the sensible one of the family, don't you think so? It frightens me to have him losing at cards and drinking. I am afraid he will get into some shooting affair. I don't understand what has come over him, and I worry about it. I believe you could influence him if you knew him."

"What makes you think that?" asked Whispering Smith, but his eyes were on the fire.

"Because these men he spends his time with in town—the men who fight and shoot so much—are afraid of you. Don't laugh at me. I know it is quite true in spite of their talk. I was afraid of you myself until—"

"Until—"

"But I think it is because I don't understand things that I am so afraid. I am not naturally a coward. I'm sure I could not be afraid of you if I understood things better. And there is Marion. She puzzles me. She will never speak of her husband—I don't know why. And I don't know why Mr. McCloud is so hard on Mr. Sinclair—Mr. Sinclair seems so kind and good-natured."

Whispering Smith looked from the fire into Dicksie's eyes. "What should you say if I gave you a confidence?"

She opened her heart to his searching gaze. "Would you trust me with a confidence?"

BASEBALL.

The Plainfield A. C. defeated the Plainfield Colored Giants on St. Mary's Oval yesterday afternoon by the score of 8 to 3. Slocum had his usual assortment of puzzling curves and sent ten batters away from the plate by the strike out route. Tommy Mullen caught his usual good game. The Kline brothers who did the battery work for the Giants, put up a good game.

JERSEYMEN GIVEN IMPORTANT POSTS

Just before the house adjourned yesterday, Uncle Joe Cannon shook the plum tree, and from it fell fruit that made some hearts glad and others bow down with sorrow. For weeks and weeks the house membership has awaited with keen expectancy the announcement of the list of committee assignments.

Among those whose heads were placed on the block were Representatives Cooper, of Wisconsin; Fowler, of New Jersey, and Gardiner, of Massachusetts. These gentlemen were among the most pestiferous among the Republican insurgents. Each was succeeded by a man that has espoused the cause of the regular organization. Olmstead, of Pennsylvania, was named chairman of the insular committee; Vreeland, of New York, placed at the head of the committee on banking and currency, while Rodenburg, of Illionis, succeeded to the chairmanship of the committee on industrial arts and expositions.

The important chairmanships of the important committees of the house now are as follows: Ways and means, Sereno Payne, of New York; appropriations, James E. Tawney, Minnesota; judiciary, Richard W. Parker, New Jersey; rivers and harbors, D. S. Alexander, New York; interstate and foreign commerce, James R. Mann, Illionis; labor, John J. Gardner, New Jersey; pensions, Henry C. Loudenslauger, New Jersey; immigration, Benjamin F. Howell, New Jersey.

CADETS' HOLIDAY ALLOWED; NO HARVARD FOOTBALL GAME.

Official denial is made at West Point of a New York report to the effect that the usual Christmas leave of four or six days, which has hitherto been alloted to cadets at West Point who have less than twenty-five demerits and are free from debt, has been abolished. Such leave, it is stated, will be granted as heretofore to the students entitled to it.

The report had it that the change had been made in order to increase the amount of classroom work so as to offset in a measure the increased time devoted to social and athletic events, since a football game with Harvard had been added to the West Point calendar. It was likwise officially denied that any such game with Harvard had been arranged.

LOOKS BAD FOR CONGER

STILL IN NEWARK HOSPITAL.

Hilton Hotel Keeper's Wife And a Milkman to Try to Identify Plainfielder As Assailant.

Further investigation by the police of the robbery of Franklin's Hotel in Maplewood, and the breaking into of Bronner's Hotel at Hilton, Tuesday night, has led the authoiritiies to believe that both were the work of Edward Conger, of 415 West Second street, this city, who was arrested in Newark early Wednesday morning and is now at the City Hospital.

According to the police, the description of the man who was driven away at the point of a revolver by Mrs. Edward Frankton, and who was later seen by a milkman at the Hilton hostelry, tallies with Conger. Mrs. Frankton and the milkman will call at the hospital this afternoon to see if they can identify the prisoner.

Conger was arrested while driving a horse at Bank and Wickliffe streets, Newark, and at the Fourth Precinct Station admitted that he had stolen the horse in Rahway Tuesday night, after he had entered the confectionery store of F. C. Bauer and held Mrs. Bauer up at the point of a revolver. Hearing of the robberies in Hilton and Maplewood, and learning that the man who committed them had a horse and runabout, Captain Vogel, of the Fourth Precinct, sent Patrolmen Kaas and Sebold to make inquries, and they obtained the description. Vogel believes that Conger was the man, and said that if he was identified he would not be turned over to the Rahway authorities until he had been tried at Newark.

Mrs. Frankton told the police that at midnight Tuesday she heard a crash of glass, and, leaning out of an upperwindow, saw a man enter the saloon after he had thrown out the pieces of the large plate glass window he had broken. Mrs. Frankton procured a revolver. She screamed and the intruder appeared through the broken window.

"Do not be alarmed," he said, "a dog jumped through your window and I went in to see what damage was done."

Jumping in a carriage, he whipped up the horse and drove away.

A few minutes later a milkman heard glass crash at Bronner's Hotel, three-quarters of a mile below the Frankton place, and saw a man on the porch. He called to him, and the man answered that there was a fight in the saloon in the dark, and advised the milkman to "beat it, as I am going to do."

At Frankton's the man got $1.60 from the cash register and a box of cigars. Nothing was taken at the second place. After his arrest Conger was taken sick at the Fourth Precinct Police Station and was removed to the City Hospital, in Newark, where he is under arrest. Chief of Police Wright, of Rahway, was there Thursday and wanted to take the man back with him, but will have to await his discharge from the hospital.

George Washington Westcott.

He is survived by a wife, three sons and two daughters. The sons are Ellsworth C. Westcott, of this city; G. R. Westcott, of Pittsburg; Thomas B. Westcott, of Jeannette, Pa., and the daughters are Mrs. Thomas Lee, Sr., and Mrs. W. H. Taylor, of Camden.

There will also be special music, including solos and duets by the Price sisters, of Burlington.

NICHOLS HEADS COUNCIL

L. B. Woolston Resigns as President of Borough Fathers.

COUNCIL'S ROUTINE BUSINESS.

Street Improvements Considered—Mayor Townsend Compliments Police on Charter Day Showing.

Councilman Charles L. Nichols was made president of the borough Common Council at the meeting last night to take the place of Councilman Lemuel B. Woolston, whose resignation in that capacity was received and accepted. Mr. Woolston resigned owing to the fact that he is to be in Europe for two months.

In the report of Recorder Dolliver it was shown that there were 35 arrests during the month of July; $105 had been collected in fines; $50 was given to the Somerset Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and $10 to the State Commissioner of Motor Vehicles. The total amount of borough bills was shown, by the treasurer's report, to be $2,676.01. The fire department expenses for the month were $320.32.

The petition of George Marsh and five property owners in the vicinity of Greenbrook road and Maple avenue, to have flagging laid on the north side of Greenbrook road from Maple avenue to Harrison street, was granted. A representative of E. S. Hooley protested against the granting of the petition at the last Council meeting, claiming that Mr. Hooley was by far the largest property owner there, and, as the property was undeveloped, he should not be compelled to bear the expense of the improvement which he considered unnecessary. Owing to the fact that ten new houses are being erected on Jefferson avenue and several new ones on Maple avenue, as well as the statement of Mr. Klotz, who lives nearby, the Council passed the resolution.

Two thousand cubic yards of dirt were purchased from Frank Mobus at seven and one-half cents per cubic yard to be used on West End avenue between Rockview avenue to Greenbrook road. Two thousand yards were purchased at the last meeting at ten cents per; but a property owner along that thoroughfare offered to pay the difference in cost so that the street could be made sixty feet wide instead of forty feet wide. This will be done.

James L. Oliff, the new borough health officer, was appointed a marshal for special duty. Permits to alter buildings were given to Theodore Martin, of Chatham street; Samuel Taub, of Warren and Chatham streets. The Gesang and Turn Verein Society were given a permit to put a two foot air space under their floor and also to put in iron girders and supports. It was decided to buy a tank car load of oil for use on the borough streets.

Mayor Townsend took occasion to compliment the borough police for effective work during the Charter Day celebration. Their work in handling the crowd and numerous automobiles on West End avenue at the fireworks exhibition was especially commended. "Good order throughout the borough was also maintained and but one arrest was necessary," he said, "and, in the parade, our police looke well."

Miss Curry Receives Gift.

There was a jolly time last night at the Netherwood Camp for the children. George E. Hall gave the youngsters his annual treat. A professional magician passed away an entertaining hour, there was a short sketch by three young ladies, some patriotic songs, a general passing of pretty cards, lemon sticks and boxes of candy, and then the good-night song. Miss Curry received a beautiful book from Miss Hawkins and Mr. Hall as a token of their love and affection.

TO TELL OF CITY POLICE

Patrolman Dobson Will Read a Paper at State Association Convention.

THE ASSOCIATION'S STRENGTH.

With Membership of Eighteen Plainfield Patrolmen Are Big Factors in State Organization's Work.

Patrolman George K. Dobson, who has been elected to represent the local Patrolmen's Association at the ninth annual convention of the New Jersey Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, to be held at Paterson Thursday, September 9, will be accompanied by Patrolman John Payne, the local organization's representative to legislature, and Patrolman Richard Birmingham. State President Henry W. Weller, of Newark, will be in the convention chair, and the program includes a big parade of police and a banquet. Dobson will read a paper before the convention, and has taken for his topic "The Good Government and Policing of "The City Beautiful," and "Ideal City."

Elected because of his ability as a speaker, Patrolman Dobson has already prepared his brief, and will talk about Plainfield's beauties, its shady macadamized streets, its beautiful homes, its efficient schools, and its excellent government in all departments. He will tell of Plainfield's police force, of its executive heads, of the excellent conditions because of high liquor license and careful local legislation. In connection with the police, he will speak a good word for the efficiency of the plain clothes men, citing instances of the efficiency of the non-uniformed in capturing criminals wanted in other cities of the State, and in guarding the streets by night. He will tell of the work of the mounted squad during the Charter Day celebration and explain the call box system for patrolmen's reports and cite instances of its efficiency, and will speak of the harmony and fraternalism existing among the policemen, in accordance with the tenets of the association.

The local association, which was organized last December, has a membership of eighteen patrolmen, and there are three department superiors as honorary members. Patrolman William G. Messler, known in police circles throughout the State as "Honest Bill" Messler, is president of the Plainfield Association, and came into prominance in the State association a few months ago by his diplomatic decision as judge advocate in a deadlock involving the twelve police precincts of Hudson county. He is talked of as a delegate for the New Jersey association to the National convention of the patrolmen to be held at Denver next year, when his fellow delegates will be State President Henry W. Weller, of Newark, and E. S. Longstreet, of Asbury Park.

Patrolman Charles A. Flynn is vice-president of the Plainfield association, Patrolman Cornelius McCarthy its secretary; Patrolman Dennis O'Keefe, treasurer; Patrolman Daniel MacDonald, financial secretary; Patrolman Arthur McGinley, sergeant-at-arms, and Patrolman John Payne, representative to legislature. The officers of the local association were installed by a delegation of State officers from Newark and Jersey City. The Plainfielders are directly responsible for the formation of local patrolmen's associations at New Brunswick and Harrison, and delegations from the Plainfield force attended the installation ceremonies in those places.

The New Jersey Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, which now has a membership of nearly 3,000 patrolmen, was organized about nine years ago by Chief Monahan, of Jersey City, and ex-Chief Adams, of Newark. Its formation was for the purpose of securing co-operation among the police to get the best results in dealing with police matters in the larger cites. Local organzatons are now establshed in about twenty-five cities and towns throughout the State. The key-note of the organization is fraternalism and the men co-operate to quash favoritism and partiality. There are sick and death benefits.

The strength of the organization is shown by the success with which it fathered the police pension bill, the tenure of office bill and the measure requiring a policeman to serve five years as patrolman before advancement to superior office. Association influence was also used in securing physical and mental examinations for police candidates, and examinations for vacancies among superiors, the idea being to secure the most able and efficient men among the police.

CO. K. OFF FOR CAMP

Local Military Organization Starts on Long Walk to Sea Girt.

WILL CAMP WHILE EN ROUTE.

First and Second Battalions Will Engage in Mimic Warfare On Historic Battle Ground.

The members of Company K, left the armory this afternoon for the first march to Sea Girt in the history of the organization. They will camp at this place for one week according to the annual custom.

The company members were equipped with well filled haversacks for the long march and expect much fun from it. They left the armory today at 1:30 o'clock by trolley for New Brunswick. Here they were joined by the company from that place at 3 o'clock and then the march began. This evening they will reach Old Bridge, where they will camp, and by tomorrow will be in Englishtown before noon. Here they will spend the rest of the day, and will camp there at night.

Monday they will meet the Second battalion. As the first battalion consists of Companies H, of New Brunswick; C and I, of Elizabeth; M, of Somerville, and K, of Plainfield, and the second battalion of a similar number of companies from other parts of the State, there will be sufficient men to hold a mimic warfare. This will be held on the Monmouth battle ground, where the manouvres will be executed. One battalion will oppose the other, and the usual methods of mimic warfare with its regulations, will be followed.

Company G, of Freehold, will join the second battalion, which is under the command of Major William B. Martin, at Freehold. The second battalion will bivouac with the first battalion near Farmingdale. From here both will march to Sea Girt arriving there in time for dinner Tuesday.

Thursday, Aug. 12, the members of Company K, of this city, will be put on the rifle range, and all will have an opportunity to display their markmanship.

Members of the local organization, who could not leave with the company today owing to business, will join it tomorrow, making the trip by train. They are Corporal Samuel Rothberg and Sargeant Phillips. Returning the trip will be made by train.

SURPRISE PARTY FOR REV. J. THOMAS DIGGS.

The Rev. J. Thomas Diggs, pastor of the Mt. Zion church, was tendered a surprise party by a number of parishioners of his church at his home last evening. He spent the day in New Brunswick with his daughter, Mrs. C. W. Woolsey, and on his return was surprised by a number of his friends, who came to remind him of his sixiteth birthday, and to make the occasion memorable to him.

The surprise committee was composed of Mrs. Sarah Sachal, Mrs. Sarah Marsh, Mrs. Laura Wilson, Mrs. Henrietta Grobes, Mrs. L. J. Henry. Alfred White and Alfred Wilson each ade speeches. A solo was rendered by Mrs. Mary E. Staats. Among the gifts received by the Rev. Mr. Diggs was a handsome parlor lamp.

Beer Made Her Quarrelsome.

"A kettle of beer," which Mrs. Bertha Johnson, colored, had at her West Third street home last night, roused her disfavor against a would-be lodger early in the evening and her efforts to explain the trouble to Patrolman Dunlap at Front and Somerset streets attracted a large crowd. Efforts to quiet her proved vain, and when she began to get profane, the policeman locked her up. Sentence was suspended by City Judge Runyon at her hearing in the city court today.

Slept on the Sidewalk.

Anthony Kordek, whose home is on West Second street, developed a morning jag yesterday, and was found "paralyzed drunk" on West Fifth street, near Liberty street, at about noon by Chief Kiely. City Judge Runyon suspended sentence on a very penitent Austrian this morning.

Anderson a "Regular" Now.

Charles Anderson was sworn in as a regular patrolman by City Judge Runyon at police headquarters this morning. The policeman, who has been wearing a "special" badge for many months, was recommended for promotion to the police board by Chief of Police Kiely.

MRS. C. J. FISK'S MOTHER DIES AT SPRING LAKE

Mrs. Annie Gray Farley Richey, wife of the late Augustus G. Richey, of Trenton, and mother-in-law of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, died suddenly this morning at the New Monmouth, Spring Lake. She was eighty-seven years of age.

Mrs. Richey was at the summer resort with her daughter, Miss Mary Richey, and her sudden death comes as a shock to her local relatives. About a year ago, she was stricken with a severe illness, but entirely recovered from its effects and was in the best of health until a few days ago. A widow for about fifteen years, Mrs. Richey was the wife of the late Mr. Richey, for many years prominent as a Trenton lawyer. Her home was on State street, Trenton, and she and her husband were prominently identified in church work at the State street Presbyterian church.

Surviving Mrs. Richey are a son, Isaac Richey, of Trenton, and two daughters, Mrs. Charles J. Fisk and Miss Mary Richey. No arrangements have been made for the funeral, but the interment will be in the family plot at Trenton.

$20,000 DISSIPATED FRED KANEN NOW POOR

Misfortune has befallen the family of Charles Kanen, a former tailor of this city, who used to live at the corner of Fifth street and Watchung avenue, according to advices received in this city.

Mr. Kanen, it is understood, is living in Philadelphia, while his family is living in the Bronx, New York. The fortune of $20,000 which Fred Kanen, his son, received as damages from the Central Railroad of New Jersey for being injured in the Westfield wreck is said to have been exhausted. Fred Kanen is now a clerk in the business department of Collier's Weekly.

Young Kanen was employed by a New York brokerage firm as a messenger boy, at the time of the Westfield wreck. He figured in the latter and was seriously injured. The case aroused much sympathy in this city, and after hanging fire for three years was finally adjusted. Damages of $20,000 were awarded young Kanen on the belief that he would never be able to walk again. A prominent lawyer of West Eight street, this city, contributed his legal services free out of sympathy for the family. A year later young Kanen was able to be out and to walk around. Now he has full use of all of his faculties, and is, practically, none the worse for the ordeal through which he went.

The Kanen girls, Clara and Florence, were graduated from the city high school in the class of 1907, and shortly after this the family moved to the Bronx, New York. Shortly after the wreck, Charles Kanen retired from the tailoring business to engage in other business in New York. This latter business it is said, required capital at intervals, which gradually sapped away his money without bringing any tangible return. Good fortune favored him at intervals, but this was followed by disaster.

Julian Linke Having A Good Time.

Julian Linke, of this city, who is one of the New York American party travelling through the west, writes on August 2 that the previous day he was at Redlands and Riverside, California, where he saw orange and lemon trees so ladened with fruit that the branches had to propped up with sticks. At that time he wrote he was on "The Great Inchine, Mt. Lowe Railway," which is 3,000 feet long.

NOW A PROCTOR THEATRE

HE GETS BRONX THEATRE.

F. F. Proctor, Sr., and His Local Partner, H. S. Sanderson, to Maintain Both Theatres Here.

F. F. Proctor, Sr., of Keith & Proctor, and Harry S. Sanderson, who are associated in the management of Proctor's theatre, this city, last night closed a deal, whereby they take over the Plainfield theatre and the Majestic theatre in Perth Amboy, both of which were managed by William J. Counihan. The change becomes effective Monday, August 16, when Mr. Counihan will retire from the local theatrical field.

Harry C. Egerton formerly manager of the Royal theatre in Montreal, Canada, will be the new business manager for the Plainfield theatre, which in the future will be devoted strictly to first-class plays. No moving pictures or vaudeville will be presented there, that being reserved for Proctor's theatre on West Front street, where the same standard which has made the playhouse so popular will be maintained.

While the policy has not yet been definitely determined regarding the Majestic theatre at Perth Amboy, it is Proctor & Sanderson's intention of conducting it along the lines of Proctor's theatre, this city, that is moving pictures and vaudeville.

The change in local theatrical circles has been underway for the past three months, and repeated rumors of a deal were constantly heard. However, it was not closed until last night, when the papers were signed. Proctor & Sanderson lease the Plainfield and Majestic theatres for a term of years, Mr. Counihan still retaining the ownership of the buildings as before.

The changes are important so far as Plainfield is concerned. It will mean that the theatre-loving people will still have the opportunity of seeing only the best Broadway attractions, while those who like the life motion pictures and vaudeville will also have the chance of seeing the best in that line. Proctor and Sanderson will aim to give their patrons high-class amusement.

Mr. Proctor had a conference yesterday with Mr. Erlanger, of the theatrical firm of Klaw & Erlanger, and he assured the former that the Plainfield theatre would be given every consideration and that only strictly first-class plays would be booked.

There will be occasional weeks of popular reportoire.

Since entering the local theatrical field, the Proctor enterprise has been an important factor in providing amusement for Plainfielders. The latest change gives Proctor and Sanderson complete control of theatricals in Plainfield and Perth Amboy.

Too much praise cannot be given Mr. Counihan for the way in which he has conducted the Plainfield theatre, which this week began its fifth year. The house was opened with George Ade's "County Chairman," and since that time Mr. Counihan has been successful in presenting only the best attractions here. He speaks in the highest terms of the Plainfield people, who, he says, have supported him and made it possible to attain success. In speaking of the change, today, Mr. Counihan said that he considers Plainfield one of the best show towns in the country and he likes the city so well that he will continue to reside here.

It is has always been Mr. Counihan's desire to enter the managerial field in New York, and he will become the manager for Cohan & Harris' new theatre to be built in the Bronx. Samuel Cunningham, his treasurer, will enter the employ of Henry W. Savage in an official capacity, while Michael Shannon, who was manager of the Majestic theatre, will also identify himself with some theatrical enterprise.

Mr. Sanderson, who, since coming to Plainfield, has made a host of friends, will continue to give his attention to the business here. He has in contemplation several important changes at the Plainfield theatre, including a women's retiring room and a separate box-office window for the women, where they will receive every consideration. This innovation, Mr. Sanderson believes will be appreciated by the women, who may attend performances without escorts.

Emery N. Downs, the popular manager of Proctor's theatre here, will open the Majestic theatre in Perth Amboy and remain there for a time, after which he will return to his present position here.

Mr. Sanderson in discussing the theatrical change here says that the fact that he and Mr. Proctor will

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS HONOR JERSEYMEN

The $500,000 endowment fund for scholarships at the Catholic University, Washington, was indorsed by the convention of the Knights of Columbus yesterday and it was decided that the amount be collected within two years. The committee in charge of the endowment plan reported that seventy per cent. of the councils of the order had indorsed the fund.

The members of the national board of directors will hereafter be required to attend all national conventions. An attempt was made by the officers and members of the directory present to clothe the latter with power to vote in convention, but it was lost by an overwhelming vote.

Another change affecting the membership of the directory gives them power to call a meeting at any time and place they deem practicable, because of the rapidity with which the order is spreading.

Before the close of the session the delegates formally created the new office of national warden and elected Thomas J. McLaughlin, of Newark, to the position. Mr. McLaughlin is State warden for New Jersey and one of the national delegates. The office of national warden was created under constitutional revision as begun last year.

The list of other national officers includes James A. Flaherty, of Philadelphia, supreme grand knight; W. J. McGinley, national secretary, New York; D. J. Callahan, national treasurer, Washington; J. H. Pelletier, national advocate, Boston; Rev. P. J. McGivney, national chaplain, Middletown, Conn.

Quebec has been selected as the next place of meeting in August, 1910.

Washington will be among the contestants for the 1911 convention, at which time the massive monument to Christopher Columbus, to cost $100,000, will be unveiled there on the plaza opposite the Union Station.

A testimonial of $8,000 was given retiring Supreme Knight Edward L. Hearn. The new position of national historian, which will be occupied by retiring Secretary Daniel Colwell, of New Haven, Conn., who has served the order continually for twenty-seven years, carries with it an annual salary of $2,500.

GOVERNOR'S SHARP RAP AT THE MEDICAL EXPERTS

Medical experts who uphold opposite sides of a question at different times were made the objects of adverse comment by Governor Fort Thursday in the Governor's address to the physicians of the State at the State camp. Many of his hearers seemed to have no difficulty in arriving at a conclusion as to whom the Governor might mean.

In this connection the Governor said:

"During my term upon the bench of the Supreme Court of the State it was my privilege to see much of the medical men of the State. Experience has given me great faith in the medical witness—not, however, the medical expert witness, so-called. My faith in this latter class has never been great, and observation has only tended to lessen my opinion of him. Courts and juries give great weight to the testimony of the local medical practitioner, but very little to the man who appears as an expert witness, especially in homicide cases. The man who testifies today in a homicide case that the defendant is insane and then shortly afterward testifies that he is sane is neither influential with the courts nor respected by them. He is an injury to the profession and to the cause of justice. The sooner the doctors frown down all such men the better it will be for the profession. The State should aid you in this all it can.

"It is quite clear that the tendency of our day is toward higher education and stricter requirements for admission to the ranks of all professions. Our State boards of examiners for the practice of the professions are all useful and are doing much good. They tend to bring about a better understanding among the various schools of practice and to elevate the standards." Dr. P. J. Zeglio, of North Plainfield, was the only physician from here to accept Governor Fort's invitation to luncheon.

New York Presbytery Wins Point.

The Presbytery of New York won a point over the trustees of the Westminster Presbyterian church yesterday in the litigation over the dissolution of the latter. Justice Bischoff rendered a decision denying the motion of the Westminster trustees to strike from the complaint of the Presbytery the allegations as to the validity of the church's dissolution by the plaintiff, which seeks to obtain the Westminster property.

County Chairman F. H. Smith was among visitors at Governor Fort's summer home, Sea Girt, on Thursday.

WHO WOULDN'T BE AN ELK.

"When I see notices of the starting away of those 'Helo Bill' fellows for their annual sessions," said the traveling man, "I wonder how in the world they dare plan such splendid excursions as they do. No place on the map is too remote for the Elks to select as a meeting place. I've run across these jolly fellows on the road many times and the meals they can eat and the tips they pass around always fill my soul with envy. I recall last fall seeing four of them pay a check for $16 on a diner, and the one who paid gave the waiter a two-dollar tip. The conductor of the car, who had given the four his personal attention, could not hide a look of disappointment when the waiter got it all, but sunshine came when one of the excursionists called him to the table, produced a $10 bill and asked him if he could change it.

"Now that puts the conductor in a trying position. If the waiter had been asked the same thing he would have quickly returned with two fives—but the conductor's training in the acquiring of tipe was less acute. He pulled ten ones off a roll and passed them over to the one desiring the change. The Elk counted them over carefully and then handed all to the conductor, saying: 'Put 'em in your pocket.'

"I shudder at the amount that will be given in tips by members of this order on the present trip to Los Angeles, for no one entitled to tips from an Elk ever had cause to be dissatisfied. If I was not an easy mar kanyway, I certainly would join the Elks just to see how it feels to have more money than one knows what to do with.

"The traveling man who wears a button of this order finds that in the West the status of the members is very much higher than in some sections of the East. The Western fellows are recruited from the ranks of professional men easier than here. The nmber of 'sports' is not so pronounced there, either. They pay more attention to the fraternal end of the organization and they use their beautiful homes more as clubrooms than as cafes, and this is not the case in some of the larger Eastern cities."

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Luna Park, always foremost in the summer amusement line, is about to spring another surprise. The magic device by which more than thity-four million persons have been whirled around and tossed into fits of laughter are to be opened to public view. Like many of the magicians tricks, which are made doubly interesting by an exposure following their presentation, several of the rides are to be demonstrated in their entirety. Their machinery is to be placed on view and their wonders explained.

Thousands of visitors to Luna this summer have expressed a desire to see the workings of the various devices and since the Queen of England and the Princess Victoria began to pay regular visits to Shepherd's Bush to ride on the Witching Waves, the number of inquisitors has greatly increased. The Queen and her daughter descended a narrow ladder to the machinery pit to see the intricate and cleverly devised machinery of the waves at work and as this rolling sea was first installed by T. Von Kannel, the originator of the revolving doors, at Luna Park, Frederic Thompson determined to show every American what the Queen saw, the secret of sailing in baskets.

The fascinating contrivance attracts both young and old, providing no end of fun for everyone. All who have visited Luna this summer have heard the "E-e-e-e-oh! You'll upset us! I can't swim! Let me steer!" And a young miss grabs the wheel and bump! goes the car, while the spectators shout with glee.

A clothes basket on wheels mounting waterless waves, is the way the ride was described by one who was at a loss to give a clearer account of it. It is a trip around an undulating course, surrounding a long "island" with rocky shores and on it sail small vessels on wheels, propelled by the surface swell. The boats amble around and zig-zag and flounder in the trough of the seas, at the sweet will of the occupant. One of the fascinating parts is the idea of having a hand in the running and trying to conquer the vagaries of a lurching vessel. This feature attracts everyone, from infant to grandfather. Of course the wrecks are the funniest part, when the occur gallant sailor laddies cross the seas and promptly rescue the party in harmless distress. A little care in steering will take the most timid safely around the course. Most persons, though, find sport in experimenting and new "stunts" crop up daily.

"A Gentleman from Mississippi" is again at the Bijou Theatre, having terminated Saturday night last a highly successful engagement at the Aerial Gardens. During the two months that the play was on the roof the Bijou Theatre was entirely redecorated and refurnished and for the coming season it will be numbered among the prettiest playhouses of the metropolis. The piece is the most successful play produced in recent years, and there is not a line in its four acts that is not in the spirit of pure comedy, by which is meant a play that truly reflects life without touching more than lightly upon the tragic aspect that must, sooner or later, darken all lives not conducted according to the strict moral law. In this play, the characters of Carolina Langdon, Senator Langdon's lovely elder daughter, and Charles Norton, a member of the House of Representatives from Mississippe, are shown as bearing the burden of a wrong they seek to do the fair name of the girl's fine minded father. They think that they can enrich themselves at the expense of the nation if they can show him to be mixed up in the deal that is to have such rich fruit. But the father has taken into his service a young newspaper man, alert as a deer and smart as a man well can be; and this spry youngster, his interest whetted by his love for the new Senator's daughter, shows all concerned the way out of the darkness into which a few moments of deceit has plunged them. Thomas A. Wise and Douglas Fairbanks will continue to head the large cast.

KILLED OLD HORSE AS HIS FATHER HAD WILLED.

The executor of the will of Chas. Pinnell, who was for many years Mayor of North Bergen, has carried out his last wishes set forth in his will and has chloroformed the old horse owned by him for so long it was regarded almost as one of the family.

The executor said yesterday he had complied with his father's request that the horse be killed.

Gets Its Property Back.

The death of William H. McNeal and disinclination of his heirs to push the case in the courts restore to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company title to its property in Burlington, which passed into McNeal's hands when he purchased for a few hundred dollars the entire trackage and equipment of the railroad within the city limits, sold by the city for unpaid taxes. The railroad disputed the sale, and there was threat of a lively lawsuit when McNeal died. The company claimed it had paid the disputed taxes into the State treasury and that the proper proportion had been returned to the city. City officials could find no record of such payment.

OLD-TIME MYSTERY IS FINALLY CLEARED.

The taking of depositions at Dover, Ogdensburg and Newton to prove that Mrs. Vida J. Mileham and Miss Edith Mains, daughters of William H. Mains, of Dover, and Wade Durling, of Orange, are the only heirs of the late Samuel T. Wade, of Fairfield, Ill., has just cleared up a mystery connected with the disappearance of Wade from Sussex county about forty years ago, with some thousand dollars of his father's estate, of which he was one of the executors. Wade died intestate at Fairfield April 30, 1907, leaving cash and securities valued at about $4,000. His death occurred in a sanitarium one year after Mr. Durling had sought him out. Previous to that he had lived for years as a hermit.

Samuel Wade was a son of Charles Wade, the head of one of the leading families in the county many years ago. The father died in the early seventies, leaving an estate of about $35,000 to the widow and five children. The other executors associated with Wade left the administering of the affairs solely to him, and one day he disappeared with what property he had converted into cash. For ten years his family knew nothing of his whereabouts until a rambling letter was received from the fugitive. The tone of the letter was peculiar and the postmark on the envelope was blurred and illegible. The writer gave no address. In 1906 Postmaster R. F. Goodman, of Newton, received a letter from Rev. E. M. Johnson, of Fairfield, who stated that there was a man in that town who claimed that his name was Wade and that he was from Sussex county, N. J. The man, he said, was in need of care, and was living the life of a hermit in an isolated portion of Illonois. Mr. Durling lost no time in seeking out the man, who recognized pictures of the Wade family, and who Durling was satisfied was his missing uncle.

EX-GOVERNOR RETICENT ABOUT EUROPEAN TRIP.

Former Governor Edward C. Stokes will sail for Europe tomorrow to spend a month at Carlsbad. It was at first reported that Mr. Stokes had been directed by his physician to take the trip for his health, but the former Governor denies this, and says he is going on business, alone, having neither pleasure nor his health particularly in mind.

Asked about his plans, Mr. Stokes explained that they were not complete, and added that he had not yet arranged, definitely, for transportation. He said he was not certain in which ship he would sail.

STEVENS POINT BLAZE LOSS IS $250,000

Fire, which destroyed the home of Mrs. Caroline B. Alexander, on historic Stevens Point, at Hoboken, at midnight yesterday, caused a loss of $250,000. Many valuable paintings, tapestries, bric-a-brac and rugs were in the burned structure and it was impossible to save them. Mrs. Alexander is the widow of Arthur Alexander, and is the sister of Richard Stevens, owner of the destroyed property.

The house, which stood near the famous Stevens Castle, facing the Hudson, was untenanted, the family being at Bernardsville for the summer. The flames, which started in the rear, were observed by Edward Feyer, a policeman, who was patrolling his beat several blocks from the scene, about fifteen minutes after 11 o'clock. He aroused William Robinson, the coachman, who was asleep in his rooms.

The two men, aided by several employes about the Stevens property, sought to put out the fire, but their efforts were unavailing. An alarm then was turned in and the Hoboken Fire Department summoned.

The high hill, upon which the Stevens residence is situated, offered almost insuperable obstacles to the advance of the firemen, whose efforts to drag the engines and ladder wagons up the grade were retarded by the poor roadway, which had been washed by Wednesday's deluge.

Before the engines could be brought into position the fire had made great headway and the flames were fanned by a strong west wind. At the height on which the engines stood no adequate stream of water could be secured and little headway was made against the progress of the fire.

The blaze is believed to have originated from oily rags. Carpenters and painters had been at work in the house for some time.

LOVE'S PATH WAS STORMY BUT MARRIAGE ENSUES.

Walton B. Smith and Miss Gladys Cluney, of Perth Amboy, were married Wednesday night in New Brunswick by Rev. H. J. Belting, of Pitman M. E. church. Mr. Smith is a son of David Smith, of Red Bank, and the bride is a daughter of Chas. S. Cluney, of Perth Amboy.

The wedding is the consummation of a romance which a month ago was thought to have been hopelessly broken off. A week before the day set for the wedding in June and after the invitations had been issued for the wedding, trouble arose between the young people and the nuptials were indefinitely postponed. A few weeks later they again became friends, the invitations having been recalled in the mean time.

Angered by what he termed the fickleness of his daughter, Mr. Cluney upbraided her and she left his home, going to New Brunswick to live with Mr. Smith's relatives there. Mr. Smith's parents also objected to the match, because of the youth of the bride, who is seventeen, and when the wedding occurred Wednesday night it was without the presence of the parents of the contracting parties. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will reside in Perth Amboy.

REMARKABLE RECORD OF LOCOMOTIVE DRIVER.

Forty-six years of uninterrupted service at the throttle of a locomotive, during which time he was never in an accident nor suspended for deviation from railroad rules, is the enviable record of Charles E. Chew, veteran Baltimore & Ohio locomotive driver, who, having served the full quota of years requisite for voluntary retirement from active service under the road's pension plan, has just quit the engine cab. Mr. Chew was born on Dec. 12, 1848, and began his railroad career on the Baltimore & Ohio as a messenger at Fredereick, Md., on March 4, 1863. He later secured a position as fireman and was promoted to engineer on April 1, 1889. Mr. Chew's first work on the Baltimore & Ohio was in the days when the railroads were using the "grasshopper" and other early types of engines, the monsters of the present day never having been dreamed of, and the fact that in all these years this veteran of the throttle and reverse lever has kept his record as spotless as a schoolgirl's diploma is considered remarkable by railroad officials.—Baltimore Sun.

LEFT $2,000 TO MAN WHOSE BRIDE HE STOLE.

Fifty years ago at Blairstown, Joseph Kithcart won the affections of Jennie Salford against her parents' wishes, throwing over a wealthy suitor named James Butler. A short time after the marriage her parents persuaded her to leave Kithcart and marry Butler.

Kithcart afterward remarried, but separated from his second wife and came to South Montrose, near Binghampton, N. Y., where he engaged as a farmhand. Butler took his prize and went West, where in a short time Mrs. Butler died.

Recently Butler died also, and Kithcart has been notified that Butler in his will bequeathed to him the sum of $2,000 as a partial compensation for stealing the affections of Kithcart's first bride. Kithcart has received the money.

MRS. WILLIAMSON EULOGIZED BY BOARD OF FREEHOLDERS.

At the meeting of the County Board of Freeholders Thursday afternoon at the court house in Elizabeth, resolution were passed eulogizing Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, late probation officer of Union county. The resolutions were presented by a committee consisting of Director King, County Collector N. R. Leavitt and Freeholders S. P. T. Wilbur, Peter H. Meisel, of Springfield, George B. Cladek, of Rahway; Henry Krouse, of Linden, and among many things of praise were the following:

"Recognizing the wealth of sterling qualities of Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county hereby desire to pay tribute to the memory of a former officer of this county, and to express to the many who sorrow at her death, its deep appreciation of her serviceable life and direct that this memorandum be recorded in the book of minutes and an engrossed copy of this report be placed in a suitable frame and hung in the probation office."

CATHOLIC TEMPERANCE ADVOCATES IN CHICAGO.

Catholic temperance advocates of the United States who are attending the national convention in Chicago of the Catholic Total Abstinence Society, united on Wednesday in a protest against liquor traffic evils.

Following a parade of 4,500 men, women and children down Michigan avenue, the evils of the Sunday saloon and the liquor industry as a whole were vigorously attacked by Bishop J. F. Regis Canevin, of Pittsburg, and other speakers at a mass-meeting in the Auditorium theatre.

The parade was witnessed by thousands of persons who thronged both sides of Michigan avenue from Twentieth street to Congress.

control both theatres will not mean a retrenchment in the slightest degree, in fact efforts will be made to give the patrons of both houses the very best possible. The policy which has made the name of Proctor famous the world over, will be followed, and with Mr. Sanderson here to give his personal attention to the business, assures much for the public. Mr. Counihan's bookings and contracts have also been taken over by Proctor & Sanderson.

During his residence in Plainfield Mr. Counihan has made a great many friends. Although having their support he has on numerous occasions surmounted obstacles that would have baffled most men. His house was opened in record-breaking time on the date set and ever since he has continued to be successful.

It was through the instrumentality of Theodore J. Shirley, of the firm of Shirley & Johnston, that the deal between Proctor & Sanderson and William J. Counihan was effected.

BRITISH WOMAN GOLF CHAMPION IS COMING.

She will be accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Gray, of the Barnhurst Club, and three other prominent players, who have arranged to join the party: Miss F. Teacher, of North Berwick, the Scottish woman champion in 1907; Miss S. Temple, of Westward Ho, and Miss G. Spurling, of Barnhurst. It is probable that they also will take part in the American golf championship, and also in some inter-team matches. The party will sail on the Empress of Ireland September 10.

NEWARK WOMAN BITTEN BY VENOMOUS SNAKE.

Bitten Wednesday night by a venomous snake supposed to have been a copperhead, Mrs. Charles Carr, twenty-one years old, of Newark, is now considered out of danger. At one time it was thought she would die. Mrs. Carr and her husband have been patrons of Philip Ogden's boarding-house at Wintermute, in Stillwater Township.

Mr. and Mrs. Carr and a party of friends were fishing in a pond about a mile from Ogden's house. Going to the house to get food for the party Mrs. Carr was bitten in the ankle as she crossed a rocky pasture field. She returned to the pond and her husband helped her home. There salt was applied and home treatment resorted to, but the leg swelled rapidly and Dr. B. W. Hanvas was sent for.

He applied treatment and after some time succeeded in restoring Mrs. Carr, who was almost unconscious. She was weak and sick yesterday, but today is much better.

DRAG LAKE GEORGE FOR BODY OF ORANGE MAN.

The search for the body of Dr. Arthur Barber, the East Orange dentist, who, it is believed, was drowned Tuesday evening in Lake George, was continued practically all Thursday and yesterday, but without result. The parents of the young man, who live at Fort Edward, have offered a reward of $100 for the recovery of the body, and this has served to call out several searching parties, who are dragging every inch of the lake in the vicinity of Long Island, where it is proposed Dr. Barber fell from his boat while adjusting the bow light.

George Cary Eggleston, the author, and Llewellyn Owen, of East Orange, a chum of the dead man, are prominent among the searchers.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"Graustark" or "A Love Behind a Throne," by George Barr McCutcheon, the popular author of Brewster's Millions, has been made into a thrilling, romantic five act play, and will be presented here for the first time at the Plainfield theatre, on Monday, August 9, with a notable cast of well known artists, and massive scenic production. In fact, the management guarantees the same identical company that were seen in New York and Chicago.

As the book has been read by nearly everyone in town, a large audience will probably be in attendance.

As the date approaches, good accounts of the performance continue to reach here from the exchanges of nearby cities, and it is safe to recommend "Graustark" as one of the best attractions that will apear here this season.

As a matter of fact no play of recent years has produced the interest and satisfied the craving for serious performance of a play as has "Graustark." The book itself is of great human interest and has won its way into the hearts of the reading public as has no other book for a decade. Plainfield theatregoers who have not seen the New York production of this play will have no better opportunity than will present itself Monday night to acquaint themselves with the hit of the year.

INSTRUCTIONS HOW TO ENFORCE NEW TARIFF.

The Treasury Department fully three weeks ago began preparations for the prompt administration of the new tariff law. General instructions were sent out to collectors of customs in all parts of the country directing that immediately after the receipt of telegraphic advices from the department of the enactment of the new law, estimated duties be collected on all imports pending the receipt of official copies of the law.

Collectors on the Pacific coast and at other parts distant from Washington will not receive their copies of the act for several days. In the meantime they will collect estimated duties based generally on the rates named in the old law. No entries of merchandise will be liquidated until collectors have received their copies of the act, but with as much promptness as possible liquidation will be effected, and an adjustment of the duties collected will be made in connection with teh term of the new law.

Suitable provision was made by Congress to avoid any misunderstanding as to the exact hour when the new tariff law should become effective. To avoid uncertainty the framers of the new law provided in the final paragraph that the principal provisions should be effective on the day following its passage.

DR. ELIOT SAYS THAT THE BIBLE IS ANTIQUATED.

President Emeritus Elliot has taken his stand with those who believe that the Bible is not to be literally accepted as infallible. In a statement made yesterday in reference to the reason why the Bible or Shakespeare were not included in his "five foot" books he says that the "Bible is antiquated."

He explained, too, that he has no intention himself of making the library a "six foot" one, as reported in a New York newspaper yesterday.

"Do you not think the Bible and Shakespeare should be included in your list?" was asked.

"These volumes will be read by every one more or less. About the Bible—many things in this volume are antiquated, and it is a question in many modern minds whether it is always advisable to advocate the reading of this to the extent of excluding many other books.

"However, the Bible will always be read, and the same may also be said of Shakespeare.

"You may state that I have no present intention of putting on another foot. It has been talked about, but nothing has been done, and so far as I am concerned no additions will be made to the original list."

WANT MORE LIGHTS NOW AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

Berkeley Heights Township Committee Deny Petition for Lights.

ROAD IS IN BAD CONDITION.

Lack of Funds Responsible For Dark Roads—Errors in Assessments Rectified.

At a meeting of the Township Committee, held last evening in the Berkeley Lyceum, the matter of additional electric lights was discussed by the members of the committee. Several citizens of the township were in attendance. Among them were the officers of the township society of "Our Men." The committee desire to continue the lights on Plainfield avenue from the Catholic church to the Valley road, but are held up on account of the township of North Plainfield not having yet rented the Commonwealth Water and Light Co. a franchise which will enable that company to place the poles on twelve hundred feet of Plainfield avenue, which lies in the township of North Plainfield, Somerset county.

It was said, however, that the township of New Providence could overcome the difficulty by extending the lights from Stony Hill Road down Lord's lane, a distance of thirty-five hundred feet to Plainfield avenue. This would require seven additional lights, but would not light up that part of Plainfield avenue lying within the county of Somerset, which is the most dangerous part of Plainfield avenue, the road being very narrow and in extremely bad repair.

Committeeman Kuntz presented a petition from tax payers living on the road from Hess' corner to Union Village, asking for six lights on that road. Committeeman Fullerton could not consent, he said, to vote for lights on that road, but would vote for lights on Plainfield avenue, because he has to travel that road in order to get to the Lyceum. It was suggested by some of the visitors that inasmuch as Mr. Fullerton had figured out that the committee had enough funds to install six or eight lights and that for the present, owing to the difficulty with the township of North Plainfield, the lights can not be placed on Plainfield avenue, that they be placed on the village road.

Committeeman Fullerton then discovered that there was not money enough to put in any more new lights. Committeeman Oechsner then moved that no more new lights be placed until the people vote an additional appropriation at the polls this fall, and Committeeman Fullerton computed the amount necessary to be $750 instead of $450, the present appropriation. The committee voted unanimously in favor of Mr. Oechsner's motion. The balance due on the county road bonds amounting in all to about $1,200 is payable this fall and the collector of the township was instructed to pay the county collector the amount on September 27.

Charles L. Miltner, who was elected constable last fall did not file his bonds in time, so the committee appointed him to fill the unexpired term of his office, so Miltner will be constable for three years anyway. Committeeman Kuntz complained of the overhanging trees on Plainfield avenue, property owned by A. M. Layat and Henry S. Fullerton. He stated that lights would be no use there anyway unless the trees were trimmed generously, that the boughs of the trees hanging down over and touch the smallest conveyance traveling through that road.

Letters were received from the collector of taxes asking to be relieved from the collection of certain assessments stating that certain properties were assessed twice to different people. The errors were rectified and the collector relieved. The meeting then adjourned to meet the first Friday in September at the same place.

DEEP BREATHING DID IT.

Says a contributor to Harper's Bazar:

I had suffered several days and nights from severe pain resulting from rheumatism and neuralgia. The relief afforded by all suggested home remedies had been only temporary. My neck was raw from a mustard plaster blister. I'd slept poorly several nights from pain. Again it was night. I was quivering with pain and unable to rise to a sitting posture. To turn from back to side, or vice versa, was agonizing. I did not wish to call any of the family, knowing their duties for the following day. How I longed for sleep! Then I remembered reading somewhere that deep, abdominal breathing persisted in would induce sleep. I resolved to try it. Assuming a position as comfortable as possible under the circumstances, I began deep, abdominal breaths. My head soon became light, or rather dizzy, my body relaxed; after a few minutes I was asleep! After a nap I awoke, squirmed about to a new position, repeated the deep breath—fell asleep again. I kept this up during the night, thus securing a fair night's rest. When wooing sleep, ill or well, try this plan.

$20,000 MORE IN DUTIES. BECAUSE SHIP WAS LATE.

The Hamburg-American liner Pennsylvania, which was urged by wireless to burn up her coal to reach port before the new tariff law went into effect, failed to win her race against the tariff. She was reported 253 miles east of Sandy Hook at 6:40 a. m. Thursday, and a throng of custom-house brokers, representing importers of hosiery and of champagne and other wines, beseiged Collector Loeb, urging him to keep the custom-house open until midnight so that they might have a chance to save for the importers something like $20,000.

The collector told them that, unless otherwise ordered by the Treasury Department he would close the custom-house at the regular hour, 4:30 p. m.

Under further urging the collector sent a dispatch to Washington and got an answer that went to all ports where importers were expecting cargoes or had them in bond. The answer was that the custom-house should close as usual. With the answer came the news that the President had signed the bill at 5:06 p. m. Brokers anxious about cargo in bond who had been in line when the doors were closed promptly at 4:30 were still within the custom-house attending to withdrawals of merchandise that will be hit harder by the new tariff. Many were shut out.

KEPT FROM FATAL JUMP BY SHOUTS OF CROWD.

Fire was discovered yesterday in the three-story frame building of 85-87 Albany street, New Brunswick.

Frances Connors, eighteen years old, carrying a child in her arms, fled to the top floor. She appeared at an open window and seemed about to jump out of the third story window.

Shouts from passersby who heard her screams deterred her and she was rescued by firemen.

The fire started in the Connors apartments, the two upper stories being occupied by them and three other families. On the lower floor is the Postal Telegraph office, Hugh McKeag's plumbing shop and the jewelry store of F. A. Wheatley & Co. All were badly damaged by water.

MARINES' MARKSMEN TO GO TO CAMP PERRY.

Camp Harlee, commander of the U. S. marines who have been at Sea Girt, for two months using the rifle ranges, has been ordered to report at Camp Perry, Ohio, with a team of fifty of his best marksmen to participate in the Ohio State Rifle Association contest, and later in the month to take part in the national matches.

Captain McDougal and Lieutenants Merriman, Wingman, Smith and Coyle will accompany the detachment, which leaves at 5:40 this afternoon. Captain Harlee has only words of warmest appreciation for courtesies received from the local military men. He says the standard of the New Jersey National Guard has impressed him most favorably.

The team may return to Sea Girt for the September shoot.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Policeman Wright, of Millville, had a race with a bicycle thief yesterday, and the thief abandoned the wheel and escaped in the woods.

Miss Mabel Crispen, of Salem, has secured a position as teacher of reed and raffia work in the Atlantic City public schools for the coming year.

Some Gloucester county farmers are picking a few watermelons, but they are scarce as yet, and high in price. In a week or so there will be plenty.

The increased realty valuation in Mantua Township is $23,520 over last year. As the budget is a little higher, the tax rate is expected to be about the same as last year.

The Salem county farmers will picnic at Oakwood Beach, along the Delaware, Tuesday, August 17. There will be athletic sports, dancing and a horse show during the day.

A $12,000 addition is being planned to the parish house of St. Paul's P. E. church, Camden. It will be thoroughly equipped with gymnasium apparatus and fitted up for social affairs.

Frederick W. Smith, who has been a member of the Board of Education of Salem for a number of years, has resigned, and the Council will name a successor at its next meeting.

Captain Frank B. Watson, of Salem, sailed yesterday on the transport Buford from Seattle for the Philippines with the Third United States Infantry, of which he is a member. He was accompanied by his wife and son. This makes the Watsons' second trip to the Philippines.

E. L. Kastner, one of the victims of the grade crossing accident at Woodbury Tuesday, has recovered sufficiently to be able to return to his home, but is still very stiff and sore. Mrs. Kastner and Mrs. Benjamin Sparks are still in Cooper Hospital, Camden, but are improving.

The Salem Board of Education thought the matter of teachers for the coming school year was long ago settled, but an announcement is now made that Professor Marstellar, of Pleasantville, who was chosen to succeed Professor W. A. Storrie, will not come. Another election will have to be held.

The citizens of Salem this evening will have a "street carnival or block party." That portion of the tar road extending on Walnut, from Wesley to Church street, will be roped off by consent of Mayor Gwynne, and booths erected, where various articles of fancy work and refreshments will be on sale.

Plans and specifications are being prepared under the direction of the vestrymen of St. Paul's Episcopal church, Camden, for an addition to their present parish-house. It is estimated that the improvement will cost between $10,000 and $12,000. The addition will be equipped with bowling alleys, shuffleboards, shower baths and dressing-rooms, to be used by the members of the guild attached to the church.

All roads in South Jersey led to Washington Park yesterday, where the fifteenth annual picnic of the South Jersey Farmers' Association was held. Special trains were run over the steam roads from all South Jersey points, while trolley cars were operated every two minutes. It is estimated that 50,000 persons visited the park. The main feature of the day was the baby show. There were more than 200 babies entered.

Consternation was caused at the meeting of the Millville Board of Education last evening, when it was reported that yellow sand, with but very little cement, was being used in the erection of the new $48,000 school building. It was also charged that an inferior quality of lumber is being used, and that out-of-town labor is being employed, contrary to the contract. It was ordered that the work be discontinued at once, pending an inquiry.

Thomas Croombe, of Minersville, who was arrested in Camden last Saturday by Motorcycle Policeman Kay, on a charge of exceeding the speed limit in his automobile, and who deposited $55 pending a hearing yesterday before Recorder Stackhouse, failed to put in an appearance. Recorder Stackhouse waited several hours for him and then declared the money forfeited. George Brink, of Hammonton, was arrested in front of the city hall yesterday by Motorcycle Policeman Pedigree on a charge of driving his automobile at excessive speed. He gave $55 security for a hearing.

MYSTIC SHRINERS TO ENJOY FIREWORKS AT BRIGHTON

Mecca Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles Mystic Shrine, is planning to enjoy Pain's "Battle in The Clouds" at Brighton Beach next Wednesday night. That they expect to have a glorious time is evident from the circular notice which has been sent out by Saram R. Ellison, Recorder, of Mecca Temple. There is also under consideration a trip to Atlantic City, on September 11 and 12, which a committee is now arranging for. Next Wednesday, for the trip to Brighton, the wearing of a fez will be fashionable and most important.

DOWNWARD COURSE.

Fast Being Realized by Plainfield People.

A little backache at first.

Daily increasing till the back is lame and weak.

Disorders quickly follow;

Diabetes and finally Bright's disease.

Don't take this course. Follow the advice of a Plainfield citizen.

Mrs. E. Dorflinger, 400 Clinton avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "About three years ago I was suffering badly from kidney trouble. There were dull, heavy pains in my back and in the top of my head. I also had dizzy spells and was subject to chills. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I procured a box at Randolph's Pharmacy and began their use. They promptly did away with my trouble and I have had no symptoms of its return since."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

WHEN OLD AGE COMES.

If God grant me old age,
I would see some things finished, some outworn;
Some stone prepared for builders yet unborn.
Nor would I be the salted, weary sage
Who sees no strange new wonder in each morn.
And with me there on wra men ca l
he shelf
Crowd memories from which I cull the best—
And live old strifes, old kisses, some old jest;
For if I be no burden to myself
I shall be less a burden to the rest.

If God grant you old age,
I'll love the record writ in whitened hair,
I'll read each wrinkle wrought by patient care,
As oft as one would scan a treasured page,
Knowing by heart each sentence graven there.
I'd have you know life's evil and and life's good.
And gaze out calmly, sweetly on it all—
Serene with hope, whatever may befall;
As though a love-strong spirit ever stood
With arm about you, waiting any call.

If God grant us old age,
I'd have us very lenient toward our kind,
Letting our waning senses first grow blind
Toward sins that youthful zealots can engage,
While we hug closer all the good we find.
I'd have us worldly foolish, heaven wise,
Each lending each frail succor to withstand,
Ungrudging, ev'ry mortal day's demand;
While fear-fed lovers gaze in our old eyes,
And go forth bold and glad and hand in hand.

—Burges Johnson in Harper's Magazine for August.

METUCHEN MAN TO BE ORDAINED.

The Baptist church of Metuchen is arranging for the ordination of Frederick Allen into the ministry. The permanent council of the East New Jersey Baptist association held a meeting in Newark recently at which time they examined the statements of Mr. Allen and found them to be satisfactory and the council recommended his ordination. The Baptist church of this place was notified to that effect and they have proceeded to make the arrangements for his ordination.

New Brunswick's Cheaper Ice.

New Brunswick has an ice war on. The Gross Ice Company of Perth Amboy has established a branch there and the local dealers reduced the cost of the commodity this morning to thirty-five cents a hundred wholesale and forty-five cents retail delivered. The price has been fifty cents and eighty cents heretofore. Gross Brothers, of Fords, who are behind the new company, fixed their price at twenty-five cents a hundred delivered at the steamboat dock with special rates to dealers. This same company is fighting the Union Ice Comapny in Newark.

ECONOMIES IN COOKING.

The housekeeper who is truly economical utilizes the things that most of us would throw away. Few women, for instance, know that peapods have any other use than to be thrown in the garbage pail; yet a delicious soup can be made from them, also a salad that some persons fancy.

In making the soup, pick the peas carefully and lay aside such pods as are fresh and green. Remove the string and stem from each pod. Put in clean saucepan, cover with cold water and let them cook slowly until soft. Drain the liquid through colander, pressing out as much substance from the pods as you can. The water in which the peas are boiled can be added to this liquid.

Pea Pod Salad—When ready to serve bring the liquid to boil add an equal quantity of milk or less if necessary, a slice of onion, plenty of salt, pepper and paprica, and thicken with a tablespoonful of butter and flour rubbed together.

Frankly pea pod salad is not so appetizing as the soup. Cook the pods until tender, but not so soft as for soup. Let them get icy cold and serve with a highly seasoned mayonnaise. If chopped cold beets or remnants of cauliflower are added to the pods, the salad is improved.

Another economy is a salad dressing that is a friend in need for the housekeeper who learns to utilize her sour milk. To a kitchen cup of sour milk or cream—sweet can be used if necessary—add an egg, one teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, a teaspoonful of mustard and another of cornstarch, also plenty of red and black pepper.

Good Salad Dressing—Rub salt, mustard, sugar and pepper in egg, stir it in milk and bring to boil. Add the cornstarch, which has been thinned in a little cold milk or water, and stir until the mixture thickens about to a consistency of a thick mayonnaise. Then add a piece of butter size of egg, or two tablespoonfuls of oil; lastly pour in a half cup of vinegar. Let the mixture boil up until thick.

This dressing when packed in a glass jar will keep a long time on the ice, and is invaluable for sliced tomatoes, potato salad, cold slaw, and is even a good substitue for Hollandaise sauce with asparagus or cauliflower.

A CLOTHES HANGER.

The raffia habit still persists, and there are even now a few things left uncovered and on which this attractive straw may be used. A clothes hanger is among them.

Not the usual small hanger to accommodate baby's coat or some single garment, but a strip of thin wood, two inches wide and two feet long, provided along its length with light brass hooks, screwed in, and two long wire eyes, one at either end, to fasten it in place. Wood and wire are wrapped with raffia exactly the way a basket handle is, unless the making of patterns in this material is an art with those who read.

The hanger is intended for all the clothes that little Miss Six or Seven will take off. She should be taught to hang each garment on a separate hook, and for this purpose the raffia covered hanger will be placed within her reach. The yawning closet, with its high-up hooks and the slippery chair back, from which all dresses and petticoats fall as soon as they are placed, need be no further obstacles to neatness. The hanger belongs near a window and fastened on the reverse side of the screen, behind which our little maid is taught to dress and undress.

The stick of wood may be padded, scented and puffed with silk or flowered dimity if the daintiness of the room demands something more ornate than twisted raffia. To the more fancy hanger belongs a ribbon covering for the wire eyes at the end of the hanger.

THE "STILL SMALL VOICE."

The moral of this story may be that it is better to heed the warnings of the "still small voice" before it is driven to the use of the telephone.

A New York lawyer, gazing idly out of his window, saw a sight in an office across the street that made him rub his eyes and look again. Yes there was no doubt it. The pretty stenographer was sitting upon the gentleman's lap. The lawyer noticed the name that was lettered on the window and then searched in the telephone book. Still keeping his eye upon the scene across the street, he called the gentleman up. In a few moments he saw him start violently, and take down the receiver.

"Yes," said the lawyer through the telephone, "I should think you would start."

The victim whisked his arm from its former position and began to stammer something.

"Yes," continued the lawyer severely, "I think you'd better take that arm away. And while you're about it, as long as there seem to be plenty of chairs in the room—

The victim brushed the lady from his lap rather roughly, it is to be feared. "Who—who the devil is this, anyhow?" he managed to splutter.

"I," answered the lawyer in deep, impressive tones, "am your conscience!" And then he hung up.—Everybody's Magazine.

If fresh fish is to be kept overnight it should be salted and laid on an earthen dish, not placed on a board or shelf.

Whispering Smith

He answered without hesitation. "You shall see. Now, I have many things I can't talk about, you understand. But if I had to give you a secret this instant that carried my life, I shouldn't fear to do it—so much for trusting you. Only this, too, as to what I say: Don't ever quote me or let it appear that you any more than know me. Can you manage that? Really? Very good; you will understand why in a minute. The man that is stirring up all this trouble with your Cousin Lance and in this whole country is your kind and good-natured neighbor, Mr. Sinclair. I am prejudiced against him; let us admit that on the start, and remember it in estimating what I say. But Sinclair is the man who has turned your cousin's head, as well as made things in other ways unpleasant for several of us. Sinclair—I tell you so you will understand everything, more than your cousin, Mr. McCloud, or Marion Sinclair understand—Sinclair is a train-wrecker and a murderer. That makes you breathe hard, doesn't it? but it is so. Sinclair is fairly educated and highly intelligent, capable in every way, daring to the limit, and, in a way, fascinating; it is no wonder he has a following. But his following is divided into two classes: The men that know all the secrets, and the men that don't—men like Rebstock and Du Sang, and men like your cousin and a hundred or so sports in Medicine Bend, who see only the glamour of Sinclair's pace. Your cousin sympathizes with Sinclair when he doesn't actually side with him. All this has helped to turn Sinclair's head, and this is exactly the situation you and McCloud and I and a lot of others are up against. They don't know all this, but I know it, and now you know it. Let me tell you something that comes close to home. You have a cowboy on the ranch named Karg—he is called Flat Nose. Karg was a railroad man. He is a cattle-thief, a train-robber, a murderer, and a spy. I should not tell you this if you were not game to the last drop of your blood. But I think I know you better than you know yourself, though you never saw me until last night. Karg is Sinclair's spy at your ranch, and you must never feel it or know it; but he is there to keep your cousin's sympathy with Sinclair, and to lure your cousin his way. And Karg will try to kill George McCloud every time he sets foot on this ranch, remember that."

"Then Mr. McCloud ought not to be here. I don't want him to stay if he is in danger!" exclaimed Dicksie.

"But I do want him to come here as if it mattered nothing, and I shall try to take care of him. I have a man among your own men, a cowboy named Wickwire, who will be watching Karg, and who is just as quick, and Karg, not knowing he was watched, would be taken unawares. If Wickwire goes elsewhere to work some one else will take his place here. Karg is not on the ranch now; he is up north, hunting up some of your steers that were run off last month by his own cronies. Now do you think I am giving you confidence?"

She looked at him steadily. "If I can only deserve it all." In the distance she heard the calling of the men at the river borne on the wind. The shock of what had been told her, the strangeness of the night and of the scene, left her calm. Fear had given way to responsibility and Dicksie seemed to know herself.

"You have nothing whatever to do to deserve it but keep your own counsel. But listen a moment longer—for this is what I have been leading up to," he said. "Marion will get a message to-morrow, a message from Sinclair, asking her to come to see him at his ranch-house before she goes back. I don't know what he wants—but she is his wife. He has treated her infamously; that is why she will not live with him and does not speak of him. But you know how strange a woman is—or perhaps you don't; she doesn't always cease to care for a man when she ceases to trust him. I am not in Marion's confidence, Miss Dicksie. She is another man's wife. I cannot tell how she feels toward him. I know she has often tried to reclaim him from his deviltry. She may try again, that is, she may, for one reason or another, go to him as he asks. I could not interfere, if I would. I have no right to, if I could, and I will not. Now this is what I'm trying to get up the courage to ask you. Should you dare to go with her to Sinclair's ranch if she decides to go to him?"

"Certainly I should dare."

"After all you know?"

"After all I know—why not?"

"Then in case she does go and you go with her, you will know nothing whatever about anything, of course, unless you get the story from her. What I fear is that which possibly may come of their interview. He may try to kill her—don't be frightened. He will not succeed if you can only make sure he doesn't lead her away on horseback from the ranch-house or get her alone in a room. She has few friends. I respect and honor her because she and I grew up as children together in the same little town in Wisconsin. I knew her folks, all of them, and I've promised them—you know—to have a kind of care of her."

"I think I know."

He looked self-conscious even at her tone of understanding. "I need not try to deceive you; your instinct would be poor if it did not tell you more than I ought to. He came along and turned her head. You need fear nothing for yourself in going with her, and nothing for her if you can cover

"Yonder They Come!"

just those two points—can you remember? Not to let her go away with him on horseback, and not to leave her where she will be alone with him in the house?"

"I can and will. I think as much of Marion as you do. I am proud to be able to do something for you. How little I have known you! I thought you were everything I didn't want to know."

"It's nothing," he returned, easily, "except that Sinclair has stirred up your cousin and the ranchers as well as the Williams Cache gang, and that makes talk about me. I have to do what I can to make this a peaceable country to live in. The railroad wants decent people here and doesn't want the other kind, and it falls on me, unfortunately, to keep the other kind moving. I don't like it, but we can none of us do quite what we please in making a living. Let me tell you this"—he turned to fix his eyes seriously on hers: "Believe anything you hear of me except that I have ever taken human life willingly or save in discharge of my duty. But this kind of work makes my own life an uncertainty, as you can see. I do almost literally carry my life in my hand, for if my hand is not quicker every time than a man's eye, I am done for then and there."

"It is dreadful to think of."

"Not exactly that, but it is something I can't afford to forget."

"What would become of the lives of the friends you protect if you were killed?"

"You say you care for Marion Sinclair. I should like to think if anything should happen to me you wouldn't forget her?"

"I never will."

He smiled. "Then I put her in charge of the man closest to me, George McCloud, and the woman she thinks the most of in the world—except her mother. What is this, are they back? Yonder they come."

"We found nothing serious," McCloud said, answering their questions as he approached with Lance Dunning. "The current is really swinging away, but the bank is caving in where it was undermined last night." He stopped before Dicksie. "I am trying to get your cousin to go to the house and go to bed. I am going to stay all night, but there is no necessity for his staying."

"Damn it, McCloud, it's not right," protested Lance, taking off his hat and wiping his forehead. "You need the sleep more than I do. I say he is the one to go to bed to-night," continued Lance, putting it up to Whispering Smith. "And I insist, by the Almighty, that you two take him back to the house with you now!"

Whispering Smith raised his hand. "If this is merely a family quarrel about who shall go to bed, let us compromise. You two stay up all night and let me go to bed."

Lance, however, was obdurate.

"It seems to be a family characteristic of the Dunnings to have their own way," ventured McCloud, after some further dispute. "If you will have it so, Mr. Dunning, you may stand watch to-night and I will go to the house."

Riding back with McCloud, Dicksie and Whispering Smith discussed the flood. McCloud disclaimed credit for the improvement in the situation. "If the current had held against us as it did yesterday, nothing I could have done would have turned it," he said.

"Honesty is the best policy, of course," observed Whispering Smith. "I like to see a modest man—and you want to remind him of all this when he sends in his bill," he suggested, speaking to Dicksie in the dark. "But," he added, turning to McCloud, "admitting that you are right, don't take the trouble to advertise your view of it around here. It would be only decent strategy for us in the valley just now to take a little of the credit due to the wind."

CHAPTER XXII.

The Man on the Frenchman.

Sinclair's place on the Frenchman backed up on a sharp rise against the foothills of the Bridger range, and the ranch buildings were strung along the creek. The ranchhouse stood on ground high enough to command the country for miles up and down the valley.

Only two roads lead from Medicine Bend and the south into the Frenchman country; one a wagon road following Smoky creek and running through Dale canyon; the other a pack road, known as the Gridley trail, crossing the Topah Topah hills and making a short cut from the Dunning ranch on the Crawling Stone to the Frenchman. The entire valley is, in fact, so difficult of access, save by the long and roundabout wagon road, that the sight of a complete outfit of buildings such as that put up by Sinclair always came as a surprise to the traveler, who, reaching the crest of the hills, looked suddenly down 1,000 feet on his well-ordered sheds and barns and corrals.

Over the Gridley trail from the Crawling Stone Marion and Dicksie Dunning rode early in the morning the day after McCloud and his men left the Stone ranch with their work done. The trail is a good three hours long, and they reached Sinclair's place at about ten o'clock. He was waiting for Marion—she had sent word she should come—and he came out of the front door into the sunshine with a smile of welcome when he saw Dicksie with her. Dicksie, long an admirer of Sinclair's, as women usually were, had recast somewhat violently her opinions of him. She faced him now with a criminal consciousness that she knew too much. The weight of the dreadful secret weighed on her, and her responsibility in the issue of the day ahead did not help to make her greeting an easy one. One thing only was fixed in her mind and reflected in the tension of her lips and her eyes: The resolve to keep at every cost the promise she had given. For Dicksie had fallen under the spell of a man even more compelling than Sinclair, and felt strangely bounden to what she had said.

Sinclair, however, had spirit enough to smooth quite away every embarrassment. "Bachelor's quarters," he explained roughly and pleasantly, as he led the two women toward the house. "Cowmen make poor housekeepers, but you must feel at home." And when Dicksie, looking at his Indian rugs on the floors, the walls, and the couches, said she thought he had little to apologize for, Sinclair looked gratified and took off his hat again. "Just a moment," he said, standing at the side of the door. "I've never been able to get Marion over here before, so it happens that a woman's foot has never entered the new house. I want to watch one of you cross the threshold for the first time."

Dicksie, moving ahead, retreated with a laugh. "You first, then, Marion."

"No, Dicksie, you."

"Never! you first." So Marion, quite red and wretchedly ill at ease, walked into the ranchhouse first.

Sinclair shone nowhere better than as a host. When he had placed his guests comfortably in the living room he told them the story of the building of the house. Then he made a cicerone of himself, and explained, with running comments, each feature of his plan as he showed how it had been carried out through the various rooms. Surprised at the attractiveness of things, Dicksie found herself making mental notes for her own use, and began asking questions. Sinclair was superb in answering, but the danger of admiring things became at once apparent, for when Dicksie exclaimed over a handsome bearskin, a rich dark-brown grizzly skin of unusual size, Sinclair told the story of the killing, bared his tremendous forearm to show where the polished claws had ripped him, and, disregarding Dicksie's protests, insisted on sending the skin over to Crawling Stone ranch as a souvenir of her visit.

"I live a great deal alone over here," he said, waving Dicksie's continued refusal magnificently aside as he moved into the next room. "I've got a few good dogs, and I hunt just enough to keep my hand in with a rifle." Dicksie quailed a little at the smile that went with the words. "The men, at least the kind I mix with, don't care for grizzly skins, and to enjoy anything you've got to have sympathetic company—don't you know that?" he asked, looking admiringly at Dicksie. "I've got another skin for you—a silver-tip," he added, in deep, gentle tones, addressing Marion. "It has a fine head, as fine as I ever saw in the Smithsonian. It is down at Medicine Bend now, being dressed and mounted. By the way, I've forgotten to ask you, Miss Dicksie, about the high water. How did you get through at the ranch?"

Dicksie, sitting on the piano bench, looked up with resolution. "Bravely!" she exclaimed. "Mr. McCloud came to our rescue with bags and mattresses and 100 men, and he has put in a revetment 1,000 feet long. Oh, we are regular river experts at our house now! Had you any trouble here, Mr. Sinclair?"

"No, the Frenchman behaves pretty well in the rock. We had 40 feet of [illegible] to-day, though; 40 feet, that's right. McCloud, yes; able fellow, I guess, too, though he and I don't hit it off." Sinclair sat back in his chair, and as he spoke he spoke magnanimously. "He doesn't like me, but that is no fault of his; railroad men, and good ones, too, sometimes get started wrong with one another. Well, I'm glad he took care of you. Try that piano, Miss Dicksie, will you? I don't know much about pianos, but that ought to be a good one. I would wheel the player over for you, but any one that plays as beautifully as you do ought not to be allowed to use a player. Marion, I want to talk a few minutes with you, may I? Do you mind going out under the cottonwood?"

Dicksie's heart jumped. "Don't be gone long, Marion," she exclaimed, impulsively, "for you know, Mr. Sinclair, we must get back by two o'clock." And Dicksie, pale with apprehension, looked at them both. Marion, quite composed, nodded reassuringly and followed Sinclair out of doors into the sunshine.

For a few minutes Dicksie fingered wildly on the piano at some half-forgotten air, and in a fever of excitement walked out on the porch to see where they were. To her relief, she saw Marion sitting near Sinclair under the big tree in front of the house, where the horses stood. Dicksie, with her hands on her girdle, walked forlornly back and forth, hummed a tune, sat down in a rocking chair, fanned herself, rose, walked back and forth again, and reflected that she was perfectly helpless, and that Sinclair might kill Marion a hundred times before she could reach her. And the thought that Marion was perhaps wholly unconscious of danger increased her anxiety.

She sat down in despair. How could Whispering Smith have allowed any one he had a care for to be exposed in this dreadful way? Trying to think what to do, Dicksie hurried back to the living room, walked to the piano, took the pile of sheet music from the top, and sat down to thumb it over. She threw song after song on the chair beside her. They were sheets of gaudy coon songs and ragtime with flaring covers, and they seemed to give off odors of cheap perfume. Dicksie hardly saw the titles as she passed them over, but of a sudden she stopped. Between two sheets of music lay a small handkerchief. It was mussed, and in the corner of it "Nellie" was written conspicuously in a laundry mark. The odor of musk became in an instant sickening. Dicksie threw the music disdainfully aside, and sprang up with a flushed face to leave the room. Sinclair's remark about the first woman to cross his threshold came back to her. From that moment Dicksie hated him. But no sooner had she seated herself on the porch than she remembered she had left her hat in the house, and rose to go in after it. She was resolved not to leave it under the roof another moment, and she had resolved to go over and wait where her horse was tied. As she re-entered the doorway she stopped. In the room she had just left a cowboy sat at the table taking apart a revolver to clean it. The revolver was spread in its parts before him, but across the table lay a rifle. The man had not been in the room when she left it a moment before.

Dicksie passed behind him. He paid no attention to her; he had not looked up when she entered the room. Passing behind him once more to go out, Dicksie looked through the open window before which he sat. Sinclair and Marion sitting under the cottonwood tree were in plain sight, and the muzzle of the rifle where it lay covered them. Dicksie thrilled, but the man was busy with his work. Breathing deeply, she walked out on the porch again. Sinclair, she thought, was looking straight at her, and in her anxiety to appear unconscious she turned, walked to the end of the house, and at the corner almost ran into a man sitting out of doors in the shade mending a saddle. He had removed his belt to work, and his revolver lay in the holster on the bench, its grip just within reach of his hand. Dicksie walked in front of him, but he did not look up. She turned as if changing her mind, and with a little flirt of her riding skirt sat down in the porch chair, feeling a faint moisture upon her forehead.

"I am going to leave this country, Marion," Sinclair was saying. "There's nothing here for me; I can see that. What's the use of my eating my heart out over the way I've been treated? I've given the best years of my life to this railroad, and now they turn me down with a kick and a curse. It's the old story of the Indian and his dog, only I don't propose to let them make soup of me. I'm going to the coast, Marion. I'm going to California, where I wanted to go when we were married, and I wish to God we had gone there then. All our troubles might never have been if I had got in with a different crowd from these cow-boozers on the start. And, Marion, I want to know whether you'll give me another chance and go with me."

Sinclair, on the bench and leaning against the tree, sat with folded arms looking at his wife. Marion in a hickory chair faced him.

"No one would like to see you be all you ought to be more than I, Murray; but you are the only one in the world that can ever give yourself another chance to be that."

"The fellows in the saddle here now have denied me every chance to make a man of myself again on the railroad—you know that, Marion. In fact, they never did give me the show I was entitled to. I ought to have had Hailey's place. Bucks never treated me right in that; he never pushed me in the way he pushed other men that were just as bad as I ever was. It [illegible] me; that's the reason I went to pieces."

"It could be no reason for treating me as you treated me; for bringing drunken men and drunken women into our house, and driving me out of it unless I would be what you were and what they were."

"I know I haven't treated you right; I've treated you shamefully. I will do anything on earth you say to square it. I will! Recollect, I had lived among men and in the same country with women like that for years before I knew you. I didn't know how to treat you; I admit it. Give me another chance, Marion."

"I gave you all that I had when I married you, Murray. I haven't anything more to give to any man. You would be disappointed in me if I could ever live with you again, and I could not do that without living a lie every day."

Don't Want "Billy" Sunday.

The Munice, Indiana, Merchants' Association has adopted a protest against bringing "Billy" Sunday, the ex-ballplayer evangelist, to Munice for a series of meetings. The protest sets out that the merchants are not opposed to church services but they don't need any undue excitement in the city, and above all things they want peace and quiet. "Billy" Sunday played with the Chicago "White Sox" when "Cap" Anson was at the head of the team. He is known all over the country as an evangelist.

Baseball and General Sports

BASEBALL.

Announcement was made yesterday morning that President Ban Johnson of the American League has suspended Umpire Tim Hurst. The suspension is the outcome of the recent Hurst-Collins fracas. Hurst will not be allowed to officiate at a game until the matter has been thoroughly investigated.

Pitcher Harry Alles and Shortstop George Stark have been sold by the San Antonio club of the Texas League to the Cleveland Americans. The sale of Pitcher Drucke, of the Dallas club, to the Giants, has been officially confirmed.

That Philadelphia-Donlin deal did not go through, as was predicted in these colmuns a week ago. The struggle for supremacy among the directors of the Quaker team is given out as the reason, but, perhaps John McGraw shed some light on the subject. Just watch Muggsy closely for another week.

The question has been asked many times recently, especially by the 'Plains fans, why doesn't Plainfield play Scotch Plains on the latter's grounds?" The answer is simple. The Plainfield team feels that it cannot get the same square deal in 'Plains as is given the 'Plains team here. This feeling, it is said, follows the frequent scraps which occurred between the members of the two nines last year, and it will be some time before the animus is wiped out. There may be other reasons of which the fans are ignorant, but the above is gathered from those who have followed the teams for the past two or three years and who are posted in the matter.

Manager Frentz's team certainly has behaved in a model way in the two games played here and it does not seem probable that they would wantonly destroy the good impression they have made here in their recent games. Why not bury the old hatchet and get together at the 'Plains?

SMALL CAR SHOWS SPEED; DEFEATS LARGER RIVALS.

Running against heavier, higher power cars, the 20 H. P. Hupmobile has been showing Texans that it is no slouch in speed races.

In a ten-mile race at Waco, Tex., the other day the Hupmobile was pitted against three cars, two of which are rated at 30 horsepower and the other at 50 horsepower. In spite of this the Hupmobile—driven, too, by an amateur—led them all to the finish point, with a good margin of seconds over the closest car.

At Corsicana, Texas, the same car won a five mile race in 8 minutes, 22 seconds. Twenty minutes later, with engine and radiator still hot, it started away in a ten-mile event against larger cars which had not run in the previous race. As a result the Hupmoblie was beaten at the finish by 15 feet. The time of the race was 14:42.

To make the meet interesting, an eight mile race on the reverse was arranged. The Hupmobile took down the prize in this also, doing the distance in 23 seconds, against the 35 seconds required by its nearest competitor, a big six-cylinder car.

DIDN'T BELIEVE BURGLAR ALARM, FINDS CASH GONE.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company is out of pocket about $25 as the result of the tapping of the cashbox in the telephone booth at the Lackwanna Depot, in Dover Thursday. The booth is connected with the baggage room by an electric burglar alarm, but the contrivance had not been on its good behavior for some days. Several times the wires got crossed, with the result that Baggagemaster Theodore Ford was summoned by the ringing of the alarm going, only to find that there was nothing wrong.

When the alarm sounded Ford hurried to the waiting room, but when he saw a man in the booth with the reeciver to his ear, evidently in the act of telephoning, he did not disturb him, concluding that the alarm had gone wrong again.

Shortly after this it was discovered that some one had unlocked the cashbox and removed the coin. Ford furnished a description of the man in the booth, and a bystander remembered seeing a man who answered the description and a companion board the 6:22 train, which does not make any stops this side of Hoboken.

Word was telephoned to Hoboken, and detectives there, it was reported caught a pair who tallied with the descriptions given. Other telephone booths along the Lackawanna have been robbed lately, and it is thought that the same pair of burglars have done the work.

WOMEN JOY RIDERS NOT UNDER THE POLICE BAN.

Feminine joy riders are not to fall under the ban which Mayor Stoy, of Atlantic City, has placed on masculine followers of this sort of seashore fun, according to new rules handed the police Thursday for direction as to how to carry out the crusade against speeders in automobiles.

Under the rule which prescribes arrests for running cars more than fifteen miles an hour in the city the police are ordered not to bother women who may be in the cars, but to jail the men.

The new order also places a ban on unmuffled machines and loud siren horns after midnight, and compels arrest of intoxicated drivers whenever the police are assured that their management of cars places pedestrians or other vehicles in peril.

New Idea Men Gain Point.

The New Idea men have won in the preliminary skirmish in the legal war against the Republican committee in Hudson county. Justice Swayze said yesterday that he would issue the writ of mandamus to force County Chairman Rotherham to file as the list of vacancies to be filled an entirely new membership. The list of vacancies filed by the county chairman numbers 158, and the total membership is 477. The New Ideaites were elated at the announcement of their victory, and are confident of obtaining a special session of the Supreme Court and winning the final battle.

MRS. HAZLETON'S DIVORCE VALID BY JUSTICE BRADY.

The divorce proceedings brought by Dr. Ralph Tousey, of New York city, against his former wife, Mrs. Elena V. Tousey-Hazleton, of Netherwood, were nullified by Justice Brady in New York yesterday when he declared the divorce obtained by his former wife in South Dakota in 1904 was valid and she is therefore legally the wife of Harry W. Hazelton.

This decision was expected as it was well known at the time Dr. Tousey instituted his suit that the decree obtained by Mrs. Hazleton was valid because of the appearance of Dr. Tousey through counsel at the trial. The notoriety following the filing of Dr. Tousey's suit in New York has been a source of much annoyance to Mr. and Mrs. Hazelton, but the decision of Justice Brady removes all possible questions as to the validity of the divorce obtained by Mrs. Hazleton.

DEMOCRATIC CO. COMMITTEE TO INCREASE MEMBERSHIP.

The Union County Democratic Executive Committee met last night in Elizabeth and after transacting the regular routine business announced a special meeting for next Wednesday night when three members of the county committee will be elected. The added members are caused by the redistricting of Elizabeth.

W. E. Tuttle, chairman of the committee, presided and James E. Martine, of this city, made a few remarks regarding the recent effort to have a vote taken in this city on the removal of the voting machines. 150 names of election officers will be submitted to the Union County Board of Elections next week. The annual outing of the committee will be held on August 18 at Wetzel's Point, on Long Island Sound.

R., which will attend the funeral in a body. Mr. Devine left besides his wife two daughters and one son. The funeral will take place from his late residence at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon. Relatives and friends are invited to attend.

Walter Dennis' Mishap.

Walter Dennis, of Watchung avenue, accompanied by Robert and William Skinner, of West Fourth street, went for a twenty-five mile bicycle ride last night and when near New Market on the way home, a dog got in front of Mr. Dennis' wheel and in trying to avoid hitting the animal he was thrown with considerable force to one side of the road. Mr. Dennis' arm and left leg were severely cut and bruised, and today are giving him considerable pain. Mr. Dennis is an employe at the Roth market on East Front street.

THE BATHING GIRL OF 1909.

Among the varied bathing suits brought out for the summer season, a fashionable shop has projected upon the public the queerest one of all. Its novelty will probably gain a wide following.

It is of old-fashioned figured silk, the kind worn decades ago. The foundation color is of pink or blue or brown, with stripes of white and colored flowers over the surface.

The model is the popular semi-princess one, with a narrow belt at sides and back, and a box plait down front and back. There is a Dutch neck, a lingerie collar and gathered sleeves half way to elbow.

The gown is only half of the costume. The accessories are important. There is a Charlotte Corday cap of silk, lined with rubber, with long streamers from the sides; a pair of shoes reaching well above the ankles, made with rubber soles, the top part of the silk, wide open in front and laced across like sandals with ribbon to match. The silk stockings are of the color of the silk frock.

The cap and the shoes are not so novel, however, as the sunshade and the reticule. Both of these are of the silk.

The sunshade is wide and flat, with a long bamboo handle and the reticule is a generous affair made like a sewing bag and carried over the arm by long wide ribbons of the silk.

The idea of adding these articles to a bathing costume is good and acceptable. Of course, they belong to the beach and not to the water. But even the best swimmers spend a great deal of their time on the beach these days.

As for the reticule it will prove a delight to every woman. In it she carries all the little articles that are necessary, such as talcum powder, a handkerchief, possibly cold cream, a book she may want to read, her comb and brush, etc.

It is a dainty substitute for the black satchel. When there is so much of a beach parade these days, and when it is the habit to spend hours of the morning in one's bathing suit, it is quite a pretty idea to have the light shoes, the picture hat, the gay little reticule and the necessary sunshade all in harmony with the suit.

Tonic for Dry Skin.

Be very careful in the choice of soaps, as many have the tendency of making the skin feel tight and drawn. Lanna oil soap or olive soap agree perfectly with the skin. Apply this tonic with a bit of medicated cotton several times a day: Glycerine, 2 ounces; limewater, 2 ounces; distilled witch hazel, 2 ounces. Orange cream would be excellent for missaging.

TELLS OF SECOND BIRTH

Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnston Delivers a Strong Sermon at Union Service.

RIGHT MOTIVES ARE ESSENTIAL

Those Who Have Not The Spiritual Sense Are Born Once, and Die Twice, He Says.

Despite the warm weather a large congregation attended the union service last night in the First Presbyterian church, when the Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnson, of New Brunswick, preached. Music was rendered by the congregation, and the Rev. Mr. Lewis Bond read the scripture.

Dr. Johnson dwelt to some extent on the second birth of man, the spiritual birth. "Those who have not the spiritual sense are born but once, and die twice," he said.

In speaking of motives, he showed how all of our actions are determined by motives, and, as an essential, how necessary it is to be actuated by the right motives. "When we know that a man's motives are pure," he said, "then we trust him implicitly. Where we do not know a man's motives, we should strive to find out what they are; for all of our estimation of him, will inevitably spring from this source."

"Sympathy of heart, lies in the same plane with high moties, and as a corollary all virtue really springs from the union of the two. Thus, it is our duty to look first for a man's motives. Once we understand these, then we understand the man. A lot of misunderstanding in the world would be done away with if people would only be more sympathetic in this respect towards their neighbors.

"There are many critics of the Christian religion who complain of its lack of humanity. Why that is exactly what it teaches—the fellowship of man. Brotherly love is one of the prime forces in it, taught by our Lord Jesus Christ, and in his life exemplified by Him. In this world we want a wider understanding of man for man. This understanding must be tempered by a broad sympathy and open heartedness. Much of it exists today, but as we are looking for a universal state of happiness in the world and a better condition of man, we must strive to make it more apparent, and more common. Then, in truth we will have that brotherly love that our Lord preached and taught."

Next Sunday evening the union service will be held in the Methodist church and will be in charge of the Rev. Mr. Parks, of Philadelphia.

CONNETT AND VAN ORDERN APPEAR IN BOROUGH COURT

Miss Emeline Connett, colored, and Daniel VanOrdern, who sometime ago figured in a police raid on New street, were arraigned before Mayor Samuel Townsend in the borough police court, this morning, on a charge of being drunk and disorderly at 58 Jackson avenue, Saturday night. They were given their choice of paying a $10 fine or spending the next ten days in the county jail. Miss Connett will pay her fine, while her companion will doubtless go to jail. Both pleaded guilty to the charge.

The pair was captured by Chief Marshal Weiss. Van Orden is 63 years of age, and he and Miss Connett were captured in a raid for a similar disturbance on New street several months ago. At the time, VanOrden was found in the cellar of the house with several ribs broken. As a result of that escapade, Miss Connett spent a short vacation in the county jail at Elizabeth.

Munoz—Schorb.

Miss Corinthia E. Schorb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Schorb, of the New Madison, became the bride of Manuel Munoz, of Cranford on Saturday afternoon in Christ church, Elizabeth. Rev. Samuel Porter, assistant rector of the church, performed the ceremony in the absence of Rev. Dr. H. H. Eberly, who is touring Europe. The ceremony was witnessed by the family and a brother-law of the groom. The couple are spending a brief honeymoon at Atlantic City and on their return will go to Pittsburg to live where Mr. Munoz has his business.

ZIONISTS GET SUPPORT

TO LOCATE IN PALESTINE.

A. H. Fromenson Speaks of Work of Dr. Nordeau Before Large Audience in Y. M. H. A. Hall.

Through the efforts of the local Zionist Society, Brei Zion, A. H. Fromenson, a noted New York orator, spoke before a large audience at the Y. M. H. A. hall on Grove street, last night. His speech covered the idea and the scope of the Zionistic movement which is now of pregnant interest to the Jewish people throughout the civilized world. He outlined the movement of which Dr. Max Nordau is the head and told of some of the accomplishments of the latter.

The Jewish people, he said, are accustomed to celebrate deaths and fasts among their people, but not births. This is due to the fact that when a Jewish man is born the race does not know definitely whether he will remain true to the race. In the case of Dr. Nordau it is the celebration of the 60th birthday. The Jews live abnormally and have no land. Now the Zionistic movement is striving to obtain a land for these people. If Dr. Hertzl, the founder of the movement, is compared to Moses, it is fitting to compare Dr. Nordau to Aaron.

The Bible states that the Jews will sometime return to Palestine by a miracle. Now it is imperative to determine what a miracle is. Our modern inventions, our tunnels, our wireless telegraphy were considered miracles, and the inventors of them, dreamers, before they became realities. It is the same relation here, we who are furthering the movement are now considered by some to be dreamers.

He then showed how the Jewish people constitute a distinct nationality. They have a common language, the Hebrew; they have a common history, a common literature, and their traditions are the same. Further, their physiognomies mark them as distinct from others, no matter where they may live. They have the characteristics of a nation, they have sons to whom the world pays great tribute, why should they not have the right to establish their own home?

In introducing Dr. Fromenson, Judge William N. Newcorn, of this city, spoke of the work of Dr. Nordau. Dr. Nordau he said was born in Budapest, studied medicine and later engaged in journalism, where he made a name for himself. His book, "Degeneration," created a sensation in the world of letters. Music by the choir, who sang in Hebrew and in Yiddish, added to the meeting yesterday.

The local society is working in harmony with the general movement to establish a center for Jewish culture, in Palestine. The idea is not to have Hebrews who are established in this country and in other countries leave them, or forswear them, but to help those who wish to locate in a native land. Further, it is a movement to awaken a strong national conscience among these people, whose achievements, he said, rank high in every field of human endeavor.

COLORED WOMAN THIEF ACCUSES AN ITALIAN.

Ida Brown, a colored New Yorker, who has been making her home on West Third street during her few days' stay in this city, has changed her address once again. Until the middle of September, her abode will be "Union county jail, Elizabeth, N. J." Judge Runyon dixit.

Ida "lifted" a ten-dollar bill from the pocket of Leonard di Leonardo, a West Front street Italian, when she met him on Liberty street Saturday night. The robbery was effected during an embrace, which the Italian said took him by surprise. The money was in his watch pocket, and when he discovered his loss, he told Patrolman Saffron, who arrested the woman. The money was found on her.

At court today, Ida told a story about ungentlemanly behaviour by di Leonardo. She was sentenced to forty days in jail, but the police will investigate her story.

CO. K. HIKE IS TRYING

Heat and Sand Impede the Progress of the Boys on the March.

OLD BRIDGE CAMP ENJOYED.

Quartermaster Sergeant Apgar Maintains Reputation in the Kitchen —Start for Farmingdale Today.

Englishtown, N. J., Sunday.

The men are resting from a very ardous march, beginning at 7 o'clock and ending at 11:30. This is a well deserved rest as the work done this morning was of a very severe nature. The sun and sand combined to tire out the men. The teams pulling the commissary wagon having a great deal of difficulty, the men being frequently called upon to assist the horses out of the deep sand.

The camp Saturday night at Old Bridge was enjoyed by all. It was quite warm and the men were just tired enough to sleep well.

It is thought that tonight the men will be too tired to sleep at all. A large number of visitors are making things pleasant for the boys who take great pleasure in showing them the different points of interest in the camp.

Private Wiley weighs 10 pounds less than he did since leaving Plainfield. He says he can well afford to lose that much.

Private John Millwater is entertaining a large number of women friends and is ably assisted by Private Welsh.

Sergeant Apgar, the ever popular quartermaster of the company, is doing great stunts in the kitchen line and is ably assisted by Privates Hasten and Palmer. The latter has been given a new name—he is called Sparrow—as he mistook several early this morning for quail.

Private Randolph has succeeded Private Russell Van Buskirk as the biggest kicker in the company. Private Van Buskirk threatens to go home as he says the work is too hard. Of course, if he leaves Private George Cole goes with him, as they are inseparable. They are known as the Hall Room Boys.

Sergeant-Major Bilyeau and Corporal Rothberg arrived at camp at 12:30. They left Plainfield on the 5:45 trolley and "hiked" it alone from Farmers' Corner.

Tents will be struck at 6:30 tomorrow (Monday) and the detachment will proceed on its third stage of the march to Sea Girt, 15 miles. This may mean anything up to 20 miles. Private.

VAGRANT "TYPO" IS CAUGHT PANHANDLING

A type-setter, who calls no place but "Merrie England" his home, was arrested by Patrolman Messler on North avenue yesterday afternoon, when he was engaged in "bracing" people for the "carfare to Bound Brook." The man said his name is Joseph Smith, and told a hard-luck story of sickness and love that won him a suspended sentence from City Judge Runyon at his hearing this morning.

After a short dissertation about the evils of linotype machines as killers of the printer's business, "Smith" told of a lost job in Bound Brook, where he said he has relatives. "I had seven cents left when I got to Plainfield yesterday," he said, "and it was too hot to walk to Bound Brook, so I asked a man for money. I have a rich sweet-heart over in England, and I guess I'll go back there and marry her. She's got a fortune of 40,000 pounds, and used to spend her money on me freely before I came to America."

Asked why he didn't settle down and work, the prisoner said that he had been "set back" by a stroke of paralysis, and at the time of his sickness, a physician had told him that he'd never walk again. Judge Runyon told him he'd have to walk from Plainfield anyhow, and as he started out of the court-room he said, "Say, I wish that physician could see me now!"

Counsellor Crane Wears a Smile.

CONGER ADMITS CRIMES

SUSPECTED OF OTHER CRIMES.

Cigars and Money Found On His Person—Taken to Rahway Saturday—Gave Wrong Addresses.

Edward Conger, the self-confessed horse thief and holdup man, was taken from the City Hospital in Newark Saturday to Rahway by Detective Conger, of that city. Before he was taken away his photograph was taken together with his pedigree and he was measured by the Bertillon system.

Conger has admitted stealing the horse and runabout he was driving at the time of his arrest and has also confessed the attempted holdup of a storekeeper in Rahway. When questioned by the police in regard to the robberies at Maplewood and Bronner's hotel on Springfield avenue, Conger said, "Oh, I am sick, captain, I don't know what I did," and that was all the man would say.

Mrs. Frankton, of Springfield avenue, Maplewood, has identified Conger as the man who broke a window in her place last Tuesday night, getting away with $1.61 and a box of cigars. Several addresses in this city have been given by the prisoner, the last being 415 West Second street. These addresses are all fictitious but it is known for a fact by the police of this city that Conger lived on West Second street or in this vicinity. A long sentence is staring him in the face for the three crimes committed within a few hours.

Conger's record shows that he has been up on charges before the local police on several occasions but never for anything quite as serious as the present crimes. The crimes include holding up a woman on the outskirts of Rahway at the point of a revolver and when resistence was made to his demands, stealing some cigars from the counter. In order to make his getaway he stole the horse and runabout which had been left standing in front of an adjacent store. Previous to these two maneuvres he had broken into two places along the road near Rahway in which the booty secured was of small consequence.

Conger's arrest was due as much to the fact that he was taken ill suddenly and was unable to get by the Newark police, as that the horse he drove was in an almost exhausted condition from the hard drive it had been subjected to.

MRS. BURR'S DEATH DUE TO GRIEF FOR HUSBAND

Mrs. Evelyn Hart Burr, wife of the late Samuel DeVere Burr, died yesterday morning in Easton, Pa., where she had been for the past five months, following the death of her husband last October. The shock of Mr. Burr's death impaired her health and she sought relief in the Easton Sanitarium.

Mrs. Burr, nee Miss Evelyn Hart, was born in Cranford, April 6, 1853. She was educated in the Plainfield schools and was a classmate of Samuel Burr, whom she later married. She was graduated from the old Plainfield High School in 1870, the first class that went out from that school, and was valdedictorian. She then taught in the city schools for a few years, after which she married the late Samuel DeVere Burr.

For some time after their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Burr lived in Brooklyn, N. Y., but finally moved to Plainfield, where they resided until the death of Mr. Burr last October. Mrs. Burr was a member of the First Presbyterian church.

Mrs. Burr is survived by two brothers, Ebeneezar Hart, of Jersey City, and L. E. Hart, of Westfield; and two sisters, Miss S. Augustus Hart and Miss Emma Hart, of Asbury Park.

A daughter, Mrs. Charles W. Buckalew, of 5 Rockview avenue, also survives her. Previous to her marriage, Mrs. Buckalew was graduated from the Plainfield High School with honors, and she too, later tought in the city schools. One son, Hudson C. Burr, is now living in Newark. He was graduated from the city high school in the class of 1906 and was a student at Brown University.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon from the home of Mrs. Charles W. Buckalew, on Rockview avenue, at 2:30 o'clock.

MRS. MORRIS BLOCK WILL LIVE AT COUNTY ALMSHOUSE

The town of Cranford has been given the decision in the suit against M. B. Block's bondsman, Morris Abrams, of this city, but the latter has appealed the case to the higher courts. Cranford has been boarding Mrs. Block for the past five weeks.

Believing that generosity (with public money) has its proper limits, the Cranford township authorities have decided to discontinue the arrangement whereby Mrs. Morris Block has lately been living in fine style at the Cranford Hotel. From now on, if she insists upon her rights as a pauper resident to be maintained, she must accept accommodations provided in the county poor house, for which the rate is $14 a month or thereabouts. It is thought that the plainer fare and less attractive surroundings of the almhouse may suggest to Mrs. Block the advisability of looking for work.

PLAINFIELD TO HAVE FOUR. MORE ELECTION OFFICERS.

The Union County Board of Elections will meet on Monday, August 16, when lists will be received from both Republicans and Democrats, and from which will be chosen election officers for the various districts in the county. Rusling Ryno, of Rahway, clerk; Oliver Conklin, of Elizabeth, sergeant at arms. The other members of the board are Ralph L. Morrow, of this city, and Fred Zior, of Elizabeth.

On account of the opening of a new election district in the Second ward, there will be four new election officers required, making a total of forty for the entire city, comprising Republicans and Democrats.

PLAINFIELD DOGS WIN AT LONG BRANCH SHOW

Summer folk from cottage colonies, which dot the North Jersey shore, as well as dog fanciers from all parts of the State, attended the second annual exhibition of the Monmouth County Kennel Club at Hollywood Park, Long Branch, Saturday afternoon. There were 950 entries, and the largest crowd of Plainfielders at any show was noted.

Plainfield dogs, as usual, figured prominently in the awards. Meadowview Kennels, owned by A. G. Hooley, won the winners in both dog and bitch classes, with Meadowview Yale and Meadowview Beatrice. They also won a cup for the best bred dog by exhibitor with champion Meadowview Rock, who was shown with Lady Allister for exhibition and specials only. The kennels also won in the brace and team class.

Fred Moore, of this city, who exhibited his dog, "Snowball," won two blues and a winners, making four blues and two winners taken by the dog this season. Charles Woolston, of this city, also received a blue for his entry.

F. C. SUTRO SPEAKS AT THE FRESH AIR CAMP.

The meeting at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home yesterday afternoon was well attended and included some fifty mothers of the children who are being entertained at the camp. The services were in charge of F. C. Sutro, of Basking Ridge, who was accompanied by several members of the choir of the First Presbyterian church of that town.

Mr. Sutro gave an interesting talk to the children taking for his subject the proverb: "Go to the ant thou sluggard." Mr. Sutro made the story plain in his comparison of the industry and co-operation of the little insects and what is possible for children to accomplish.

Rev. Morgan Ashley, rector of St. Stephen's church, who followed Mr. Sutro, used no text, but took the soldier as his topic, drawing from it a lesson in obedience and facing the great enemy—sin.

Miss Emma Collins, of the Basking Ridge choir, sang two solos accompanied on the organ by Miss Buckoven. A very good collection was taken up.

FALLING POLE KILLS BOY

WAS WATCHING THE WORKMEN.

Fatal Accident Happened When Pole Slipped As It Was Being Lowered Into Hole.

Frank Durso, the four-year-old son of Joseph Durso, of 950 West Third street, was fatally crushed by a falling pulley-line pole at the home of Rosario Duca, of 225 Prescott place, Saturday afternoon. Death was instantaneous.

The fatal accident happened at shortly after 5 o'clock, when the thirty-foot timber slipped from the shoulder of Salvatore Verlario, who was assisting Duca, as it was being lowered into the hole the men had dug for it. As it fell, the pole struck a barrel, and bounded from this, bearing the little boy down beneath it. The workmen hastily lifted the big timber and carried the little fellow into the house, and Mrs. Durso, who is also the mother of an eighteen-months-old baby, was notified. The accident caused terror among the Italians of the section, where little Durso was a great favorite. He was one of a group of Italian children who stood watching the men as they worked.

The excitement attracted Patrolman O'Keefe, who summoned City Physician Lufburrow and County Physician F. W. Westcott. An exaination showed that the boy had been killed instantly, and the county physician caused the body to be removed to Cole's undertaking rooms. The funeral was held this afternoon at 3 o'clock from the home of the boy's parents, and the interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

HOTTEST DAY OF THE YEAR YESTEADAY

Yesterday's fierce heat surpassed for intensity anything that Plainfield has experienced this summer. And the pity of it was that the thunder storms which threatened to visit the neighborhood failed to materalize. All the afternoon the black clouds which hovered over and around Plainfield took other courses and went away leaving the city a sweltering melting pot. Everything sizzled all day long. Some optimists claimed that the thermometer did not get above the 96 degree mark, but there are those who say that 98 was the mark at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Hundreds of people took advantage of the open trolley cars, and even of those which are closed, making mental resolutions to write to the powers that be about the inhuman use of closed cars on the Netherwood line. One trolley conductor who gave it as his opinion that yesterday was the warmest this year said the travel on the main line was enormous and he had issued as many as 200 transfers on a single trip. Today while it is hot in spots the thermometer does not show anything as bad as scorching as that of yesterday.

FUMIGATING CANDLES CAUSE ALARM OF FIRE IN WEST END.

Mistaking the smoke from burning sulphur candles used in fumigating the home of C. Wesley Holland, of West Seventh street, for smoke coming from other sources, a passerby sent in an alarm to the West End fire company at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

The firemen responded in good time, but had nothing to do. It appears that a domestic opened one of the windows in a room where the candles were burning, and the smoke issuing from the window attracted the attention of a passerby who sent in a still alarm.

Plainfielders on Canoeing Trip.

Edward Abbott, of West Front street; Frank Wilcox, of Watchung avenue; Russel Morris, of East Seventh street, and Alfred Beeken, of Fanwood, who left last week for a trip to Lake Hopatcong by way of the Morris canal, reached there after a three days' trip. They passed through sixteen locks and eight planes and they are now encamped at the Ram's Horn on Halsey Island. The camping spot was given to them by John Hall, of this city. They will leave Monday for home, making the trip by way of the Raritan canal.

UNION PRINTERS IN CONVENTION

St. Joseph, Mo., Aug. 9.—The fifty-fifth convention of the International Typographical Union convened today in the Coliseum, St. Joseph's big convention hall. Addresses of welcome were made by Mayor Clayton, President Burnham, of the local typographical union, and others, and a response by President Lynch, of the International Typographical Union, after which the convention began consideration of a large volume of business, ultimately adjourning until Tuesday morning to hear the report of the credentials committee on contested seats.

The reports of President Lynch and Secretary-Treasurer Hays show great progress made by the union during the last year.

The International Typographical Union is fifty-seven years old, and with the present gathering has held fifty-five conventions during its lifetime. In 1896 and 1898 biennial conventions were held. The International Typographical Union claims to be the oldest national or international organization of skilled labor in the world. Its sessions here this week are attended by three hundred delegates and eight hundred visitors.

Matters of importance that are to come before the convention are propositions for the establishment of an insurance feature, and certain changes proposed in the pension policy that was made effective by the union one year ago. The relations between the union and the American Newspaper Publishers' Association will also be up for consideration.

The International Typographical Union has many features that are unique with labor organizations, and which stamp this union as one of the most progressive in the labor field. The pension policy, for instance, is distinctive with the International Typographical Union. Under the pension law, members who have reached the age of 60 years and are unable to secure sustaining employment at the trade are paid $4 per week. The payment of pensions has heretofore been considered the function of the government, but in this instance the union evidently believes that its veterans should be taken care of independent of State or nation. The payment of pensions began with the first of last August, and up to May 31, when the union's fiscal year closed, $67,580 had been paid pensioners, while the administration of the fund had cost only $2,000.

The union also conducts a Home at Colorado Springs, and contributed during its fiscal year to this institution $86,518.31. The actual expense of conducting the Union Printers Home was $72,598.94, and there was a balance in the Home fund of $32,337.63. The receipts and expenditures of the Home from its inception to May 31, 1909, were $867,801.29 and $835,463.66. The Home property at Colorado Springs is valued at $1,000,000.

The union pays a burial benefit of $75.

During the fiscal year there were 509 deaths, and the benefits paid amounted to $38,175.

For advertising its union label the union paid out $7,617.48.

The expenditures of the International Typographical Union during its fiscal year were $161,544.45.

From the year 1891 to 1909 the union received $6,188,045.75, and expended $5,950,898.90, this sum including the expense of conducting the Union Printers Home.

The union has a membership of 47,174.

The union also conducts a technical school at Chicago for the benefit of its members and apprentices who desire to perfect themselves in their trade.

The sessions of the convention will continue throughout the week.

EXONERATE AUTOIST WHO RACED WITH A TRAIN.

Although Frank G. Moore, of Philadelphia, beat out a train on the West Jersey division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, he will retain his automobile license. J. B. R. Smith, commissioner of motor vehicles, has decided, after a careful investigation, that the State laws were not broken, because the passenger train ran so slowly.

It is not likely that the race would have been aired had it not been for the fact that friends indulged in considerable talk about it. The matter was called to the attention of Inspector Shinn, who reported it to Commissioner Smith, at the State house. He summoned Mr. Moore to appear before him, and a full investigation was made.

The railroad schedule showed that the train was run under twenty-five miles an hour, and testimony of witnesses was to the effect that the driver of the automobile had kept his machine within the speed limit. The only possible violation of the law was that the machine had been used for racing. But it has been decided that that particular clause refers to racing automobiles.

—Rev. T. M. Smith, of this city, will judge sporting spaniels at the annual bench show of the Lehigh Valley Kennel club, to be held at Central Park, Allentown, Pa., Thursday, September 2. This will be the first show of the club.

CANDIDATES IN THE FIELD FOR ELIZABETH COMPTROLLER.

From the outlook at the present time the candidates for the office of Comptroller, in Elizabeth, to succeed the present holder of that office, Peter B. Bonnett, will be many and varied within the next few months. Prominently mentioned for the office are City Councilman John S. Sauer, General Dennis F. Collins and former Comptroller A. B. Carlton.

Mr. Sauer and General Collins are pushing their candidacies for the office. Friends of Mr. Carlton are quietly at work in an effort to bring him into consideration. Mayor Mravlag is said to be in favor of Mr. Carlton's appointment.

Mr. Bonnett's term will expire in December.

SIXTY CHILDREN LEAVE FOR TWO MONTHS IN COUNTRY.

About sixty children from the Home for the Friendless, South Orange avenue and Bergen street, Newark, in charge of the matron, Miss Emma T. Ormandy, left Saturday for their new summer quarters at Mountainside, which they are afforded through the courtesy of Dr. J. Ackerman Coles. They will remain away from the city until about October 1. Plans were made for the children to leave the first of last June, but as their accommodations were not then ready, the departure had to be delayed until this month. They went by trolley to Westfield, where conveyances met them and took the party to their summer quarters.

DESERTED BY HIS WIFE, FARMER ENDS HIS LIFE.

Aaron Lomerson, Jr., forty-four years old, is dead at his home in Whitehouse, a suicide, from an overdose of laudanum, according to Coroner Naughright, of High Bridge, who made a post mortem examination. Lomerson swallowed the poison and died while a physician worked over him.

It is said that Lomerson had ill-treated his wife and that she left him. Since then he had been in a despondent mood. He was employed on the farm of his brother-in-law, Hardy Vliet, and complained of feeling ill. Mr. Vliet sent him to the house later found him on the porch in a stupor. He could not rouse him and summoned Dr. F. G. Clark.

Lomerson leaves a widow, a son and three daughters. The funeral services were held this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. S. D. Decker, pastor of the Methodist church, officiated. The interment was in the Rural Hill Cemetery.

Federal Auto Bill.

"Announcement by Governor Fort, of New Jersey, of a movement in the Eastern States, including New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Massachusetts, to adopt automobile regulations applicable in each State, and to have the license numbers applicable in each State good in the other States, is interesting," remarked S. H. Mora, treasurer of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association. "If this movement can be brought to a definite basis it will mean much toward the adoption of a federal bill, which is the goal of all the automobilists."

MANY QUESTIONS ON THE NEW TARIFF

Letters of instruction have been forwarded by the Treasury Department to Collectors of Customs, containing regulations for their guidance in the administration of the Payne tariff act. Official copies of the law already had been sent to the collectors.

It is expressed that by tomorrow, practically every collector at the large ports will become an animated interrogation point respecting various phases of the new law. Scores of questions as to its administration will arise.

Special attention is paid in the instructions to imports from the Philippines, which are provided for in the Philippine tariff law. Collectors have been instructed to admit all articles from those islands free of duty, except rice, until further notice. Collectors are required, however, to report to the Treasury Department without delay all entries of sugar, tobacco and cigars so that a precise tab may be kept on such importations, as their importation from the Philippines is limited by the terms of the law. Collectors in the Philippines also will report to the Treasury the amount of such articles shipped to the United States.

The law limits the free entry into this country from the Philippines of sugar to $300,000 tons a year; filler tobacco to 1,000,000 pounds a year; wrapper tobacco to 300,000 pounds a year; and cigars to 150,000,000 a year. It is not expected by Treasury officials that these amounts will be exceeded for a long time, perhaps several years.

The Acting Commissioner of Internal Revenue has prepared a circular letter to revenue collectors respecting the removal, under certain conditions, of the tax on leaf tobacco. No change will take place in the tax on cigars until July 1, 1910, and instructions respecting it will not be issued until shortly before that time.

Collection of the tax on corporations is lodged with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. Until the recently appointed commissioner, Royal E. Caball, of Richmond, Va., shall assume the duties of his office about September 1, little if anything will be done in preparation for the work. A division of experts will be organized and these officials will prepare the instructions to the collectors and agents probably late in the approaching autumn. The law requires that the corporations shall make their returns to the bureau by January 1, 1910. From these returns the assessments of the tax will be made and the collections of the tax will begin on July 1, next.

DOG BITES LITTLE BOY AT NETHERWOOD CAMP.

A brown mongrel dog caused a small panic among the 300 children at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home yesterday morning, when it attacked ten-year-old "Jakey" Foster, whose home is on Third avenue, New York, and bit him on the right leg. Dr. N. W. Currie was summoned and dressed the wound. The dog, which is not believed to have been rabid, has been destroyed.

"Jakey," who was playing in the street in front of the Home with several other chilren, tried to pet the dog as it came running toward him. The animal snarled, and snapping at him, sank its teeth into the calf of his leg. A well-dressed woman, whose name could not be learned, ran from the dog just before it attacked the boy, and took refuge on a near-by piazza. "Jakey's" wound is slight, and Dr. Currie says there is little danger.

Two Hot Weather Drunks.

Hot weather was responsible for two prisoners at the city court today, for John Hensey, of West Second street, and Alexander Frazee, of DeKalb avenue, were picked up helpless Saturday night after unsuccessful efforts to cool off by a too free use of intoxicants. Hensey, who was arrested by Patrolman Myers, paid a fine of $5 at his hearing before City Judge Runyon this morning, and Frazee, who had never been arrested before, was given a chance on suspended sentence.

Gets Off Easy.

Charles Ross, a driver, of 426 East Third street, received a suspended sentence by Mayor Townsend this morning, when arraigned for spilling crushed stone on the borough streets. John Murphy, a Dunellen driver, was fined $2 for committing the same nuisance. This is the second offense of the latter. On a promise to pay the money tomorrow morning, Murphy was released.

The Sunday service at St. Stephen's church will be in charge of Rev. George A. Warner, rector of Holy Cross church, in the absence of Mr. Ashley.

AMERICANS WITHOUT COUNTRY.

I think it from the ranks of the fastidious and indifferent that the confirmed expatriates the generally recruited, writes Mary Crawford Frasier in Scribner's. The newly rich are less tempted to abandon America altogether. They rush to Europe the moment they can, are seen in all the smart hotels, makes the fortunes of dressmakers and jewelers, and then come home, because mere wealth is much more of a power on this side than on the other.

The real expatriate despises and avoids them; they jar on his sensibilities too rudely. He and his fellows have, as a rule, much to say of the refined interests, the uplifting surroundings which they can cultivate and enjoy abroad; yet intimacy with them leads to the conviction that those who are not professional workers take but slight notice of the treasures of art, or thought, or nature, by weih they are surrounded. They are really people who want to lick all the jam of life without ever getting to its crust.

The American expatriates who have distinguished themselves can be counted on the fingers of one hand. Most of the others form a non-producing class, deteriorating in quality as it increases in numbers. The expatriates draw their income from American sources, contribute nothing but abuse in return, and are as unprofitable to the country of their adoption as to that of their parentage. With the exception of the few American women who have married happily abroad and who have had the wisdom to heartily espouse the country as well as the husband, the expatriates are iliens wherever they may be. They hobnob lustily with other aliens and abuse the institutions of their chosen residence with a virulence only suppressed during their rare visit to America; they openly condemn the religion, the politics, the national institutions of the country where they have established themselves, contribute nothing towards its defenses or its development, and die, after forty or fifty years' exile, in profound ignorance of all that is best in their surroundings.

If they behave themselves, they are regarded with amused tolerance by the social world of their alienship, used unscrupulously when they are willing to pay for its fads, and forgotten the moment anything of real importance is in hand! Why not?

THE WORKING GIRL IN SUMMER

Girls do not of intention select bad amusement places to go to in the summer. The girl whose temperament and disposition crave unnatural forms of excitement is nearly beyond the bounds of salvation; but ninety out of one hundred girls want only what tthey are entitled to —innocent relaxation. The moving picture show is on the wane. The skating rink har lits day long ago. The dance is destined to be the next feature in popular amusement.

Let us provide it plentifully, safely and inexpensively. Then the winter problem will be taken in hand. The bill to regulate and license academies meets only a few of the most apparent evils. How to legislate out of existence the bad features of the summer amusement places seems almost unanswerable, since there are so many political and other interests that work underneath in these enterprises. Why not a public dance platform, to which admission is charged, and which is properly conducted? They have them in France and Germany—and t hey work and they pay. Why not a public carrousel? Why not other amusement features in some corners of the great new parks which we are acquiring? These things do no harm, and they offer innocent diversion of the kind which the multitude seeks.—From the July Survey.

EVEN EYELET BORDERS.

Few women can work smoothly the open eyelet borders so much seen in Madeira embroidery. There is sure to be roughnes and unevenness where one eyelet joins another, and the general effect is spoiled.

The reason of this is that the work is not properly done. An instructor who had a number of natives from the island of Madeira exhibiting their work in this country disclosed the secret of the smooth openings.

Each eyelet is outlined with cotton in the usual way; is then slit, if the shape be oval, and pierced if round, and the edges turned back with a needle. This is as any one would do, but in the working of the over-and-over stitch lies the difference.

Instead of finishing each eyelet at a time, as most of us would do, it is worked half way round on each side to where one opening joins the next one. Then that eyelet is done in the same way, and so on around the entire outer line of the border. The work is hten reversed and the upper half of the eyelets embroidered in the same way.

With this treatment there is no unevenniess, pulling or ugly ridges where the stitches meet, so hard to avoid by ordinary method of working.

The Trick.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The Plains team lost to High Bridge Saturday afternoon by the score of 5-4. The Plains team had the game apparently safe up to the sixth, the score being 3-1 in their favor. A close decision at third base after two were out netted two runs for High Bridge, as the next batter up made a hit and scored two runs, turning the score. Plains got one in their half and again took the lead, score 4-3. The home team put another over in their half of the seventh and again in the ninth. The Plains failed to score after the sixth, although they threatened several times to tie the game up. Following is the lineup and score by innings: High Bridge—Scully, lf; Grimes, ss; Morgan, 1b; Titus, c; Apgar, rf; Paschal, cf; Kenney, cf; Kenney, 2b; Armprister, 3b; Jacoby, p. There is a treat in store for those who attend the services at Netherwood Fresh Air Home next Sunday afternoon. Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, former, pastor of the Euclid Avenue Baptist church of Cleveland, Ohio, where John D. Rockefeller is a worshipper, will talk to the children. Doctor Eaton has consistently refused to leave his mountain home to preach during his summer vacation, but he could not resist the appeal made in behalf of the poor children from the slums of the big city. There will also be some noted singers to render solos.

The stereopticon which was to have arrived on Saturday was shipped to another Netherwood in New York State, so the children were disappointed. It is expected that the machine will be at the Home today and announcement will be made later as to the evenings on which exhibitions will be given. RANDOLPH SUFFERS BURNED ARM IN AUTO EXPLOSION.

Robert Randolph, an employee of Morris Brothers Auto Company, of East Fourth street, sustained a badly burned arm, in an explosion of gasoline, at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Machinists, among whom was Randolph, were taking the body off of a touring car when the explosion took place.

It is supposed that someone stepped on a match, and that the gasoline became ignited from this source. The department was summoned but had no work to do. The damage was slight.

Successful Automobile Tour.

The auto touring party under the management of F. S. Cutter, of Sandford avenue, returned home yesterday afternoon after a most delightful and successful tour of eight days, which included a stop at Poughkeepsie, Saratoga, Lake George (two days' visit) and returning by way of the Berkshire Hills. The party included Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Cutter, Miss S. Etta Raybert and Miss Lillian A. Force. Mr. Cutter is an ideal chauffeur, and his E-M-F car behaved admirably, and no accident occurred to mar the pleasure of the trip which was nearly 800 miles.

ELECTION OFFICERS IN QUEST OF DOUBLE PAY

Election officers in districts outside cities having more than 30,000 inhabitants are beginning to agitate the question of the pay they will receive for their services Tuesday, September 14, the day of the special election on the proposed constitutional amendments.

In the election districts mentioned that will be a registration day as well as an election day, and the officers claim they will be entitled to pay for both kinds of service. The pay for a registration is $3 per day for each officer, and for an election day it is $5 for each officer. It is likely that the question will be referred to the attorney-general, and it is considered probable that the ruling will be that each officer in the dsitricts in question will be entitled to the $8 for the special election day.

The matter does not apply to the larger cities of the State because their first registration day will be Tuesday, September 28.

Another matter which is occupying attention of the State Department officers is that while by the general election law, Tuesday, September 7, is made the first general registry day in the country and small town districts, under the special law for the election on the amendments, it is also made the day of registration all over the State for that voting. The election officers in districts outside of cities of more than 60,000 inhabitants are pointing out that there will be confusion in this situation.

The general election law requires them to meet September 7 and begin the house-to-house canvass for the registration, which canvass must be completed by the following Friday. They are questioning how they can begin a house-to-house canvass when compelled by the law for the amendment election to sit the same day as a board of registration. There is some talk that they may be allowed an additional day for the canvass, which will mean, of course, an additional day's pay.

The State printers are delivering to the Secretary of State the ballots for the election on the amendments. There are 1,350,000 of them and the lot will weigh twenty tons. Each ballot is about fourteen inches by twenty-one inches in size. The ballots will be sent next week to the various county clerks and by them will be distributed to the municipal clerks for placing in the voting places. The ballots must be distributed on the basis of 250 to each hundred voters, the Assembly election of 1908 being the guide.

SINGER ESCAPED ARMY SERVICE

Gianoli-Galletti, who does so many humorous roles at the Manhattan, is immune to seriousness, says a writer in Ainslee's Magazine. On the stage or off it, he is forever creating comedy.

In the beginning of his career this trait helped him out of a delaying predicament—the army.

Presenting himself for examination at the barracks of Milan, as ordered, he announced: "I am ill."

"What fails?" asked the officer in command.

"Heart failure," said Gianoli-Galletti, spurred to invention.

"Come back in a year," was the order.

It had worked! Perhaps, had the medical officer been less busy, it would have worked less well. But for one glorious year, at least, he was free.

Three nights later he made his debut in "Don Pasquale." By unfortunate coincidence both examining-officers, favoring the arts of peace as well as of war, not only attended the performance, but remembered it.

At the end of a busy twelve months, Gianoli-Galletti returned to the barracks on official invitation. "I am ill," he said. "Ive heart failure." And he repeated it glibly to the hospital colonel.

"Sit down," was his polite invitation. "Didn't I see you in 'Don Pasquale' three nights after your last amiable visit here?"

"I don't know," replied Gianoli-Galletti. He had begun to say: "I hope not."

"How could you act and sing with so much vim with your heart failure?"

"I'm better when I sing," was the answer, accidentally true.

"You're a good artist," came insinuatingly, "I sing a little. I'm something of an aamteur myself." Taking down a copy of the score from a shelf, he opened it at a duet. "Suppose we try this together?"

Gianoli-Galletti assented. Into the duet they plunged together, the colonel taking the soprano part. Forgetting all else in the moment, the opera buffo began to act, so did the colonel. The gaiety became uproarious. The book had been flung into a corner. In the moment of a climax a medical inspector entered.

"Will you kindly examine this gentleman's heart and see if it is palpitating," the colonel said to him suavely.

The colonel sat fanning himself after his recent exertions. "How is his heart?" he asked of the doctor.

"Better than mine," was the emphatic rejoiner.

Things suddenly grew clear. This, then, was the ruse of the military amateur, who had got him to gyrating with abandon in a scene that was simply irresistible. Gloom came down like a pall. Putting on his hat he went home. His heart failure had failed.

When he awakened next morning, with the arrival of his coffee, an official envelope lay on the tray beside it. He savagely opened it, read it through, turned it upside down, then sidewise, then sprang to the floor with a yell of delight. It was an official certificate that he had duly served out his time.

Gorham Freer and Miss Margaret Freer, who have been visiting E. C. Martin, on Rock road, Watchung, have gone to Pocantico Hills, N. Y.

Former Mayor W. L. Saunders and daughters, of Rockview avenue, who have been spending three weeks in Vermont, returned home on Saturday.

Why Don't You Economize on Coal?

The hungry furnace and the coal man are a hard combination to beat, but the

BOYNTON

is the friend of the man who takes care of the fire. The square fire-pot prevents the clogging of clinkers around the sides of the fire. That means all fire—more heat per unit of space. The square pot gives a greater surface for combustion and heat radiation and actually takes less coal for a good fire. And then there's the Boynton special flue for carrying away the dust. You don't sift ashes all over the house when you shake down the BOYNTON.

Talk it over with the BOYNTON dealer in your town.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for Steam or Hot Water. Also Ranges.

IN MEMORY OF HIM.

He came as gently and as wondrous kind
As comes the spring into this winter world,

So silently he dwelt I scarce did know
The simple beauty of his soul, nor guess—
Save as I saw my own heart closer grow
To his—the sun of his heart's tenderness.

But, knowing him, a grave and finer grace
I found in work, a dignity in life,
Unmarred by sorry accidents of place,
Nur sullied by the commonness of strife.

There was not much of needless speech in him,
Nor, giving, did he give too oft his heart;
A touch of hand, a smile, and eyes' swift dim

But Spring—a year of days all Spring—has gone.
Sudden and sad and strange, for that he died.
He who was here to laugh with me at dawn,
Tonight cries not such grief as I have cried.

He with the Spring he loved so well, and I
Tonight, with winter—God forgive my pain
That blind, with outstretched hands, must question Why,
And call him fro mhis Springtime back again.

Gentle he came, and brave, and wondrous kind—
So has he gone, grieving, I think, to know,
How great the sorrow he has left behind,
Sad for the pity that he cannot show.

Let it be winter then a while with me—
He and the Spring shall keep the days I bless,
Till happy on some morning I shall see
With him far fields new green in peacefulness.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR HURRIED HOUSEWIVES.

If fat catches fire throw salt on it at once to prevent a disagreeable smell.

Save sour milk in any quantity, large or small, for it is so useful for cakes. With sour milk use carbonate of soda instead of baking powder.

The dish cloth should have more attention than is usually bestowed on it. Boiling in soda water once or twice a week will keep it perfectly sweet and clean.

To remove iron rust from any white fabric lay the spit over a tea kettle of boiling water. Place a cut lemon over the spot, pressing firmly. Remove occasionally in order to allow the juice to exaporate and the stain will disappear before one's eyes, no matter how stubborn or deep set.

FIGHTING THE ENGLISH SPARROW.

Methods of exterminating the English sparrow which were used with success at Moorestown, are described in the August number of Popular Mechanics.

One of these ideas is the organization of sparrow clubs, and another is the enlisting of all the boys in the neighborhood in the ranks of the of the sparrow killers. To encourage adults to join in the war prizes were offered to those destroying the most birds, with an annual supper, at which prices were distributed and speeches made. Various styles of traps were used, also, all of which the article describes in detail.

Her Native City.

The misapplication of words in ordinary conversation is one of the postive and peculiar traits of a large proportion of the negro race, due in a measure to their desire to appear "educated" beyond their fellows, says the Bohemian.

An example of this characteristic occurred recently at Birmingham, Ala., when a group of elaborately attired negroes were leisurely sauntering along the handsome streets of that bustling Southern city, showing the sights to a young woman of the party who resided in another part of the South. Discussing the varied attractions of Brmingham, a dusky beau remarked that "Miss Pearl Lucile was very much delighted with our town on this her first visit."

Promptly, Pearl Lucile, in all the bravery of fashonable garb and fortified with the knowledge that she was esteemed a "star" guest, replied: "Of course, I am. I like this town so much I intende to make it my native city."

Providential.

By Frank H. Spearman

He bent forward, looking at the ground. He talked of their first meeting in Wisconsin; of the happiness of their little courtship; he brought up California again, and the northwest coast, where, he told her, a great railroad was to be built and he should find the chance he needed to make a record

"No! I Will Not Go with You!"

for himself—it had been promised him—a chance to be the man his abilities entitled him to be in railroading. "And I've got a customer for the ranch and the cows, Marion. I don't care for this business—damn the cows! let somebody else chase after 'em through the sleet. I've done well; I've made money—a lot of money—the last two years in my cattle deals, and I've got it put away, Marion; you need never lift your hand to work in our house again. We can live in California, and live well, under our own orange trees, whether I work or not. All I want to know is, will you go with me?"

"No! I will not go with you, Murray."

He moved in his seat and threw his head up appealingly. "Why not?"

"I will never be dishonest with you; I never have been and I never will be. I have nothing in my heart to give you, and I will not live upon your money. I am earning my own living. I am as content as I ever can be, and I shall stay where I am and do what I am doing till I die, probably. And this is why I came when you asked me to; to tell you the exact truth. I am not a girl any longer—I never can be again. I am a woman. What I was before I married you I never can be again, and you have no right to ask me to be a hypocrite and say I can love you—for that is what it all comes to—when I have no such thing in my heart or life for you. It is dead and gone, and I cannot help it."

"That sounds pretty hard, Marion."

"It is only the truth. It sounded fearfully hard to me when you told me that woman was your friend—that you knew her before you knew me and would know her after I was dead; that she was as good as I, and that if I didn't entertain her you would. But it was the truth! you told me the truth, and it was better that you told it—as it is better now that I tell it to you."

"I was drunk. I didn't tell you the truth. A man is a pretty tough animal sometimes, but you are a woman and a pure one, and I care more for you than for all the other women in the world, and it is not your nature to be unforgiving."

"It is to be honest."

He looked suddenly up at her and spoke sharply: "Marion, I know why you won't go."

"I have honestly told you."

"No; you have not honestly told me. The real reason is Gordon Smith."

"If he were I should not hesitate to tell you, Murray; but he is not," she said, coldly.

Sinclair spoke harshly: "Do you think you can fool me? Don't you suppose I know he spends his time loafing around your shop?"

Marion flushed indignantly. "It is not true!"

"Don't you suppose I know he writes letters back to Wisconsin to your folks?"

"What have I to do with that? Why shouldn't he write to my mother? Who has a better right?"

"Don't drive me too far. By God, if I go away alone I'll never leave you here to run off with Whispering Smith—remember that!" She sat in silence. His rage left her perfectly quiet, and her unmoved expression shamed and in part silenced him. "Don't drive me too far," he muttered, sullenly. "If you do you will be responsible, Marion."

She did not move her eyes from the blue hills on the horizon. "I expect you to kill me sometime; I feel sure you will. And that you may do." Then she bent her look on him. "You may do it now if you want to."

His face turned heavy with rage. "Marion," he cried, with an oath, "do you know how close you are to death at this moment?"

"You may do it now."

He clinched the bench-rail and rose slowly to his feet. Marion sat motionless in the hickory chair; the sun was shining in her face and her hands were folded in her lap. Dicksie rocked on the porch. In the shadow of the house the man was mending the saddle.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Tower W.

At the end of a long and neglected hall on the second floor of the old bank block in Hill street, Whispering Smith had a room in which he made headquarters at Medicine Bend; it was in effect Whispering Smith's home.

The door of the room in the course of many years had been mutilated with keyholes and re-enforced with locks until it appeared difficult to choose an opening that would really afford entrance; but two men besides Whispering Smith carried keys to the room—Kennedy and George McCloud. They had right of way into it at all hours, and knew how to get in.

McCloud had left the bridge camp on the river for Medicine Bend on the Saturday that Marion Sinclair—whose husband had finally told her he would give her one more chance to think it over—returned with Dicksie safely from their trip to the Frenchman ranch.

Whispering Smith, who had been with Bucks and Morris Blood, got back to town the same day. The president and general manager were at the Wickiup during the afternoon, and left for the east at nine o'clock in the evening, when their car was attached to an east-bound passenger train. McCloud took supper afterward with Whispering Smith at a Front street chophouse, and the two men separated at 11 o'clock. It was three hours later when McCloud tapped on the door of Smith's room, and in a moment opened it. "Awake, Gordon?"

"Sure; come in. What is it?"

"The second section of the passenger train—Number Three, with express cars—was stopped at Tower W to-night. Oliver Sollers was pulling; he is badly shot up, and one of the messengers was shot all to pieces. They cracked the through safe, emptied it, and made a clean get-away."

"Tower W—276 miles. Have you ordered up an engine?"

"Where's Kennedy?"

"Strike a light, Farrell. What about the horses?"

"They're being loaded."

"Is the line clear?"

"Rooney Lee is clearing it."

"Spike it, George, and leave every westbound train in siding, with the engine cut loose and plenty of steam, till we get by. It's now or never this time. Two hundred and seventy-six miles; they're giving us our money's worth. Who's going with us, Farrell?"

"Bob Scott, Reed Young, and Brill, if Reed can get him at Sleepy Cat. Dancing is loading the horses."

"I want Ed Banks to lead a posse straight from here for Williams Cache; Dancing can go with him. And telephone Gene and Bob Johnson to sit down in Canadian pass till they grow to the rocks, but not to let anybody through if they want to live after I see them. They've got all the instructions; all they need is the word. It's a long chance, but I think these are our friends. You can head Banks off by telephone somewhere if we change our minds when we get a trail. Start Brill Young and a good man from Sleepy Cat ahead of us, George, if you can, in a baggage car with any horses that they can get there. They can be at Tower W by daybreak and perhaps pick up a trail before we reach there, and we shall have fresh horses for them. I'm ready, I guess; let's go. Slam the door, George!" In the hall Whispering Smith threw a pocket-light on his watch. "I want you to put us there by seven o'clock."

"Charlie Sollers is going to pull you," answered McCloud. "Have you got everything? Then we're off." The three men tiptoed down the dark hall, down the stairs, and across the street on a noiseless run for the railroad yard.

The air was chill and the sky clear, with a moon more than half to the full. "Lord, what a night to ride!" exclaimed Whispering Smith, looking mournfully at the stars. "Well planned, well planned, I must admit."

The men hastened toward the yard, where lanterns were moving about the car of the train guards near the Blue Front stables. The loading board had been lowered, and the horses were being carefully led into the car. From a switch engine behind the car a shrill cloud of steam billowed into the air. Across the yard a great passenger engine, its huge white side-rod rising and falling slowly in the still light of the moon—one of the mountain racers, thick-necked like an athlete and deep-chested—was backing down for the run with the single car almost across the west end of the division. Trainmen were running to and from the Wickiup platform. By the time the horses were loaded the conductor had orders. Until the last minute, Whispering Smith was in consultation with McCloud, and giving Dancing precise instructions for the posse into the Cache country. They were still talking at the side door of the car, McCloud and Dancing on the ground and Whispering Smith squatting on his haunches inside the moving car, when the engine signaled and the special drew away from the chute, pounded up the long run of the ladder switch, and moved with gathering speed into the canyon. In the cab Charlie Sollers, crushing in his hand the tissue that had brought the news of his brother's death, sat at the throttle. He had no speed orders. They had told him he had a clear track.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Pursuit.

Brill Young picked up a trail Sunday morning at Tower W before the special from Medicine Bend reached there. The wrecked express car, which had been set out, had no story to tell. "The only story," said Whispering Smith, as the men climbed into their saddles, "is in the one from the hoofs, and the sooner we get after it the better."

The country around Tower W, which is itself an operating point on the western end of the division, a mere speck on the desert, lies high and rolling. To the south, 60 miles away, rise the Grosse Terre mountains, and to the north and west lie the solitudes of the Heart range, while in the northeast are seen the three white Saddle peaks of the Missions. The cool, bright sunshine of a far and lonely horizon greets the traveler here, and ten miles away from the railroad, in any direction, a man on horseback and unacquainted with the country would wish himself—mountain men will tell you—in hell, because it would be easier to ride out of.

To the railroad men the country offered no unusual difficulties. The Youngs were as much at home on a horse as on a hand car. Kennedy, though a large and powerful man, was inured to hard riding, and Bob Scott and Whispering Smith in the saddle were merely a part—though an important part—of their horses; without killing their mounts, they could get out of them every mile in their legs. The five men covered 20 miles on a trail that read like print. One after another of the railroad party commented on the carelessness with which it had been left. But 20 miles south of the railroad, in an open and comparatively easy country, it was swallowed completely up in the tracks of 100 horses. The railroad men circled far and wide, only to find the herd tracks everywhere ahead of them.

"This is a beautiful job," murmured Whispering Smith as the party rode together along the edge of a creek-bottom. "Now who is their friend down in this country? What man would get out a bunch of horses like this and work them this hard so early in the morning? Let's hunt that man up. I like to meet a man that is a friend in need."

Bob Scott spoke: "I saw a man with some horses in a canyon across the creek a few minutes ago, and I saw a ranchhouse behind those buttes when I rode around them."

"Stop! Here's a man riding right into our jaws," muttered Kennedy. "Divide up among the rocks." A horseman from the south came galloping up the creek, and Kennedy rode out with an ivory smile to meet him. The two men parleyed for a moment, disputed each other sharply, and rode together back to the railroad party.

"Haven't seen any men looking for horses this morning, have you?" asked Whispering Smith, eying the stranger, a squat, square-jawed fellow with a cataract eye.

"I'm looking for horses myself. I ain't seen anybody else. What are you looking for?"

"Is this your bunch of horses that got loose here?" asked Smith.

"No."

"I thought," said Kennedy, smiling, "you said a minute ago they were."

The stranger fixed his cataract on him like a flash-light. "I changed my mind."

Whispering Smith's brows rose protestingly, but he spoke with perfect amiability as he raised his finger to bring the good eye his way. "You ought to change your hat when you change your mind. I saw you driving a bunch of horses up that canyon a few minutes ago. Now, Rockstro, do you still drag your left leg?"

"Now Shall I Break Your Arm?"

The rancher looked steadily at his new inquisitor, but blinked like a gopher at the sudden onslaught. "Which of you fellows is Whispering Smith?" he demanded.

Different Now.

"Before we were married," sighs the trusting wife, "you vowed that my slightest wish should be law."

"Hah!" sniffed the brutal husband, without looking up from his magazine. "If you read the papers you'd know there isn't any respect for law nowadays."—Judge.

"What makes the ships out there wobble about so?" asked the summer visitor of the old salt.

"Well, you see, mum, they've bin soakin' at the barbor bar," was the old salt's reply.—Judge.

Come—from city, country or seashore and join in the throngs who will attend this notable sale of the product famed here and abroad, coming from the looms of the American Printing Co.

Keeping step with the rapid progress of humanity in noteworthy achievements, the American Printing Company has attained a degree of perfection in the printing of cotton cloths that has been the wonder of the fabric world, and which has created a new era for cotton goods.

Cotton fabrics have, thru the agency of the American Printing Company, been fitted from the level of mediocrity nearer to the high, artistic plane of silken fabrics.

Hold up these fabrics alongside of their silken and woolen sisters and you will be astonished at the similarity—the printers have worked miracles in duplicating the most elaborate patterns and the most exquisite colorings.

And while so much art and beauty have been wrought into these cotton cloths, the great resources of the American Printing Company has enabled them to accomplish the result without increasing the cost—perhaps the most notable of the maker's achievements.

So it is possible for a woman to buy an entire dress of these beautiful printed fabrics for the trifling sum of 60c.

The American Prints are now most extensively used, not only for the simpler house dresses, wrappers and children's clothes, but for pretty kimonos and handsome princess and jumper dresses.

Many women will hesitate to wear dark wool dresses all winter in their well heated homes, and to send their children into steam-heated school rooms so unsuitably clad. The dresses made of the American Printing Co.'s Wash Fabrics will not collect dirt and germs, nor overheat the wearer.

Selling Began This Morning, Will Continue Thruout the Week.

PLAINFIELD A. C. DEFEATED IN CLOSE GAME

The Plainfield A. C. was defeated by the Berkeley Heights A. C., at the latter place, Saturday afternoon, by the score of 9 to 8, in a well-played, fast contest. The Plainfield boys scored four runs in the ninth inning and came near winning out, but Wolfe, the opposing pitcher, proved a little too strong and nipped their aspirations in the bud.

Johnston, who pitched for Plainfield, had good control and plenty of speed. Plainfield outbatted Berkeley Heights, securing thirteen hits to ten for the latter, but the winning aggregation bunched their bingles. The score:

CONOVER WAS TOO STRONG FOR NEWTON A.C.

St. Mary's defeated the fast Newton A. C. of Rahway, Saturday afternoon on St. Mary's oval by the score of 9 to 3. "Hub" Conover and T. Mullen cared for the curve department of the St. Mary's nine, and did effective work. Ayers and Witheridge were in the box for the visitors. Ayers was hit freely at all times. Three strike outs were credited to him, while his opponent, Conover, pitched a steady game fanning out eleven batsmen. He got good support from his team mates.

The score stood 3 to3 up to the seventh inning, when St. Mary's came to the bat. Heavy hitting then won the game. The score and summary follow:

PARK GOLF CLUB PLAYERS DIVIDE HONORS

The only event at the Park Golf Club, Saturday, was the weekly competition for the President's and Golf Club cups. Despite the fact that so many members are away there was a good field out and some good scores were returned.

Samuel Townsend and R. B. Titsworth were tied for first honors with a net score of 77, while W. R. Faber was a close second with a score of 79. The leading scores:

Samuel Townsend, 97, 20-77; R. B. Titsworth, 101, 24-77; W. R. Faber, 93, 14-79; Charles B. Morse, 97, 14-83; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 93, 7-86; W. V. Byard, 107, 14-93.

PLAINFIELD LOSES IN CLOSE GAME AT RAHWAY

Notwithstanding Martin's slugging of the ball Saturday, Plainfield could not do better than lose to Rahway by the score of three to two. Clark, Rahway's slab artist had the Indian sign on Manager Dorflinger's hustlers, and there was nothing doing in the run line for Plainfield until the eighth session. Rahway was strengthened by Kuhn and Maniel, of the St. Benedict's team, of Newark, and added to Clark's fine work in the box the combination was too strong for Plainfield.

ORANGE Y.M.C.A. BEATS HOME TEAM EASILY

The Orange Y. M. C. A. team came to Plainfield Saturday and walloped the home team good and proper. The two teams started the ball rolling in the initial inning with a pair of tallies each and the home team got in the lead in the third session, but Terry weakened in the seventh and Orange put a crimp in any aspirations Plainfield may have had by scoring two runs and clinching the game in the eighth with two more. The features of the game were the batting of Stover for the locals and H. Williams, of Orange. The latter had three two-baggers to his credit out of five times up.

1,452 Cars Asked For in Five Days

The highest compliment ever paid a new car followed our announcement to the trade. Every automobile dealer in America received practically the same day an announcement of the Hudson "20," giving complete specifications and a list of officers, engineers and directors of the Hudson Motor Car Company.

This announcement was received by dealers the 19th of May. During five days following we received 104 telegrams and long distance calls all containing requests for the agency for the Hudson "Twenty," and giving the number of cars wanted.

The grand total of the cars asked for in these telegrams and long distance calls was 1,452.

Scores of certified checks were received from dealers in different parts of the country who wished, if possible, to bind territory at once.

In addition to telegrams, we received within ten days 1,873 letters from dealers, requesting territory in which to sell the Hudson "Twenty."

Of course we could not give an agency to every dealer who wanted it—in many instances several requests were from the same city. But the true significance of this wonderful response lies in the fact that 104 men who sent telegrams, and 1,873 who wrote letters are all actually in the automobile business. They are selling cars every day.

They judge a car from the over-critical standpoint of the man who has to sell them—the man who is going to invest his money and his business reputation.

They know where other cars are weak. They know why certain cars are hard to sell. Being experts they know from the specifications and appearance of the 1910 Hudson "Twenty" and from the reputation of the men behind it, that never before was a car offered which represented so much value for the money. They know that for the first time a car is being built to sell for less than $1,000 free from every objection heretofore raised against cars selling at or near this price. They know that never before has a car with so many high grade features been sold for $900.

Some Reasons why the Hudson "Twenty" has Created a Sensation

In the first place it is a good looking car. The officers of the Hudson "Twenty" have been the first to appreciate that it is as easy to make a good looking car and sell it for less than $1,000 as it is to make the other kind.

It is as roomy as any roadster made, regardless of price.

Sliding Gear Transmission

It has a sliding gear transmission, selective type, three speeds forward and reverse, such as you find on the Packard, Peerless, and other high grade cars.

Its motor is the Renault type, patterned after the famous French motors of that name.

Long Stroke Motor

With a bore of 3¾" and a stroke of 4½" it conforms to the most up-to-date foreign design, a long stroke motor.

The same company which makes the frames for the high priced Stearns cars makes the frames for the Hudson "Twenty."

Three-quarter Elliptic Springs

Semi-elliptic in front, and three-quarter elliptic rear springs are the easiest riding under all conditions, faster and due to their peculiar actions, are the least liable to fracture. This is the spring suspension found on the Hudson "Twenty."

The radiator is composed entirely of brass and copper of such dimensions that more cooling surface is provided than on most cars of half again as much horse power.

Carburetter Specially Designed

The carburetter has been especially designed for the motor, insuring absolute control at all speeds.

50 Miles an Hour

Any Hudson "Twenty" will do fifty miles an hour. It has all the power you could ever have use for. It not only looks like the most expensive cars, but it acts like them too. It is strong, speedy, roomy and stylish.

The Ideal Car

Nothing experimental about it. Nothing untried.

The "Twenty" has been recognized by the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers. It is the only four cylinder licensed car selling for less than $1,000.

Equipment:—Two large headlights, generator, two side oil lamps, tail lamps, full set tools and horn—$900.

ROSA ROSAE.

I knew two roses; red and white were they,
And both were born beside the imperial sea.
One bowed beneath the kisses of the spray,
The other bloomed in fair virginity—
A flower and a woman.
And one day
The woman plucked the flower, and thoughtfully
Pressed it within her bosom, where it lay,
A warm blush on a cold divinity.

And still my placid Rose is standing there,
—A Peri at the gate of Paradise—
Faint tropic odors in her banded hair
And ever a silent glory in her eyes;
And I, who love my roses, in despair
See how one dreams the while the other dies.
Yet could I welcome death to find it where
My red rose in that fragrant chalice lies.

INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

IN JOHN A. STAATS' AUTO.

Mule Team Injured By Car in East End Collision Last Night. The Wagon Displayed No Lights.

James Mair, of Mountain avenue, lies at Muhlenberg hospital with three broken ribs and severe bruises and contusions as a result of a collision between the automobile owned and driven by John H. Staats, of Mountain avenue, and a lumber wagon of the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Co. on East Front street, near Raymond avenue, at about 9 o'clock last night. One of the team of mules attached to the wagon is probably fatally injured by the collision and the other is badly cut and bruised.

Mr. Mair, whose condition is not considered serious, was thrown forty feet when the two vehicles came together, and was taken to Muhlenberg hospital in Mr. Staat's automobile. The examination by Dr. Pittis showed no internal injuries, and the man is resting comfortably today.

The accident happened as Mr. Staats and his neighbor were driving home in the machine. The wagon, which had been to Elizabeth, bore no lantern, and the gas lamps on the automobile were burning low, although the oil lamps were lighted. The lumber wagon was driven by Lewis Jackson, colored, and with him was John Dunning, colored. The machine was going eastward, on the right side of the roadway, according to Mr. Staats. The colored men who were driving in the opposite direction, assert that it was on the left side.

When the crash came and Mr. Mair was thrown out, both mules were thrown and severely injured. The pole of the lumber wagon was broken off. The front springs of the automobile were bent, the mudguards crumpled and the radiafor and fly-wheel damaged. There were no arrests.

G.A.R. VETERANS MEET AT SALT LAKE CITY

The first day of the 42d National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic yesterday found thirty thousand veterans and visitors quartered in Salt Lake City, with the prospect of having the number increased to fifty thousand by tomorrow.

Of the fourteen past commanders in chief now living five are in attendance. They are Generals S. Burdett, of Washington, D. C.; Eli Torrance, of Minneapolis; John R. King, of Baltimore; Corporal James Tanner, of Washington, D. C., and General Charles G. Burton, of Nevada, Mo.

A reception in honor of Commander in Chief Nevius and staff was given by the Woman's Relief Corps last night. Three thousand guests were present.

Camp fires were addressed last night by Commander in Chief Nevius, Senior Vice Commander in Chief J. Kent Hamilton, Past Commander in Chiefs Burton and Torrance, Mrs. Mary E. Gilman, national president of the Women's Relief Corps and Genevieve Longfield Lane, national president of the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The political side of the encampment was made prominent through the opening of headquarters of the rival claimants for honors. The fight between St. Louis and Atlantic City for the encampment of 1910 is to be warmly contested. The result probably rests with the delegates from New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

For commander in chief, Governor Van Sant, of Minnesota, and W. L. Ketcham, of Indiana, continue to be the active candidates.

Every State of the Confederacy has a delegation present. Between them Louisiana and Mississippi muster about fifteen veterans. Texas sends twenty, Georgia has furnished the largest delegation from the South. There are about fifty negro veterans at the encampment. Members of the Massachusetts delegation, 124 strong, boast that their special train outran a tornado near Kearny, Neb.

MRS. BURR A SUICIDE

MOURNED DEAD HUSBAND.

First Valedictorian of P. H. S. and Former City School Teacher Ends Her Life.

Mrs. Evelyn Hart Burr, whose death was reported in yesterday's Daily Press, committed suicide by drowning herself in the Delaware river early Sunday morning, it was learned today. Following the death of her husband in this city last October, she brooded to such an extent that her health was affected. Last February she was taken from this city to the Easton Sanitarium where she has since been.

She was missed a few minutes after she effected her escape from the institution, an alarm was sounded and a search for her was started. The woman was trailed to the river and in a short time her body was found in about four feet of water. Every effort was made to resuscitate the woman, but it was impossible to save her from death.

Mrs. Burr was suffering with a nervous trouble for a long time. She had repeatedly declared that she would kill herself, notwithstanding the fact that a close watch was kept over her. Recently a new nurse was secured from Norristown to look after her. The nurse had instructions that the patient should not be permitted to get out of her sight. At about 4:30 Sunday morning Mrs. Burr said she was going to the toilet room. The nurse was on duty, but did not see Mrs. Burr slip to the second-story balcony, where she managed to reach the fire escape and climb to the ground, scantily attired. Not more than two or three minutes later, so it is explained, the nurse discovered the escape and called Dr. Kinney, proprietor of the place, and other officials and nurses were notified. Searchers started in every direction. A short time later the body was found.

Mrs. Burr's daughter, Mrs. Charles Buckalew, of Rockview avenue, and Hudson Burr, of Newark, were immediately notified of her death. Instructions were given to have the body brought to this city. This was done yesterday.

THOMAS A. CALDER WEDS MISS LEILA A. HEISLER.

The rich bass voice of Thomas A. Calder, a former singer in Holy Cross choir, found a bride for him in the person of Miss Leila K. Heisler, of Bridgeport, Conn., organist of the First Methodist church of Torrington, Conn., in which Mr. Calder is now bass soloist.

Rehearsals of church music became more frequent after Miss Heisler became the organist two years ago and as a result the music of this church was brought up to a high standard. The constant association of the two musical young people brought on a friendship which soon ripened into love and last Tuesday the couple stole away to New Britain, where they were wedded by Rev. M. S. Anderson.

They were both in their places on last Sunday morning and after the service their marriage was announced to the other members of the choir and so it leaked out. Mr. Calder was well known in this city when he sang in Holy Cross choir and was employed by Swift & Co., at Harrison.

Horse Ran Away With Boy.

William Gray, twelve years old, lost control of one of Scott Terry's horses which he was driving to a blacksmith shop yesterday afternoon and was thrown heavily at Watchung avenue and East Front street, sustaining painful bruises. The boy was taken to the office of Dr. F. W. Cornwell near by, where an examination by the physician showed that his injuries were slight. The horse was captured by Chief Marshal Weiss, of North Plainfield, and reclaimed by Terry from the borough pound this morning.

Retains Residence in the Borough.

There are some people who are of the opinion that former Mayor Newton B. Smalley is a resident of North Plainfield township and not the borough and is therefore not eligible for office. Mr. Smalley stated yesterday that he still holds his residence in the borough, where he not only votes, but has his washing done, and is in every way a legal resident of the borough.

Mrs. Daniel Henery, of South street, Morristown, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Harrison, of Dunellen.

CASHED "QUEER" CHECKS

But Dr. Zelie's Colored Servant Denies That She Forged His Name.

THE EVIDENCE IS CONVINCING.

Colored Woman Who Drew on Clergyman's Account Arrested at City National Bank.

Celia Winston, colored, employed as a servant by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, is held by the police as a "suspicious character," until charges of forgery on three checks drawn against the clergyman's account at the City National Bank can be investigated. The woman had secured $20 on two checks of $10 each, drawn to "Cash" and dated July 3 and July 24. She was arrested in the City National Bank yesterday afternoon, when she presented a check for $15, dated "August 31." The arrest was made upon the complaint of Cashier William F. Arnold, who engaged the woman in conversation until the arrival of Driver O'Gorman from police headquarters.

Brough before City Judge Runyon at the session of court today, the colored woman, although confronted by a most lucid proof positive of her forgeries, substantiated by the clergyman, who is summering at Cherryfield, Maine, flatly denied that she had written the checks. She said that Mrs. Zelie had given them to her.

The police are puzzled about the case, and are at loss to understand the attitude of the woman. City Judge Runyon gave her every opportunity to make a confession, explaining the seriousness of the offence and the conclusive evidence against her. She was then led back to a cell, where she will be held a prisoner, "on suspicion" until a reply can be reecived to a letter sent by Judge Runyon to Mrs. Zelie this morning.

Upon her arrest, the servant was requested to write Mr. Zelie's name several times. The writing, which is in ink, has been compared with the signatures on the checks, and there is a marked similarity in the formation of the letters. The forged checks do not closely resemble Mr. Zelie's writing. Subjected to a rigid "third degree" examination by Chief Kiely last night, the woman broke down completely, but never wavered in her statements that she is innocent.

A check drawn by the clergyman for salary at the time he left for his summer vacation last month, bears the number "1984," and this is the number on one of the other checks, te writing of which is an evident imitation of the salary check, although rather poorly done. At the bank, the Winston woman's attention was called to the date "August 31" on the check presented. She said that it was Mrs. Zelie's mistake, and that the date should be July 31. She sent the check to Mrs. Zelie, she says, before her arrest.

The check for $15 which brought about her arrest, was the first the woman had attempted to cash at the bank. One of the ten-dollar checks on which she got money last month was cashed by the Public Service Corporation at its local office, and the other by Dr. Jefferson C. Anderson. When these checks came to the bank, the suspicions of Cashier Arnold were aroused and he wrote to Dr. Zelie about the matter. The clergyman's reply stated that he had for some time suspected the woman and urged that the matter be reported to the police and any further attempts closely watched. At police headquarters, the prisoner said that before going away Mrs. Zelie had given her a check for $100, but that she had sent it back to her.

Celia Winston is a bride of less than a week. A few days ago, she says, she married David Mason, who was in court today. She had applied to the clergyman to again take her position as servant in the fall.

PURSE-SNATCHER CAUGHT

MAY BE FAGAN'S PUPILS.

Patrolman McCarthy Wins Recognition as Sleuth by Quick Capture in the West End.

Two youthful highwaymen, the eldest of whom is thirteen years old, were arrested yesterday afternoon after a daring hold up in the borough, when one of them snatched the pocketbook of Mrs. Albert R. Vail, of Somerset place, at Duer street and Craig place. The boys, Morris Bussel, 13 and Abraham Powers, 11, are the sons of Max Bussel, a Manson place shoemaker, and were arrested at their home by Patrolman McCarthy two hours after the hold-up.

Remanded to the North Plainfield police after a night in city court cells, the boys were given a hearing before Justice of the Peace Thomas Snape at borough police headquarters at 11 o'clock today. Morris was held to await the action of the grand jury and went to the Somerset county jail at Somerville this afternoon. Bail will be fixed by Judge Schenck, of the Somerville court. The younger boy was freed on his parents' recognizance.

The city police believe that the brothers are pupils of a local "Fagan," and seek to identify them with other similar pocketbook snatchings within the past few weeks. The result of questioning on this point at city police headquarters has not been made public, but up to noon there had been no arrest.

The capture of the young highwayman by Patrolman Cornelius McCarthy is the result of excellent detective work by the policeman. The boys were his prisoners exactly two hours after the hold-up took place, although no substantial clues as to the identity of the young highwayman were furnished the patrolman.

According to Mrs. Vail's story to Patrolman Payne, to whom she immediately reported the hold-up, the boys came up behind her as she was going home at about 3 o'clock after a shopping trip. She carried her pocketbook, which contained $9.04 in bills and coppers, on her arm, with a package. The elder boy snatched the pocketbook as the pair darted past her, tearing the handle off of it in doing so. Mrs. Vail pursued the pair along Craig place to Grove street, and along that street to Front street, where they disappeared westward. The pocketbook was found at their home.

PRINCIPAL AND MRS. TRAVELL HAD FINE TRIP ABROAD.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira W. Travell, who have been abroad this summer, returned home yesterday morning on the Merion landing at Philadelphia. Their trip was made unexpectedly last June after an endeavor to postpone it for a year. They purchased passage tickets, and when Mr. Travell was notified that they could not be exchanged, the party had to make the trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Travell visited all of the principal points of interest in England, including Stratford-on-Avon. Mr. Travell, who has been appointed superintendent of the Morristown schools, will live in this city for the rest of this month. Meanwhile he will find a suitable house in Morristown, so as to be well situated when his new school duties begin.

MRS. FRANK MOHAN IS COMMITTED TO COUNTY JAIL.

Mrs. Mary Mohan, wife of Frank Mohan, of Dunellen, was arrested last night on a warrant issued by Recorder Campbell, on a charge of assault on the latter, and this morning she was committed to the county jail at New Brunswick to await the action of the Grand Jury.

The assault was committed by Mrs. Mohan at her home last night, when she attacked her husband with a chair, cutting his head open. He was required to seek the services of a physician. The assault was the result of an argument between Mohan and his wife in which, it is said, she was the aggressor. Marshal Sliney made the arrest.

SHADE TREE COMMISSION GETS AN APPROPRIATION

The Common Council did not hold an adjourned meeting last night, as originally intended. The meeting was to have been held for the purpose of appropriating about $200 to the Shade Tree Commission to take care of a number of injured trees about the city, but Mr. Buxton, chairman of the finance committee, found funds available for that purpose, making it unnecessary to hold a meeting.

An attempt was made to meet, however, but there was not a quorum present. The only members putting in appearance were President Tolles, Councilmen Gloak, Clay, Frank Randolph and Mygatt. Nothing but the roll was called, after which the members adjourned. It is not likely that another session will be held before the regular one in September, unless something important should happen requiring early action.

INTERESTING EXERCISES AT KING'S DAUGHTERS' CAMP

In spite of the excessive heat of last Sunday, the 4 o'clock service at the King's Daughters' Baby Camp was well attended, and the program made attractive for both children and visiting friends. George E. Hall was in charge of the meeting, while the address to the children was given by Miss Elmira C. Runyon, superintendent of the primary department of the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday school. Miss Runyon held the individual attention of the children as she talked to them about some of the things that are uppermost in a child's life and illustrated her remarks with stories such as boys and girls delight to hear.

A fine musical program under the leadership of Arthur S. Mosher, was rendered by the orchestra of the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday school, comprising Miss Mary E. Clark, pianist; Miss Arline Brown, Miss Marjorie Brown and Arthur S. Mosher, violins; Whitney Frazee and E. H. Guest, cornets. Mrs. Ada Cuming sang sweetly, 'By Thy Grace I Will.'

These meetings are becoming more and more popular with the people of Plainfield and vicinity and are productive of much good among the children of the camp.

At the Fresh Air Camp.

At the Netherwood Camp tonight the Young People's Society of the Westfield Presbyterian church will take charge of the service. A large delegation is expected, and a special program of music will be given. This is one of the first churches that gave Miss Curry assistance in her Fresh Air Work, and the children and mothers look forward to their coming.

JUDGE WILLIAM NEWCORN ELECTED BANK DIRECTOR

The directors of the Borough National Bank have elected Judge William Newcorn a member of the board. He will also serve as counsel for the borough institution. His election will doubtless prove a valuable acquisition to the enterprising young bank, the success of which has been gratifying to the officers and directors.

Judge Newcorn has been a resident of Plainfield for a great many years and his success in the practice of law since his admission to the Bar, has won for him a distinction. When the District court was established here, Mr. Newcorn was appointed Judge by Gov. Fort and those who have had business in the court, have expressed themselves favorably as to Judge Newcorn's fairness and impartiality.

HAYMAKERS' CONVENTION TO BE HELD IN PLAINFIELD

Past Chief Haymaker A. E. Willard, accompanied by F. A. Wagner and R. W. Osland, of the local association, have returned from Camden, where they attended the annual convention of the Haymakers' Association of New Jersey, which was held at the rooms of Ottawa Tribe. About four hundred delegates were present.

When a vote was taken on the place of the next meeting, it was found that eighty per cent. of the delegates voted for Plainfield and the convention will be held here. Mr. Willard presented the beauties of this city and completely won the delegates over. At the first meeting of the local association in September, committees will be appointed to complete arrangements and take care of the details for the coming convention.

At the close of the convention in Camden a banquet was served, after which an entertainment was furnished. The delegates then went to Atlantic City, remaining over Sunday. Wetampkah Hayloft, the name of the local body, will give the visiting haymakers a rousing reception when they come to Plainfield.

Edward Conger Still in Hospital.

Edward Conger, who is wanted by the Newark and Rahway authorities on charges of horse stealing and breaking and entering, is now detained at a hospital in Elizabeth. His address in this city is 230 West Second street and not 415 West Second street, as previously published. He formerly lived at the latter address, but removed sometime ago.

Next Excursion to the Shore.

The next excursion from Plainfield to Asbury Park will be that of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, on Thursday. This Council has always conducted a successful outing and the present warm wave assures a record-breaking crowd.

POWERS' STRANGE DEATH

Former Plainfield Druggist Dies in Bellevue Hospital.

HIS SKULL WAS FRACTURED.

Beaten, Doctors Charge, But Jail Attendants Say He Fell While Intoxicated.

John P. Powers, a former well known druggist of this city, died early this morning in the prison ward of Bellevue Hospital, New York city, where he had been taken after spending a day and a night in a cell in Jefferson Market prison on a charge of intoxication. There is a mystery surrounding the injuries from which Powers died. It is alleged by the police that Powers had a fit after being locked up and in the fall which followed his skull was fractured.

The surgeon who first examined Powers said that the man was suffering from alcoholism and a scalp wound, but a subsequent examination showed that the skull was fractured and it was the opinion of the examining physician that Powers had been beaten on the head. The information gathered from the police was so meagre that no positive statement can be arrived at as to how Powers was injured nor what sort of treatment he received after being locked up.

Powers was formerly employed by H. P. Reynolds in the drug store now conducted at the corner of North avenue and Park by T. S. Armstrong. He afterward went into business for himself at the corner of Somerset street and Craig place, North Plainfield, where he succeeded by E. F. Champlin in May, 1907. He had a host of friends in this city and was very popular among the Knights of Columbus, of which organization he was a member. At the time of his death Powers was in the employ of C. O. Bigelow, a druggist, at the corner of Eighth street and Sixth avenue, New York city. The funeral arrangements will be announced as soon as they are completed.

Police Lieutenant Barry, of the Williamsburg Police Station, who was a great friend of Powers, declares an investigation of the death will be made at once. It looks suspicious to him.

CONGRESSMAN FOWLER TO PUBLISH OPEN LETTER

Representative Charles N. Fowler, of the Fifth New Jersey district, formerly chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, is preparing an open letter to Speaker Cannon which will be forthcoming in a day or two. The letter is written in view of Speaker Cannon's action in deposing Mr. Fowler from the chairmanship of the Banking and Currency Committee. Mr. Fowler was one of the "insurgents" to whom Speaker Cannon meted out punishment.

Mr. Fowler refused yesterday to make public any of the contents of his open letter. He said, however, that the anti-Cannon issue was one of national importance and that when the facts were disclosed they would go directly to the root of the problem which brought to an end last Thursday one of the stormiest sessions of Congress in many years. Mr. Fowler said that he could not be swerved from his purpose of fighting against the injustice with which he and every other member of Congress is familiar. As far as Speaker Cannon's action in deposing him was concerned, he said, he regarded himself as stronger politically than ever before. Mr. Fowler said that the new tariff bill was suited to the interests of New Jersey.

"It is probably as good a revision as we could hope to get," he asserted, "as long as tariff revisions must be based upon facts. Nor need we expect a tariff revision based upon facts until we have a permanent tariff commission composed of men of the very highest character and recognized as a responsible body, precisely as we now regard the Supreme Court."

Funeral of Edward DeVine.

The funeral of Edward DeVine was held yesterday afternoon from the late home. The service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Anderson, pastor of the First Methodist church, and the service at the cemetery was in charge of Commander Joseph Berg, of Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R.

ATTEMPT TO DESTROY A HOME AT ENGLEWOOD.

What appears to have been a deliberate attempt to destroy the new $20,000 dwelling house being completed for Clinton H. Blake, Jr., of Englewood, was made last night. The new building was being erected on a part of what used to be the grounds of Upton Sinclair's Helicon Hall, which was destroyed by a fire a couple of years ago. Tonight's fire did about $800 damage.

Lighted candles were left in the rooms in the lower part of the house. These rooms were filled with shavings, wood scraps, etc., and had more than one got going the house would probably have been destroyed. As it was when one fire started the smoke was seen by a neighbor and an alarm given so quickly the fire was got under control.

FOOD LAW STRICT ABOUT COFFEE

Safest to Buy Package Coffee, Which Must Be Correctly Labeled and Prove as Represented.

Many States have tried to solve the coffee substitution problem, but until the national pure food law was passed nothing was done which could hope to accomplish the end sought for.

Under the new law the housewife is amply protected and enabled to get just the coffee she asks for, and be sure of getting a uniform grade every time she buys.

The pure food law cannot protect the user of bulk coffees, because coffee sold in this way cannot carry any definite claims of quality by the packer. No one is responsible for its quality, which leaves room for all kinds of deception both on yourself and your grocer.

But the woman who shows a preference for package coffee can feel sure of getting one correctly labeled so that she knows exactly what she is buying. She can also feel sure of getting a blend of coffee which is uniform and just as represented.

Take the well-known Hotel Astor Coffee, for example. The coffee packed and sold under this label is guaranteed to be the same in every respect as that served now and always at the Hotel Astor, New York.

In buying Hotel Astor Coffee the housewife knows exactly what she is getting, and can depend upon getting exactly the same blend in every tin she buys.

Hotel Astor Coffee gives a rich, smooth, fragrant deliciousness that is the perfection of coffee—and though far superior in flavor to other coffees, it will be found more economical, because less quantity need be used. It is never sold in bulk—always in one and three-pound air-tight tins, and only under the trade-mark label, Hotel Astor Coffee.

Sold by most of the best grocers and doubtless by yours. But if your dealer does not keep it, write the importers, J. Fischer & Co., 190 Franklin street, New York City, giving his name and address, and they will tell you where you can get it.

GOLF.

The Intercollegiate Golf Association has decided upon a different method of team scoring in the future. Instead of the old system, which provided for a point for the match, plus half a point for every hole up, each individual match will count one point. This is the plan generally accepted the world over now.

The constitution of the association has also been overhauled and now permits of a college being elective to membership upon a two-thirds vote. Colleges at present belonging to the association are Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Dartmouth, Pennsylvania, Columbia, Williams and Cornell. Because of energetic and careful management, the association has practically wiped out its long standing debt. A few years ago the amount was something like $700, while the deficit now is only $50.

The annual championship tournament will be held over the Apawamis Club links September 13 to 18. Monday and Tuesday will be devoted to team matches, the individual championship starting on Wednesday with a thirty-six hole qualifying round. The final round on Saturday will consist of thirty-six holes.

Yale expects to do things this year, and on paper the Blue appears to have a strong team. The probable personnel will be K. E. Monert, of Brae Burn; Harry G. Legg, Robert Hunter, B. P. Merriman, R. Y. Hayne and W. B. Langford.

The Pittsfield Golf Club is enjoying the busiest season in its history, and competitions follow each other in rapid succession. In the semi-final round for the Edminster trophy, C. C. Chesney beat Dr. Richardson 1 up, and E. A. Jones defeated H. C. Teck by 7 up and 6 to play. The consolation semi-final round resulted in a victory for W. Smith, Jr., over J. C. Davies, by 1 up, while A. H. Wood beat E. A. Tieley by 3 up and 2 to play.

The news that Miss Dorothy Campbell, the British woman golf champion, has decided to come to this country for the United States championship will add interest to the tournament. It will mean that the best American players will henceforth devote particular attention to getting in the best possible trim for the big match, for in Miss Campbell they will meet a dangerous opponent. Miss Campbell was in the semi-finals in the Great Britain championship in 1904, 1905 and 1906, and last year she was runner-up to Miss Titterton, the latter only winning on the nineteenth hole.

The Sports Committee of the Fairview Country Club, of which David Bandler is chairman, have arranged an interesting series of golf competitions for the remainder of the season. Handicaps will be held every Saturday this month. Beginning September 4 the Governor's Cup contest will begin, and the President's Cup competition will be held September 19, 26 and October 3, the first sixteen to qualify for match play rounds. A special match for professionals may be held in the Fall.

The Inwood Country Club, near Far Rockaway, is devoting considerable attention to golf this season, and some successful invitation tournaments have been held with the members of the Ocean Country Club.

A number of metropolitan golfers will be seen in two important out-of-town tournaments this month. The first will be the three-day event at the Ekwanok Country Club, Manchester, Vt., for the President's Cup, and the other will be the annual open tournament of the Stockbridge Golf Club, beginning August 31.

The Arcola Country Club, organized a short time ago to lay out a long eighteen-hole course over a tract of 200 acres, has chosen as its officers: President, ex-Gov. John W. Griggs, of New Jersey; vice-president, William D. Moffat; treasurer, C. William Woodrop; secretary, Robert Goodboy. The new club will draw its membership from Paterson, Hackensack, Ridgewood, Englewood, Passaic and other localities.

BERTSCHIE WILLS AWAY REVOLVERS AND BIBLE.

Adolph Bertschie, alias William Travis, the burglar, to die this week for the murder of Frank Jankowski at Lakewood, last December, bade farewell to his wife in the death-house at Trenton, yesterday.

He was sentenced originally to die last March, but execution was stayed by an appeal to the Court of Errors and Appeals, which refused to interfere.

It is the dying wish of Travis, as expressed in a farewell communication to Robert Price Bell, his lawyer, that the two revolvers which were found upon him when arrested be presented, one to Prosecutor Brown, of Ocean county, who brought about his conviction, and the other to the sheriff of Ocean county, who had him in custody at Tome River prior to his transfer to the death-house.

The Bible which Travis has spent many of his last hours of his life in reading he wishes to have returned to William E. Bunn, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., at Lakewood, who gave it to him and who has been acting as his spiritual adviser.

His final request is that out of the proceeds of a $1,000 paid-up insurance policy on his life, under which his wife is the beneficiary, the expenses of a simple funeral be paid, also a small sum advanced by his sister's husband toward the expenses of his appeal.

Concerning the insurance policy there is no certainty that it will ever be paid, although Travis has not been advised that it is likely to be contested. The agents of the company maintain that he misstated his occupation when applying for insurance and that had they known he was engaged in the hazardous career of burglary they would never have consented to accept him as a risk at any price.

Mrs. Simmons and Miss Powell, of Topeka, Kansas, are spending a few days with Mrs. DeNise and her son, Alfred S. DeNise, of the Manhattan Hotel.

"ROOKIES" ARE IN FOR IT

Company K.'s Team Fixing up a Schedule for Initiation of New Members.

EARLY START FOR CAMP TODAY

Farmingdale, N. J., Monday.

The entire regiment is now camping at Farmingdale after a 15-mile "hike" from Englishtown. The start from the latter place was made at 6:30 a. m. and at noon the shelter tents were pitched and the men were ready for the dinner which was much enjoyed.

For breakfast the "menu" was as follows: Beefsteak, fried potatoes, coffee, bread and butter. Dinner—Corned beef sandwiches, bread, butter and lemonade, instead of coffee. This was much appreciated, as the men were beginning to tire of coffee, being served three times a day. Supper—Roast beef, potatoes, boiled rice, coffee, bread and butter. For breakfast Tuesday, hash, potatoes, coffee, bread and butter.

The first call for reville on Tuesday will be at 2 a. m., breakfast at 2:30, and the start for Sea Girt will be made at 4 a. m. This is done so the men will be all through with the "hike" before the sun comes out with its full force. According to this schedule the regiment will arrive at Sea Girt about 9 a. m. The men may then rest until about 5 p. m. The only drill they will take part in will be dress parade.

On the whole the men are in much better condition today than they were yesterday. The roads were very much better and it was not nearly so hot. The interesting phases of the historic battle ground of Monmouth were noted. This was much enjoyed by the men, especially Molly Pitcher's well. All the interesting places were described by Rev. Tunis at the Sunday services at Englishtown and the majority of the men knew just where to look for them.

The initiatory team is beginning to get busy for their "work" on the Rookies. This "team" is made up of the world-renowned experts—Sergeants Hort, Apgar, Tranchard, Phillips and the new addition, the day sergeant, De Camp. The team is working on its schedule and it can be imagined by those who know, what is going to happen to the "Rookies."

Private Loughlin has been detailed to show the beauties of K street.

Corporal Dow has not combed his hair since leaving Plainfield on Saturday. He is a sight.

Corporal Rothberg has been telling the boys that he expects to meet some women friends on the arrival of the company at camp, but Sergeants Apgar and Tranchard, with First Sergeant Hort, have hatched up a scheme to place him on guard duty. Too bad for Sam.

During the marching Lieutenant Peterson is forever telling of his experiences at Porto Rico, and he begins by saying, "when I was in Porto Rico," but that is as far as he gets as Captain Kitchell refuses to listen to him.

On the whole Captain Kitchell is well pleased with the showing his men have made. They always do their best.

The boys of the company are looking forward to Thursday when a large delegation from Plainfield is expected. —PRIVATE.

REPORT LOST CHILDREN TO IRVINGTON POLICE.

Word has been received by the Irvington police from the old Meeker Inn, of Union, that a child of the name of Mary Williams, five years old, had mysteriously disappeared. Chief of Police Green was told that it was thought the child had been stolen and that the kidnapper had set out in the direction of Irvington.

Green instructed his men to keep a lookout for a suspicious looking man with a child. He had no sooner done this than the telephone bell rang and he was told the child was found. It was learned that the child was not stolen, but had wandered away from its home.

Green received another message yesterday about a lost child. This time it came from Mr. and Mrs. John Winfield, of Forty-first street, Irvington, who informed him that their three-year-old daughter Mamie had suddenly disappeared. Word was also received that this child had been found at Olympic Park. The Winfields live near the park.

South Amboy School Questions.

The Board of Education of South Amboy, has decided to open the schools on September 7. The question as to whether the school should continue taking the county test or not was discussed. For the coming term the noon recess will be from 12 to 1:30 o'clock. The schools will be in session on election day, and the teachers will be allowed the day after Thanksgiving in place of that holiday. The teachers will be given two weeks' holiday at Christmas without pay.

WAR SCARE OF 1895.

A letter from Ambassador Bayard, which is quoted by George F. Parker in his article on Cleveland in the July McClure's, shows the state of feeling in England in 1895, after the President had sent his famous Venezuela message to Congress. Mr. Parker was at that time consul at Birmingham. Ambassador Bayard's letter follows:

Embassy of the United States,
London, December 31, 1905.

Dear Mr. Parker:—I was out of town when your letter of November 27 arrived. Very soon thereafter a condition of affairs came on which rendered it difficult for me to give you the direct and positive reply to which you were entitled. April 20 was a long way off, and what might occur from day to day it was impossible to foretell. And as matters stand today I feel that all plans of enjoyment and pleasant hospitality may be upset and replaced by very different occupations; therefore I accept your suggestion that no harm can come from postponing until the February meeting of your club the formation of plans for my visit to you in April next.

By the time February arises the sky may have cleared and present clouds dispersed and with more cheerful hearts we may meet and greet our British kindred.

I wil be most glad to come to Birmingham to view its beautiful and varied industries and look in the faces of its citzens, and this I fully expect to do; at the same time, you can comprehend how much there is to make me feel anxious, for there is too much at stake even in the remote risk of a collision between the nations who are the main guardians under God of the world's civilization.

Sincerely yours,
T. F. BAYARD.

Ethics of the Case.

"Look here, doctor," says the expatient, coming into the physician's office with a determined expression. "I've just had the X-rays turned on me, and I find that when you operated on me you left a pair of surgical scissors in me."

"Bless me!" says the specialist. "I had missed them. Thank you so much, my good may. I will add their cost to your bill."—Life.

ALUM-PLUMPED PICKLE BANNED

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief chemist of the Agricultural Department and guardian of the pure food laws, has started a crusade against embalmed cucumbers and gherkins inoculated with alum. He asserts that withered and half-spoiled cucumbers are given generous hypodermics of alum, and under its magic influence the once soft, soggy and generally disputable pickle of commerce is plumped out, rejuvenated, and becomes so pleasing to the eye that few persons can resist its alluring attractiveness.

Although the Board of Food and Drug Inspection has had the question of the use of alum as a preservative under consideration for several weeks, no decision has yet been given.

Meanwhile Dr. Wiley is working assiduously against the embalmed pickle and the alleged unscrupulous undertakers. Alum, he says, is one of the lesser known preservatives, its use being more circumscribed than that of benzoate of soda, borax, formaldehyde and other chemicals on which manufacturers wax fat, while the consumers grow lean.

"What benzoate of soda is to the decaying tomato and borax to embalmed beef, alum is to the limp and lifeless cucumber," says Dr. Wiley. "The public does not appreciate the woes and misery concealed beneath the verdant jacket of the innocent looking pickle."

Dr. Wiley has many supporters in his fight against the rejuvenated gherkin, one gaunt, emaciated and weary of "life's fitful fever." Among them is Dr. H. A. Hare, of Philadelphia, an author and lecturer on therapeutics. He says that alum has its uses, but among them is not the bolstering of forlorn cucumbers that they may become succulent pickles.

"I have had evidence presented to me," said Dr. Hare, at a hearing before the board, "to show that pickles frequently contain quantities of alum sufficient to carry into the body in one cucumber as much as from one to five grains of alum, and I would consider every such dose to be deleterious, even if not repeated."

When asked by Dr. Wiley what he considered the minimum dose that could be administered without injury, Dr. Hare said that single doses of less than a grain might not be, but added that no one could feed him such doses. As he was not appearing as an expert against alum, Dr. Hare's testimony made a decided impression.

WRIGHT MAY SUCCEED KOESTER AS PROSECUTOR.

Wendell J. Wright, judge of the First District court, will be the successor to the late Prosecutor of Bergen county, Ernest Koester, if Senator Edmund W. Wakelee is guided by the wishes of the Republican leaders of his county and presents his name to Governor Fort, who makes the appointment.

A number of other Republican lawyers have entered the contest for the place, among them John S. Mackay, the assistant prosecutor; Clarence Mabie and John Bell, but Mr. Wright appears to have the support of the leaders and there is a strong probability that his name will be submitted to the Governor. One of the reasons for the support given to Mr. Wright by the leaders is the prominent part he has taken in the contests with the Democrats over the Board of Freeholders, acting in a legal capacity for his party successfully.

It is expected that Governor Fort will announce the appointment some time this week. Should Mr. Wright be made Prosecutor, Mr. Mackay, it is said, will be retained as his assistant.

LEHIGH CONTRACTING CO. GET CONTRACT FOR NEW BRIDGE.

The contract for the building of the reinforced concrete and steel arched bridge over the Passaic River at the end of Morris turnpike, in Chatham, was awarded yesterday by the joint bridge committee of Union and Morris Boards of Freeholders to the Lehigh Contracting Company of Pennsylvania on a bid of $12,500. There were eight other bids received, all high.

The committee met in the office of John M. Cady. Frank J. Hubbard, engineer of Union county, and William H. King, engineer of Morris county, were present at the meeting. The reinforced bridge is to take the place of an iron beam bridge.

Newspaper Man Appointed.

Postmaster General Hitchcock yesterday appointed Jesse L. Suter, Washington correspondent of "The Nashville Tennessean," as a member of his confidential staff in the Post-office Department. Mr. Suter is a well known Washington newspaper man and was connected with the publicity bureau of the Republican National Committee during the last national campaign. He is a resident of Greensburg, Penn.

Accepts Call to Roselle Church.

At a special meeting of the Roselle First Baptist church Sunday a letter was read from Rev. Charles E. Goodall, of Huntington, Pa., accepting the call as pastor. Mr. Goodall resigned his charge at Huntington the last Sunday in July. He will take up his new duties in the Roselle church October 2.

SECOND REGIMENT IN SHAM BATTLE

Information received at Sea Girt state that the Second regiment, which is "hiking" there from Trenton, had made the scheduled distances outlined in their itinerary. It is a trying march for the men, as the heat has been intense, and the citizen soldiers suffered greatly. Officers had much of the baggage which the men were supposed to carry placed in vans.

The officers yesterday played a war game in the neighborhood of the historic Monmouth battlefield, and the two detachments, one coming in from New Brunswick and the other from Trenton, endeavored to capture the other.

Last night the entire regiment, seven hundred strong, bivouaced near Farmingdale, nine miles from Sea Girt, under the command of Col. Nelson Y. Dungan. The officers are more than satisfied with the way in which the men have played the war game during the last three days.

Colonel Dungan expects to march his men into camp today, when they will be informally reviewed by Governor Fort and staff as they march by the "little white house" into the streets of the encampment. As this will be the last regiment in camp this season large crowds are expected daily to witness the dress parades, which are at half-past five o'clock in the afternoon.

Governor Fort will receive the public next Thursday, and in addition he has invited all the employes of the State House at Trenton to be his guests upon that day. An excursion will also be run from Trenton and New Brunswick that day. As it will be the last opportunity to see Governor Fort make an official review of a regiment this season, it is expected that a large throng will be there.

IMPORT RECORDS WERE BROKEN DURING 1909.

All records for importations of manufacturers' material into the United States were broken during the fiscal year 1909, according to the bureau of statistics, in a statement made public yesterday.

Raw silk, fibres, hides and skins, india rubber, tobacco, copper and certain articles included under the general group "chemicals, drugs and dyes," show imports in 1909 exceeding those of any earlier year.

Raw wool, pig tin, lead, cotton and lumber show in other years quantities slightly in excess of the figures of 1909.

While this is the highest record as to quantity of manufacturers' material imported, it does not represent the highest values. The figures of the bureau show that crude materials imported for use in manufacturing in the fiscal year 1909 were worth $24,000,000 below the value of this group of imports in 1907, and manufactures for further use in manufacturing were $52,000,000 below 1907.

The fall in value is ascribed to the lower prices prevailing in 1909.

HILL LINES PLACE BIG ORDER FOR LOCOMOTIVES.

An order for fifty-seven locomotives, involving $1,000,000, has been received by the Baldwin Locomotive Works from the James J. Hill railroads in the West.

While the capacity of the plant is about that many locomotives a week, the order will give employment to many machinists, laborers and others who were laid off during the business depression.

CECIL RHOADES.

The arch prospector of all times was Cecil Rhodes. For him it was not merely going out and putting down holes in likely places. At seventeen he had been touched with tuberculosis and ordered south. Arriving at his brother Herbert's cotton plantation in Africa in the midst of the second diamond excitement, he, with Herbert, was drawn into the "new rush." They took a claim at Colesburg—at thirty shillings a month rental. In a few weeks each leased a full claim, all the law allowed. Cecil Rhoades set himself to get the law to allow one man to own two claims, then ten, and then as many as he could lay hold of. So well did Rhodes keep pace with changing regulations that he returned to England at nineteen a millionaire.—Franklin Clarkin, in August Everybody's.

Receives Fatal Injuries.

Eager to gain time on his return trip to New York after a week's outing at Lake Hopatcong, Neal Mahoney, an employe of Stern Brothers, New York, boarded a freight train of the Lackawanna Railroad in the yards yesterday, was thrown out and under the wheels, and received injuries which are likely to end in his death.

As to Wrecks.

"You show folks must do a lot of travelin'," said the green brakeman on the Kalakosh Junction line, "an' naturally I s'pose you've been in all kinds of railroad wrecks?"

"I have, my friend," said Actyn Barnes, the tragedian, gazing around the dilapidated day coach; "but the one I am now in is positively the worst ever!"

Horse Kicks Major Martin.

Major Martin, of Elizabeth, was thrown from his horse Saturday afternoon while the companies from Somerville, Plainfield and Elizabeth were assembling for the march to Sea Girt. While Martin and several of the other mounted officers were discussing the long hike a runabout drove up behind the major's horse, frightening it. The animal began to kick, and continued until the major could not retain his hold and rolled off. The horse's hoofs struck him in the right side as he fell. He recovered sufficiently to get up, and later mounted another horse and proceeded with the battalion to Old Bridge.

EXCISE QUESTION WILL BE A LEADING ISSUE

That the exercise question will again figure prominently in the election for members of the Legislature is the opinion of many well informed persons throughout the State, and, indeed, signs are not lacking that this result will be brought about, for the early campaign started by the Anti-Saloon League has een speedily followed by much activity on the part of the brewers.

When the Legislature passed the Bishops' law, about three years ago, it was thought that the excise question was settled for many years to come; but along came the local optionists. The latter, encouraged by the stringent clauses of the new liquor law, at once began agitating for the passage of their own pet measure, and they have kept at it ever since. That the saloon question will enter into the coming campaign has been a source of regret to not a few public spirited citizens, especially when the chief issue will be the regulation of utility corporations, and a movement has already been started for the enactment of some law by the next Legislature which will banish the excise question as a State issue and confine it exclusively to municipalities.

Those who favor this kind of legislation call it home rule, and their plan is to have the Legislature pass a general liquor law and leave it to the municipalities to regulate the sale. In support of this kind of legislation it is pointed out that the Fisk excise commission in its report showed that prohibition did not prohibit in New Jersey, and that in some places in the State the Bishops' law was not enforced, especially in regard to Sunday selling. This condition was said to be due to the condition of public sentiment. Under a home rule liquor law, according to its advocates, the people of each municipality would make their own regulations for the control of the liquor traffic, and the officials of the municipality would be the ones responsible for their enforcement, not the Governor or the State Legislature.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

The theatre patrons of this city will be pleased to know that a great treat is in store for them Saturday at the Plainfield Theatre when Chas. H. Wurz will present "At Cripple Creek," Hal Reid's best play. This piece has been playing to "standing room only" houses, and that is assurance enough of its marvelous success. It is frankly and freely melodramatic, but with the strong realistic plot, and the clever artists who bring out all there is in it, the wonderful scenic and electrical effects—it is very far above the average of such performances.

Scene From "Cripple Creek," at New Plainfield Theatre, Saturday Matinee and Night.

JERSEY CITY CHURCH TO BE MADE A PICTURE THEATRE.

After serving fifteen years as a house of worship the John Knox Presbyterian church, on Manning avenue, Jersey City, is to become a moving picture theatre. The church was built for the Rev. Thomas Houston, the blind preacher and evangelist, by the late George R. McKenzie, a rigid Scotch churchman, who disapproved of musical instruments in the church. Mr. Houston, finding the restrictions too heavy a burden, resigned. Several other preachers also failed to build up the church, and recently it was occupied by a negro congregation.

In a legal contest, several years ago, instituted by the McKenzie heirs, the title of the property in the Jersey City Presbytery was affirmed by the courts.

Heard Something.

One summer evening a miller was leaning over his garden gate, facing the road, enjoying his pipe, when a conceited young farmer happened to be passing. The miller, in a friendly tone, said:

"Good evening, George."

"I didn't speak," said George, gruffly.

"Oh," said the miller, "I thought you did; but it must have been your ears flapping."

An Unrelenting Critic.

"All I did," said the big grain speculator, "was to take advantage of an opportunity."

"Well," answered Farmer Corntossel, "that's all Capt. Kidd used to do."—Washington Star.

Considerable disappointment is felt in Gloucester City by many property owners at the selection of a site for the immigrant station elsewhere.

The recent order of Prosecutor Scovel to the Gloucester City officials had a good effect Sunday, as there was no evidence of Sunday liquor selling and the police reported but little disorder.

Members of the Ocean City Yacht Club attended services in the First Presbyterian church Sunday evening, the sermon being delivered by the pastor, Rev. H. T. Casselberry, who is chaplain of the club.

Falling between a water tank and the tender of an engine on a Long Branch train early Sunday morning, Edward Carty sustained a fracture of the right ankle and was removed to his home at No. 1212 South Third street, Camden.

Yesterday was the last and big Sunday of the Pitman campmeeting, and owing to the favorable weather a record-breaking crowd attended. As a trolley car loaded with passengers from Washington Park was crossing the Reading Railway at Broadway and King street, Gloucester, late Sunday night, the pole slipped from the wire and stalled it in the path of an approaching passenger train. No one was hurt, but there was plenty of excitement for a short time.

Henry Sweeten, aged twenty-two years, who disappeared from 513 Hunter street, Gloucester, on Sunday last, returned Saturday night as mysteriously as he had vanished. Whispering Smith

"One man with the dough is Whispering Smith every time," was the answer from Smith himself. "You have about seven years to serve, Rockstro, haven't you? Seven, I think. Now what have I ever done to you that you should turn a trick like this on me? I knew you were here, and you knew I knew you were here, and I call this a pretty country; a little smooth right around here, like the people, but pretty. Have I ever bothered you? Now tell me one thing—what did you get for covering this trail? I stand to give you two dollars for every one you got last night for the job, if you'll put us right on the game. Which way did they go?"

"What are you talking about?"

"Get off your horse a minute," suggested Smith, dismounting, "and step over here toward the creek." The man, afraid to refuse and unwilling to go, walked haltingly after Smith.

"What is it, Rockstro?" asked his tormentor. "Don't you like this country? What do you want to go back to the penitentiary for? Aren't you happy here? Now tell me one thing—will you give up the trail?"

"I don't know the trail?"

"I believe you; we shouldn't follow it anyway. Were you paid last night or this morning?"

"I ain't seen a man hereabouts for a week."

"Then you can't tell me whether there were five men or six?"

"You've got one eye as good as mine, and one a whole lot better."

"So it was fixed up for cash a week ago?"

"Everything is cash in this country."

"Well, Rockstro, I'm sorry, but we'll have to take you back with us."

The rancher whipped out a revolver. Whispering Smith caught his wrist. The struggle lasted only an instant. Rockstro writhed, and the pistol fell to the ground.

"Now, shall I break your arm?" asked Smith, as the man cursed and resisted. "Or will you behave? We are going right back and you'll have to come with us. We'll send some one down to round up your horses and sell them, and you can serve out your time—with allowances, of course, for good conduct, which will cut it down. If I had ever done you a mean turn I would not say a word. If you could name a friend of yours I had ever done a mean turn to I would not say a word. Can you name one? I guess not. I have left you as free as the wind here, making only the rule I make for everybody—to let the railroad alone. This is my thanks. Now, I'll ask you just one question. I haven't killed you, as I had a perfect right to when you pulled; I haven't broken your arm, as I would have done if there had been a doctor within 25 miles; and I haven't started you for the pen—not yet. Now I ask you one fair question only: Did you need the money?"

"Yes, I did need it."

Whispering Smith dropped the man's wrist. "Then I don't say a word. If you needed the money, I'm not going to send you back—not for mines."

"How can a man make a living in this country," asked the rancher, with a bitter oath, "unless he picks up everything that's going?"

"Pick up your gun, man! I'm not saying anything, am I?"

"But I'm damned if I can give a double-cross to any man," added Rockstro, stooping for his revolver.

"I should think less of you, Rockstro, if you did. You don't need money anyway now, but sometime you may need a friend. I'm going to leave you here. You'll hear no more of this, and I'm going to ask you a question: Why did you go against this when you knew you'd have to square yourself with me?"

"They told me you'd be taken care of before it was pulled off."

"They lied to you, didn't they? No matter, you've got their stuff. Now I am going to ask you one question that I don't know the answer to; it's a fair question, too. Was Du Sang in the penitentiary with you at Fort City? Answer fair."

"Yes."

"Thank you. Behave yourself and keep your mouth shut. I say nothing this time. Hereafter leave railroad matters alone, and if the women should fall sick or you have to have a little money, come and see me." Smith led the way back to the horses.

"Look here!" muttered Rockstro, following, with his good eye glued on his companion. "I pulled on you too quick, I guess—quicker'n I'd ought to."

"Don't mention it. You didn't pull quick enough; it is humiliating to have a man that's as slow as you me pull on me. People that pull on me usually pull and shoot at the same time. Two distinct movements, Rockstro, should be avoided; they are fatal to success. Come down to the Bend sometime, and I'll get you a decent gun and give you a few lessons."

Whispering Smith drew his handkerchief as the one-eyed man rode away and he rejoined his companions. He was resigned, after a sickly fashion. "I like to play blind-man's-buff," he said, wiping his forehead, "but not so far from good water. They have pulled us half-way to the Grosse Terre mountains on a beautiful trail, too beautiful to be true, Farrell—too beautiful to be true. They have been having fun with us, and they've doubled back through the Topah Topahs toward the Mission mountains and Williams Cache—that is my judgment. And aren't we five able-bodied jays, gentlemen? Five strong-arm suckers? It is an inelegant word; it is an inelegant feeling. No matter, we know a few things. There are five good men and a led horse; we can get out of here by Goose river, find out when we cross the railroad how much they got, and pick them up somewhere around the Saddle peaks if they've gone north. That's only a guess, and every man's guess is good now. What do you think, all of you?"

"If it's the crowd we think it is, would they go straight home? That doesn't look reasonable, does it?" asked Brill Young.

"If they could put one day between them and pursuit, wouldn't they be safer at home than anywhere else? And haven't they laid out one day's work for us, good and plenty? Farrell, remember one thing: There is sometimes a disadvantage in knowing too much about the men you are after. We'll try Goose river."

It was noon when they struck the railroad. They halted long enough to stop a freight train, send some telegrams, and ask for news. They got orders from Rooney Lee, had an empty box car set behind the engine for a special, and, loading their horses at the chute, made a helter-skelter run for Sleepy Cat. At three o'clock they struck north for the Mission mountains.

CHAPTER XXV.

The Sunday Murder.

Banks' posse, leaving Medicine Bend before daybreak, headed northwest. Their instructions were explicit: To scatter after crossing the Frenchman, watch the trails from the Goose river country and through the Mission mountains, and intercept everybody riding north until the posse from Sleepy Cat or Whispering Smith should communicate with them from the southwest. Nine men rode in the party that crossed the Crawling Stone Sunday morning at sunrise with Ed Banks.

After leaving the river the three white-capped Saddles of the Mission range afforded a landmark for more than 100 miles, and toward these the party pressed steadily all day. The southern pass of the Missions opens on the north slope of the range into a pretty valley known as Mission Springs valley, and the springs are the head-waters of Deep creek. The posse did not quite obey the instructions, and following a natural instinct of safety five of them, after Banks and his three deputies had scattered, bunched again, and at dark crossed Deep creek at some distance below the springs. It was afterward known that these five men had been seen entering the valley from the east at sundown just as four of the men they wanted rode down South Mission pass toward the springs. That they knew they would soon be cut off, or must cut their way through the line which Ed Banks, ahead of them, was posting at every gateway to Williams Cache, was probably clear to them. Four men rode that evening from Tower W through the south pass; the fifth man had already left the party. The four men were headed for Williams Cache and had reason to believe, until they sighted Banks' men, that their path was open.

They halted to take counsel on the suspicious-looking posse far below them, and while their cruelly exhausted horses rested, Du Sang, always in Sinclair's absence the brains of the gang, planned the escape over Deep creek at Baggs' crossing. At dusk they divided; two men lurking in the brush along the creek rode as close as they could, unobserved, toward the crossing, while Du Sang and the cowboy Karg, known as Flat Nose, rode down to Baggs' ranch at the foot of the pass.

At that point Dan Baggs, an old locomotive engineer, had taken a homestead, got together a little bunch of cattle, and was living alone with his son, a boy of ten years. It was a hard country and too close to Williams Cache for comfort, but Dan got on with everybody because the toughest man in the Cache country could get a meal, a feed for his horse, and a place to sleep at Baggs', without charge, when he needed it.

Ed Banks, by hard riding, got to the crossing at five o'clock, and told Baggs of the hold-up and the shooting of Oliver Sollers. The news stirred the old engineman, and his excitement threw him off his guard. Banks rode straight on for the middle pass, leaving word that two of his men would be along within half an hour to watch the pass and the ranch crossing, and asked Baggs to put up some kind of a fight for the crossing until more of the posse came up—at the least, to make sure that nobody got any fresh horses.

The boy was cooking supper in the kitchen, and Baggs had done his milking and gone back to the corral, when two men rode around the corner of the barn and asked if they could get something to eat. Poor Baggs sold his life in six words: "Why, yes; be you Banks' men?"

Du Sang answered: "No; we're from Sheriff Coon's office at Oroville, looking up a bunch of Duck Bar steers that's been run somewhere up Deep creek. Can we stay here all night?"

They dismounted and disarmed Baggs' suspicions, though the condition of their horses might have warned him had he had his senses. The unfortunate man had probably fixed it in his mind that a ride from Tower W to Deep creek in 16 hours was a physical impossibility.

"Stay here? Sure! I want you to stay," said Baggs, bluffly. "Looks to me like I seen you down at Crawling Stone, ain't I?" he asked of Karg.

Karg was lighting a cigarette. "I used to mark it the Dunning ranch," he answered, throwing away his match.

"That's hit. Good! The boy's cooking supper. Step up to the kitchen and tell him to cut ham for four more."

"Four?"

"Two of Ed Banks' men will be here by six o'clock. Heard about the hold-up? They stopped Number Three at Tower W last night and shot Ollie Sollers, as white a boy as ever pulled a throttle. Boys, a man that'll kill a locomotive engineer is worse'n an Injun; I'd help skin him."

"The hell you would!" cried Du Sang. "Well, don't you want to start in on me? I killed Sollers. Look at me; ain't I handsome? What you going to do about it?"

Before Baggs could think Du Sang was shooting him down. It was wanton. Du Sang stood in no need of the butchery; the escape could have been made without it. His victim had pulled an engine throttle too long to show the white feather, but he was dying by the time he had dragged a revolver from his pocket. Du Sang did the killing alone. At least, Flat Nose, who alone saw all of the murder, afterward maintained that he did not draw because he had no occasion to, and that Baggs was dead before he, Karg, had finished his cigarette. With his right arm broken and two bullets through his chest, Baggs fell on his face. That, however, did not check his murderer. Rising to his knees, Baggs begged for his life. "For God's sake! I'm helpless, gentlemen. I'm helpless. Don't kill me like a dog!" But Du Sang, emptying his pistol, threw his rifle to his shoulder and sent bullet after bullet crashing through the shapeless form writhing and twitching before him until he had beaten it in the dust soft and flat and still.

Banks' men came up within an hour to find the ranchhouse deserted. They saw a lantern in the yard below, and near the corral gate they found the little boy in the darkness, screaming beside his father's body. The sheriff's men carried the old engineman to the house; others of the posse crossed the creek during the evening, and at 11 o'clock Whispering Smith rode down from the south pass to find that four of the men they were after had taken fresh horses, after killing Baggs, and passed safely through the cordon Banks had drawn around the pass and along Deep creek. Bill Dancing, who had ridden with Banks' men, was at the house when Whispering Smith arrived. He found some supper in the kitchen, and the tired man and the giant ate together.

Whispering Smith was too experienced a campaigner to complain. His party had struck a trail 50 miles north of Sleepy Cat and followed it to the Missions. He knew now who he was after, and knew that they were bottled up in the Cache for the night. The sheriff's men were sleeping on the floor of the living room when Smith came in from the kitchen. He sat down before the fire. At intervals sobs came from the bedroom where the body lay, and after listening a moment, Whispering Smith got stiffly up, and, tiptoeing to still the jingle of his spurs, took the candle from the table, pushed aside the curtain, and entered the bedroom.

The little boy was lying on his face, with his arm around his father's neck, talking to him. Whispering Smith bent a moment over the bed, and, setting the candle on the table, put his hand on the boy's shoulder. He disengaged the hand from the cold neck, and sitting down took it in his own. Talking low to the little fellow, he got his attention after much patient effort and got him to speak. He made him, though struggling with terror, to understand that he had come to be his friend, and after the child had sobbed his grief into a strange heart he ceased to tremble, and told his name and his story, and described the two horsemen and the horses they had left. Smith listened quietly. "Have you had any supper, Dannie? No? You must have something to eat. Can't you eat anything? But there is a nice pan of fresh milk in the kitchen."

A burst of tears interrupted him. "Daddie just brought in the milk, and I was frying the ham, and I heard them shooting."

"See how he took care of you till the last minute, and left something for you after he was gone. Suppose he could speak now, don't you think he would want you to do as I say? I am your next friend now, for you are going to be a railroad man and have a big engine."

"Wasn't he, Dannie?"

"He said we would be all right and not to be afraid."

"Did he?"

"He said Whispering Smith was coming."

"My poor boy."

"He is coming, don't be afraid. Do you know Whispering Smith? He is coming. The men to-night all said he was coming."

The little fellow for a long time could not be coaxed away from his father, but his companion at length got him to the kitchen. When they came back to the bedroom the strange man was talking to him once more about his father. "We must try to think how he would like things done now, mustn't we? All of us felt so bad when we rode in and had so much to do we couldn't attend to taking care of your father. Did you know there are two men out at the crossing now, guarding it with rifles? But if you and I keep real quiet we can do something for him while the men are asleep; they have to ride all day to-morrow. We must wash his face and hands, don't you think so? And brush his hair and his beard. If you could just find the basin and some water and a towel—you couldn't find a brush, could you? Could you honestly? Well! I call that a good boy—we shall have to have you on the railroad, sure. We must try to find some fresh clothes—these are cut and stained; then I will change his clothes, and we shall all feel better. Don't disturb the men; they are tired."

They worked together by the candle-light. When they had done, the boy had a violent crying spell, but Whispering Smith got him to lie down beside him on a blanket spread on the floor, where Smith got his back against the sod wall and took the boy's head in his arm. He waited patiently for the boy to go to sleep, but Dan was afraid the murderers would come back. Once he lifted his head in a confidence. "Did you know my daddy used to run an engine?"

"No, I did not; but in the morning you must tell me all about it."

Whenever there was a noise in the next room the child roused. After some time a new voice was heard; Kennedy had come and was asking questions. "Wake up here, somebody! Where is Whispering Smith?"

Dancing answered: "He's right there in the bedroom, Farrel, staying with the boy."

There was some stirring. Kennedy talked a little and at length stretched himself on the floor. When all was still again, Dannie's hand crept slowly from the breast of his companion up to his chin, and the little hand, feeling softly every feature, stole over the strange face.

"What is it, Dannie?"

"Are you Whispering Smith?"

"Yes, Dannie. Shut your eyes."

At three o'clock, when Kennedy lighted a candle and looked in, Smith was sitting with his back against the wall. The boy lay on his arm. Both were fast asleep. On the bed the dead man lay with a handkerchief over his face.

Re-printed from The Weekly Constitutionalist

December 15, 1870.

The "Excelsior Hook and Ladder Co.," of Scotch Plains, George R. Nichol, foreman, are to have a grand re-union and promenade concert at Laing's hall, Monday evening, January 9. It will undoubtedly be a grand affair. Let our fire laddies of Plainfield help and encourage the entreprise by a liberal purchase of tickets.

Lake Hopatcong, Morris county, lies in a mountain basin at an elevation of about 1,500 feet above tide.

A movement is on foot to create a new county out of the townships of Plainfield, Westfield, and New Providence in Union county; Piscataway, in Middlesex and Warren in Somerset County, with Plainfield as the county seat.—Ex.

That is just what Plainfield should be a county seat. "So mote it be."

Our ears were gladdened with the sound of merry peals from the bell of the M. E. church on Wednesday morning, the dedication services of the new edifice commencing on that day. It sounded like old times to hear that bell again, and we hope the day is not far distant when a handsome clock will be put in the steeple of the church, and the time of day pealed forth upon the old bell.

The Central Railroad Company is erecting a large "round house" near the "turn table" to house locomotives in which laying over here all night. If it was only a new depot, we should be very happy to chronicle the fact, and would place our rooster at the head of the article.

We learn that the scholars of the Warren Mission School, North Plainfield, are actively engaged in rehearsal for a grand celebration during the holidays.

A large gang of workmen were engaged on Sunday in straightening the railroad track from a point near Mechanic street to the dep—, excuse us, the "barracks."

BIT OFF WIFE'S EAR, GOT IN MORE TROUBLE.

Arrested on a charge of biting off his wife's ear, Thomas LaMark, of Cliffside, Hackensack, was served yesterday in jail with a warrant which Constable Garriet Dawson has had in his possession since April 15, 1908. The latter warrant charged him with stabbing Nicolo Marino in a fight. The warrant called for the arrest of "Gaetana LaMarco."

On Mrs. LaMark's complaint LaMark was arrested yesterday and brought to the county jail at Hackensack, on a commitment from Justice of the Peace Marsh.

Dawson suspected, from the sililarity of names that LaMark might be the man he was looking for. Mrs. LaMark confirmed his guess. He has been held in $500 bail to answer on each charge.

Case—Edwards.

Miss Clara Cary Case, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lyman Case, formerly of this city, and Arthur Cecil Edwards, of New York, were married yesterday at the Old Red House, the summer home of Mr. Case at Paris Hill, Maine. After the honeymoon the couple will go to Constantinople, Turkey, where they will be at home after October 1.

Van Orden Taken to Jail.

Daniel Van Orden was taken to the county jail at Somerville by Marshal Weiss of the borough police this afternoon. He was given a choice of paying ten dollars or spending ten days in the county jail. He could not raise the money and so decided to spend the time at the county's expense. He was arrested on a disorderly charge.

Miss Bertha Bremmer, of Harrison avenue, has returned from a visit with her cousin, Miss Bertha Witt, of Newark.

Mrs. Catherine E. Benedict, widow of the late Alexander Benedict, died this morning at her home, 30 Duer street, after a brief illness superinduced by the heat. Mrs. Benedict was a daughter of John and Mary Johnson, who were among the early settlers of Staten Island, and was born at Rossville. She was a charter member of Trinity Reformed church and came to Plainfield in 1876. Mrs. Benedict is survived by four children, Mrs. Mary E. Crawford, of this city; Mrs. Anna C. Crawford, of East Orange; Mrs. Richard Stevens, and Miss E. C. Benedict, of this city. The funeral will be held from her late residence Thursday afternoon at 2:30, service being conducted by Rev. James T. Shock.

HACKENSACK YOUNGSTER CHANGES HIS COLOR

Mrs. John E. Travers, of Hackensack, is angry clear through today. She feels that her confidence has been abused and by a two-months-old baby, too.

When the baby was found in a shoe box near the Hotel Kingsland two weeks ago, soon after the departure of a big red touring car containing several well dressed women, there was a great fuss over the little stranger. Several score women gathered round, chucked the youngster under the chin and spoke their minds freely about the woman who had deserted it.

Mrs. Travers claimed the child and took it home. A visitor to her home some time later remarked that baby seemed to be getting darker—probably from sunburn.

"It's beginning to worry me," said Mrs. Travers, holding the baby at a distance. "Sometimes I think its parents must have been Spainiards."

"Does it eat anything?" her visitor asked.

"Watermelon!" shrieked the visitor. "Why, there is something the matter with a baby that eats that kind of stuff. If I were you I'd ask Dr. Brooks about it."

And Dr. Brooks was hastily summoned.

"What makes it so dark?" she asked.

"That's natural enough," said the physician without a smile. "It's a pickaninny."

All the smelling salts in Hackensack were exhausted in an effort to revive Mrs. Travers, and now the youngster has its mail addressed to the poorhouse.

SAW STONE LAID FIFTY YEARS AGO

Present at the fiftieth anniversary services of the laying of the corner stone of the First Baptist church, Millburn, tonight, will be William Hastings, eigthy-two years old, who participated in the ceremonies which marked the setting of the stone on August 10, 1859, and was chairman of the committee of arrangements. The parishioners will give the venerable churchgoer a warm reception on this occasion.

Mr. Hastings is the only member of the church living who saw the stone placed. He resides with his son, Kelsey Hastings, on Westfield avenue, Springfield. Events of the day fifty years ago are vividly recalled by the aged man and his telling of them will be an interesting part of the celebration tonight.

Rev. Carey S. Thomas, the present pastor, who has been in charge since April of this year, succeeding Rev. Henry Whitehurst, has arranged an elaborate musical program. He will deliver an address as will Rev. F. E. Osborne, of Orange, a former rector of the Millburn church. E. D. Pannell, clerk of the church, will give reminiscences of the history of the parish, which was founded in 1858 by six members of the Northfield Baptist church, and the anniversary for which was celebrated last October.

MIDDLESEX CO. FREEHOLDERS GRANT EXTENSION OF TIME.

The Middlesex Board of Freeholders has granted the extension of time asked by the Jersey Central Traction Company for building its trolley line over the county bridges to Perth Amboy. This makes the matter of the completion of that road rest entirely with the City Council of South Amboy. The company asks little of the city, as it has acquired a private right of way from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for the greater part of the route. There is certain to develop strong objection because the tracks are not to follow certain streets in Mechanicsville.

When former applications were made all kinds of objections were raised against going through the certain streets, the residents of which now are asking for it.

Salvation Army Meetings.

Commencing this evening there will be a week of special meetings at the Salvation Army tent on Watchung avenue. This evening the meeting will be in charge of the Plainfield Rescue Mission. Wednesday evening Rev. Mr. Englund of the Swedish Evangelical church, who with the String Band and members of the choir, will conduct the service. Thursday evening Rev. Mr. Shoop, of the Grace M. E. church, will be the speaker. Friday evening the members of the Wilson Memorial Christian Endeavor Society and the members of the West End Tabernacle will be in charge. Saturday evening to be announced. Sunday evening, August 15, Sidney T. Perrin will give the address. The meetings in the tent are increasing in interest all the time and have resulted in a number of conversions. The singing is bright and hearty, the tent is cool and pleasant and all who attend are assured of a pleasant and profitable evening. The Price sisters from Burlington, will be present at these services and will sing.

GRAUSTARK PRESENTED AT PLAINFIELD THEATRE

"Graustark," the romantic play by George Barr McCutcheon, dramatized by George D. Baker, which was presented at the Plainfield theatre last night, more than met the expectations of the audience. Barring the idiotic giggling of a few young people who evidently could not see or understand anything serious, the dramatic incidents of the play were fully appreciated and applauded. The climaxes, particularly that of the fourth act nearly brought the audience to its feet and made it necessary for the hero and heorine to answer several curtain calls.

William Wagner, as Greenfall Lorry, a wealthy American, divided the honors with Miss Gertrude Perry, Princess Yetive of Graustark. These two were ably supported by a competent cast, and Harry Anguisl, (Howard Walsh) made an unmistakable hit with his determination to marry the Countess Dagmar, and an infectious laugh which made the gallery gods scream.

The plot of the play needs no repetition here as the book is so well known, but a few words as to the story of the play will not go amiss. Graustark, as a principality, is suffering from a financial stringency occasioned by an unsuccessful war, and in order to conceal the debt Princess Yetive has determined to sacrifice herself on the matrimonial altar and wed the son of the monarch creditor. The young American, Greenfall Lorry, butts in with a love which wins that of the Princess and determines to marry her at any cost. In the events which follow this determination Mr. Lorry meets with adventures which culminate in the alteration of the laws of Graustark which makes it possible for him to marry his Princess. He is ably assisted in his love making by Baron Dangloss, the Minister of police. All the characters were in competent hands and deserved the applause they received.

FIRST ARRESTS UNDER VEHICLE LIGHT LAW.

The first effort to enforce the new requiring all vehicles to carry lights was made by Edward S. Savage, of 154 West Milton avenue, Rahway, Saturday, when four arrests were recorded.

The defendants were Albert and George Mundy, Joseph Hollock and Michael Fisker, each of whom was driving a wagon for George A. Hoffman, a dealer in dock piling, of Amboy avenue, Woodbridge. The men were driving through St. George's avenue, about 9 o'clock, when Mr. Savage called the attention of Policeman Remer to the violation of the law. The drivers had to pay $1 fine each.

CHILDREN OF ISRAEL ACQUIRE PROPERTY FOR A CEMETERY.

The congregation of the Children of Israel of this city have purchased a lot between New Market and South Plainfield for use as a cemetery. The purchase was made from David F. Blackford and Bessie F. Blackford, his wife. The lot lies west and parallel to the Samptown cemetery and extends from the south line of the Lehigh Valley Railroad on the north to the centre of the New Market, South Plainfield lines on the south.

The plot will be graded shortly and will be put in shape for immediate use as a burying ground.

PHILIP CURRIN IS BADLY BURNED WITH LYE.

While cleaning out a sink at his home on Mountain avenue Saturday, Philip Currin sustained several bad burns from a strong solution of lye that he was using. The caustic alkali solution was mixed with some water in the sink, while Mr. Currin was scraping corners out the basin. The lye acted on his right hand causing some severe burns. As a result of this Mr. Currin has had to wear his hand in a sling for several days.

PUT CHECK ON APPETITE.

It is told of an old-time boarding-mistress of Marblehead, a shrewd dame who kept her boarders under admirable control, that once, on Saturday night, a daring man broke the unwritten law of the establishment, and asked a second time for beans, relates Yourth's Companion. At once several others, who had not dared, but were ready to follow a leader should he succeed, looked up expectantly.

The landlady promptly ladled into the plate of the rassh innovator a last spoonful, scraped from the deepest interior of the dish, and sweeping the table with a beaming smile, declared triumphantly:

"There! I calculated on just enough to a bean!"

Second helpings were otherwise discouraged by a boarding mistress of Old Norley. A young school teacher, late to dinner from a skating party, ate little of the half-cold and unappetizing first courses, but ventured a second request for hit mince pie. It was served without comment, but a few minutes after dinner the maid tapped at her door.

"Misses is afraid all that pie won't set well," she announced, "and she says, shan't she make you some ginger tea?"

The kind offer was declined; but a half-hour the maid appeared again.

"Missus says she's sure you must be needin' ginger tea by now," she stated. "She'll send some right up the minute you say so. It's all ready."

Somewhat less graciously, the offer was declined again; but in a few minutes the maid reappeared with a tray, and "Here's your ginger tea. Missus says you better be on the safe side, and take it."

Rather sharply the tray was repudiated. Five minutes later the maid knocked once more.

"Missus says she's got to go out, but she ain't just easy in her mind to leave you. She's put your ginger tea on the back of the stove keepin' hot; and you'll find the extract bottle on the second shelf of the pantry, if you want any more. She says she hopes you'll be all right, but that pie was awful rich, and two pieces was enough to upset an ostrich."

They did not disturb the digestion of the healthy and hungry young school mistress; but she never risked incurring her landlady's solicitude by more second helpings. The ginger tea had cured her of that.

RUNKEL'S FAMILY IN AUTO WRECK AT LAKE HOPATCONG

Herman Runkel of the firm of Runkel Brothers, chocolate manufacturers, at 451 West Thirtieth street, New York, was returning from New York to the Hotel Breslin, in Breslin Park, near Lake Hopatcong, yesterday afternoon in his forty horse power car with his family and chauffeur, when some part of the machinery broke and the car, which was going down a hill near the hotel, turned over. All three occupants were thrown out, but they fell clear of the machine.

Mrs. Runkel, striking against trees and rocks, landed in the brook at the bottom of the hill, unconscious, with a dislocated shoulder. Mr. Runkel's hands were cut and bruised in the slide down the hill. The chauffeur was unhurt.

Mr. Runkel and the chauffeur picked up Mrs. Runkel and carried her to the hotel, where she was attended by Dr. Albert J. Hart, a guest there. Though suffering with possible internal injuries, Mrs. Runkel will recover.

OLD PENNSY SPAN AT TRENTON BURNS.

Fire yesterday afternoon destroyed one of the three spans of the old Pennsylvania Railroad bridge across the Delaware River between Trenton and Morrisville, Pa. The origin of the fire is not known, but it had gained considerable headway under the planking befort it was discovered.

While the flames were almost at their height a hundred workmen returning from the railroad shops in Morrisville dashed through the flames and reached the Jersey shore, while a half dozen others crossed over the high girders above the bridge before communication between the two States was cut off.

Until a few years ago the bridge was used by trains on the main line of the Pennsylvania between New York and Philadelphia. Since the railroad built a new bridge it has been used only by foot passengers and wagons.

Youngster Slightly Injured.

A small boy viewing postal cards in a show case in front of the St. Stephen's candy store on West Front street this morning, fell down the steps of the sidewalk cellar after stumbling against the side of the door which was up. The door fell down, catching the lad's head between its jam and the other door, which was down. Passersby rushed to extricate the youngster, who was carried into the candy store. Here a glass of cold water revived him. The door of the cellarway happened to be open to give light to plumbers who were working just below the stairs.

GRAND JURY PROBES RAFFERTY MURDER CASE

The Somerset County grand jury, in session at New Brunswick, spent yesterday probing into the murder case at Lincoln several months ago, when John Rafferty was shot and killed by Clifford Brokaw, who has thus far eluded capture by the county authorities. The dead man's mother was in court and was called as a witness. Detective Charles A. Oliver was also on hand, with the constables of Lincoln and the vicinity.

Rafferty was shot in the thigh by Brokaw after a fight which started in a saloon, where blows were exchanged. The shooting took place at the Brokaw home, which adjoins Rafferty's house. The elder man received the mortal wound as he came up the porch steps to Brokaw's front door. Brokaw, who is about 21 years of age, is a crack shot with rifle and revolver. He often wandered away from his home and lived in tree tops. After the shotting, he escaped in the woods, and although a posse was organized, he was not captured. Rafferty died the following day at Muhlenberg Hospital.

SOLDIERS PRAISED AFTER LONG 'HIKE'

Inspiring indeed was the entry of the Second regiment into camp at Sea Girt yesterday, after their three days' "hike" from Trenton and New Brunswick. Their coming partook much of the nature of a triumphal entry, for all were anxious to see the condition of the men after their trying experience of three days in the hot spell.

Breakfast was served in the Farmingdale Camp at a quarter to three o'clock to the men. Everything was ready for the last lap of the famous "hike" at four o'clock. The last ten and one-half miles were covered in less than four hours, and the State grounds were reached in advance of the scheduled hour.

Governor Fort, with several of his staff, rode out several miles early yesterday morning to see the men in heavy marching order, and was delighted with their fine appearance. The Executive stood upon the porch of the "little white house" as Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan rode by at the head of his men. The men showed up second to none of the four regiments that had preceded them into camp this year, and were heartily greeted by all on the grounds.

Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan stated that the "hike" had been of great benefit to the men, and that the men, with a day's rest, could do a return "hike." He paid a glowing tribute to the regimental physicians for their excellent care of the men. He also complimented the men for their good behavior and discipline all the way down from Trenton to the sea, and said only words of compliment were paid to the citizen soldiery of the State, and that the reputation of the Jersey guard had been materially raised in his estimation of all the people of Middlesex and Monmouth counties, through which the militia passed.

Captain W. A. Morton is captain of the day, Lieutenant E. W. Myatt officer of the guard, and Lieutenant Clarence Morton junior officer of the guard. Dress parade was held yesterday afternoon at half-past five o'clock, and there was a big crowd there from the nearby summer resorts.

He Looked Suspicious.

Patrolman McGinley arrested a suspicious-looking negro on West Seventh street at about 11 o'clock last night, and as the man could not give a satisfactory account of himself, he was locked up. Questioned by Chief Kiely this morning, he said that he had recently "done time" in State prison, serving eight years of a fifteen-year sentence for burning a barn in Middlesex county. He told the police that he is on parole, and reports weekly to the prison authorities. His story was verified and he was freed. He is employed in a Westfield livery.

Dr. Eaton to Speak.

People who attend the services at Netherwood Fresh Air Camp next Sunday will be well repaid for their trouble. Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, who is known as the most eloquent of all the Baptist divines in this part of the country, will talk to the children and mothers who are enjoying the hospitality of the camp under Miss Curry's care. Every one will be welcome at this service.

Award Scholarships.

The shareholders in the Drake College scholarships met at Knights of Columbus Hall, last night, and awarded the one year scholarship to D. Nugent; six months' scholarship to T. Mack and three months' scholarship to P. Bailey, all of this city.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. ANNA G. RICHEY

The funeral of Mrs. Anna G. Richey, mother of Mrs. C. W. Fisk, took place yesterday in Trenton, from the late home on West State street. The services were conducted by Rev. Francis Palmer, pastor of Prospect Street Presbyterian church, of which Mrs. Richey had been a member since the church was built. Mr. Palmer was assisted by Rev. Walter A. Brooks, D. D., pastor-emeritus of the same church.

After the formal service both ministers spoke briefly of the life and character of Mrs. Richey and of her loyalty to her church and family, as well as the chairtable work for which she was noted.

Mrs. Richey died in Spring Lake and her body was brought to her Trenton home for burial. The bearers were her four grandsons: A. R. Fisk, C. J. Fisk, mayor of Plainfield; Harvey Fisk and Lewis E. Waring, husband of her granddaughter. The interment was in Riverview cemetery.

MONUMENT TO P. V. CLARK WORK OF LOCAL FIRM

L. L. Manning & Son, the West Front street monument makers have under construction a pedestal for the monument to Phineas V. Clark, of Newark, which when completed will be one of the best examples of the art ever turned out in this city.

The pedestal will be of red Missouri Granite with a base six feet four inches by five feet four inches, and a die four feet four inches by three feet four inches, and every inch will be polished. The statue is of heroic dimensions, five feet high and made of bronze, and represents Mr. Clark seated in his favorite easy chair.

The casting of the statue is being done by the Hinman Bronze Works, of this city, and will probably be ready for setting about the middle of September. The whole design is by Edward H. Sebring the artist in the employ of the Messrs. Manning, and is a creditable pi work. When finished the monument will have cost $2,500, and will be placed in Fairmount cemetery in Newark.

FREEHOLDERS DECIDE AGAINST NEW BRIDGE

There is much dissatisfaction here because the Somerset County Board of Freeholders has decided not to join Union county in the construction of a new bridge on Washington avenue. The Union county members want to build the structure of concrete, while the Somerset county officials think this will cost too much. The Somerset county board met yesterday, and decided not to make the improvement at present. It is only a question of time when a new bridge will have to be erected in place of the old one and the action of the Somerset Freeholders only delays the improvement.

It was also learned yesterday that owing to the operation of a new State law, the freeholders could do nothing in the matter of building a new road from Nshanic to connect with the Hunterdon county road at Centreville. The new law provides that each property-owner along the road must have his signature attached to a petition, before the application can be considered. This was not done and the matter was laid on the table.

The meeting was largely routine. The bills for the current month were audited and ordered paid and appropriations amounting to $160,000 were made to cover road and bridge work and all county expenses for the year.

Mrs. Sarah E. Beekman.

Mrs. Sarah E. Beekman, widow of S. Bloomfield Beekman, died at her home, 37 Clinton avenue, this morning at 10:30. Nine children survive her: VanDorn Beekman, Mrs. Isaac Randolph, Miss Cornelia Beekman, Miss Carrie Beekman, Miss Ella Beekman, Miss Georgie Beekman, Mrs. Saurns, Mrs. Edward Beekman and Samuel Beekman. Mrs. Beekman and her husband came to Plainfield over twenty years ago from Raritan and lived her ever since. Mr. Beekman died several years ago, after having built the house now occupied by the family.

TROLLEY PASSENGER HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Putting his right arm out of a trolley car nearly cost David Brown, colored, of Plainfield avenue, this city, that member, at eight thirty o'clock this morning. He was standing on the rear platform of a main line trolley car going to Elizabeth, where he is employed. He was partly facing the front of the car and was leaning against the folding iron railing, his arm crooked at the elbow. Just before the car reached the switch near the Park avenue crossing at Scotch Plains, Brown put out his right arm further out. A car coming in the opposite direction at good speed passed within a foot of the other car and struck Brown's arm just below the elbow, severely lacerating it, and tearing the coat and shirt sleeve. Both cars were immediately stopped, and Brown was put on the car coming to this city.

In this city he was met by the police patrol which hurried him to Muhlenberg hospital, where he is now undergoing treatment. But for the fact that Brown had on a fairly heavy coat and shirt, it is likely that he would have bled to death as the cuts that he did receive were in the vicinity of a large artery. Brown will not lose his arm.

HOUSES DEVASTATED BY BOY VANDALS

Vandalism on the part of four small boys, who were discovered by Chief Kiely in new houses belonging to the Central Park Realty Company on Gresham road may result in their prosecution by the real estate company. One of the boys is eleven-year-old Milton Shoemaker, who was the "pal" of William Hand in stealing the candy vending machine from the Park avenue store more than a week ago, and the others are New York boys spending the summer at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home. Shoemaker is the son of William A. Shoemaker, of Berkeley avenue, and must appear before the Juvenile Court with Hand in the fall.

Hailed by the Chief, who saw the youngsters at the new houses as he drove past yesterday afternoon, the boys scattered. An examination of the premises showed that much damage had been done in each of the houses. The electric light globes had been broken, two valuable chandeliers wrenched down and devastated, door-knobs broken off and stolen and lime thrown all over the parquet floors and hard-wood mantels.

Chief Kiely went from the houses to the Netherwood Home and notified Miss Curry that the New York children must be kept on the grounds. He has received several complaints about the children from residents in the vicinity. Charles Matt, manager for the real estate firm, has been notified, and action may be started by Ernest Sharp, the president.

FORMER P. H. S. GRADUATE IS NOW A LIFE SAVER.

John Dutcher, a former Plainfielder, who was graduated from the city high school in the class of 1903, is now a member of the Volunteer Life Saving Corps at Asbury Park, where the family of the eRv. E. C. Dutcher is spending the summer vacation.

Mr. Dutcher recently figured in some notable rescues when about twenty people were taken from a treacherous hole beyond a sand reef a hundred yards from in front of the Ross pavilion at Asbury Park. He together with the other life savers went into the surf, with a rope tied about his waist. Then the person in danger would be clasped firmly, guards on shore would be signalled, and the pair would be pulled in shore. This was done with about twenty-five people and was witnessed by several Plainfielders who were on a recent excursion to the park from this city.

RECTOR AND CHURCH CHOIR HAD DELIGHTFUL OUTING

Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, who has been enjoying a seven weeks' vacation, will return to Plainfield this week and will take charge of the services at the church Sunday morning at 10:30 and an hour later will preach at St. Stephen's church for Rev. Morgan Ashley, who left yesterday for his summer outing.

Mr. Warner spent the first part of his vacation at Shelter Island Heights, N. Y., and the following three weeks at Camp Comfort, Hedges Lake in the Berkshire Hills, where he had the choir boys from the church, a party of forty-six in all.

The choir boys and men in camp were George Ball, Ashley Burner, Russell Brakeley, Loren Biddes, Walter Kenyon, Carl Noble, Martin Mantz, Clarence Patrick, Charles Schneegas, Evan Stevens, William Taylor Ericson Van Norden, Charles Wakefield, Edward Waldron, Edwin M. Schorb, Thomas Ball, Grant Boos, Allen Diman, Clarence Higgins, Frederick Noble, Harold Noble, Raymond Mosher, Howard Riley, Paul Skenk, Carroll Taylor, Walter Thomas, Frederic Van Norden, Edmond Wakefield, Charles Kregar, Herbert Stine and Ira Vail, Aaron Higgins, Bert Miller, William Little, James Lindzey, Ed. Williams, Gerald and Philip Thorp, three Maurer boys, of Dunellen; Raymond Kline, Malcom Krewson, George Townley, C. C. Irby and John Greelish.

This is the largest party Mr. Warner has ever taken to camp and the boys say it is the best. After breaking camp two weeks ago, Mr. Warner continued his vacation jaunt by a trip through Lake George thence to Lake Champlain and up the lake to historic Crown Point, his old home, thence by steamer to Port Kent and Asuable Chasm, then up Lake Champlain to Bluff Point and back by rail to New York. He then went to Shelter Island Heights for a two weeks' sojourn.

BOROUGH FRUIT DEALERS COMPLY WITH ORDINANCE

Following the new ordinance of the borough Board of Health that all fruit stands and small groceries must be separated from the living rooms of the proprietors, about a dozen Italian and rGeek fruit venders in the borough are making extensive repairs to their properties.

In most cases, the front room has been enlarged and the back room has been separated simply by means of a door. Some of the small merchants have made plans to build additions in the rear of their property, and are now holding off until building permits have been given as authority.

The ordinance was passed by the Board of Health a little over a week ago after a thorough investigation of conditions. It was found that Italian and Greek fruiterers were living in the rear of their stands, with, in most cases, only a curtain separating the two rooms. The family, sometimes a visitor or two, a few animal pets and other live stock was harbored in the back room, where all of the cooking was done. In addition to this it was used as a general sleeping room. The conditions were so unsanitary that the board took action in the matter. A visit to some of the shops showed that its provisions are being slighted in a number of cases. This, the dealers explain, is but a temporary measure, and all conditions required in the ordinance will be complied with as soon as necessary building permits can be granted, and the necessary repairs made.

Only Eight at Reunion.

The twenty-eighth anniversary of the survivors of Company B, Fourth New Jersey, Kearny's brigade, was conducted Monday on the Lawton farm, on Hamilton avenue, Trenton. Of the original ninety-two officers and men, there are but fifteen known to be alive at this time, and of that number eight were in attendance at the reunion Monday. They were John Peterson, of Ohio, James Lawton, Henry Lawton, Lafayette Horner, Israel Sutton, John P. Beach, John Hendley and eGorge Thompson.

A VICTIM OF ASSAULT?

HIS SKULL CRUSHED BY BLOW.

Dead Man's Parents Hear Story of Assault by a Policeman—Body Brought Here.

Mystery surrounds the death of John P. Powers, the former borough druggist, who died in Bellevue Hospital, New York, yesterday, following his arrest Saturday night. Coroner Harburger said today that he will hold an inquest to learn how the fatal injury—a fracture of skull—was sustained. The coroner has heard the story of foul play by a New York policeman, whom Mrs. Powers, the dead man's step-mother, accused in the Jefferson Market court yesterday of having caused the fatal injury by a blow with a night stick. The policeman is said to have stated that force was necessary to get Powers into the cell.

Telephone inquiries at Coroner Harburger's office in New York today brought the statement to a Daily Press reporter that the police and men from the District Attorney's office will begin an investigation of the charge of foul play by a policeman. Dr. Burke, of Bellevue Hospital, where the injured man was taken, states that the fracture was caused by a blow and not by a fall, as the Jefferson Market prison keepers reported. An autopsy was performed at the morgue today by Coroner's Physician O'Hanlon, and the body was brought to this city, where the funeral will be held Friday morning from the home of his aunt, Mrs. Frank Burke, of 726 West Fourth street.

The investigation thus far has resulted in the story that the former Plainfielder was arrested early Sunday morning on a charge of intoxication by a policeman, who found him staggering along the street, near his apartments at 6 Charles street. Arraigned before Magistrate Barlow in the Night Court after his arrest, the police say that Powers was so weak that he could hardly stand. He talked incoherently and appeared dazed and bewildered. In view of the charge, the magistrate sent him back to a cell in the Jefferson Market prison until he should "sober up." Instead of going to sleep, Powers continued to act queerly and complained of pains in his head. He had several spasms and Monday night was taken to Belleveue Hospital, where the examining physician, Dr. Burke, found his skull to be fractured and stated that the depression, which is at the base of the skull, seemed to have been caused by a blow from a blunt instrument. He died at the hospital at 2 o'clock yesterday morning.

It has also been learned that the druggist dined with Police Lieutenant Barry, of the Williamsburg Bridge precinct Saturday night, and was arrested on his way home after leaving him. The police officer states that the man was not drunk. The lieutenant and Miss Elizabeth Gavin, of Greenbrook road, called on Powers at the New York hospital Monday evening.

The New York police are inclined to discredit the report that the fracture was caused by a fall. There is a report current in this city that Powers' dizziness was caused by heat prostration, and that this illness caused him to fall on the street.

Michael Powers, the dead man's father, and his wife, came to this city today, when the body was brought here from Bellevue Hospital. The funeral at the residence of his aunt will be followed by a mass at St. Joseph's church.

Suspended Sentence.

William Flannigan, a brickmaker of Mountain avenue, who drank at every liquor emporium from Dunellen to North Plainfield yesterday afternoon, received a suspended sentence by Mayor Townsend in the borough police court this morning. It was Flannigan's first offense in several years, and, as he promised not to repeat it, he was released.

ADOLPH BERTCHEY ATONES FOR DREAD CRIME

Adolph Bertchey, the twelfth man to lose his life in the electric chair in New Jersey, last night suffered the death penalty at Trenton for killing Frank Janowski at Lakewood last January.

Bertchey disappointed those who had expected him to make a scene in the death chamber. He walked into the room with an air of bravado and a look of defiance. Although the guard of keepers was doubled, Bertchey refused to allow any of them to touch him.

"I'll walk alone; don't be afraid about me," he said as he was leaving his cell. In a little more than five minutes from the time he left his cell he was officially pronounced dead.

William E. Bunn, secretary of the Lakewood Y. M. C. A., who has acted as Bertchey's spiritual adviser, accompanied him to the chair, but neither man uttered a word after entering the death-house. Pinned on Bertchey's shirt, over his heart, was a white rose, given to him by his wife yesterday.

For several days Bertchey had spent most of his time writing letters. He apoligized for the inconvenience and loss he had caused those whom he robbed during his long career as a burglar, and in one letter confessed to a jewelry robbery in Lakewood about a year ago, of which another man was accused.

Bertchey left with Mr. Bunn a letter to young men urging them to avoid lives of crime and advising them to embrace religion early and associate only with religious people.

Bertchey's body will be turned over to his wife today. It is not known what plans she has made, but under the law there can be no funeral.

TRADE STRIKE ON NEW TELEPHONE BUILDING

Efforts of the Newark unions to prevent the establishment of the open shop on two of the biggest jobs in that city, resulted in practically a tie-up of work on the New York and New Jersey Telephone building in Washington street yesterday, beginning with the calling off of the iron-workers Monday afternoon; workmen of other trades, masons' helpers, concrete mixers, water proofers and laborers, about sixty in all, followed yesterday. The circumstances that led to the telephone building strike were exactly similar to those that caused the Prudential strike.

The union representatives insisted on the removal of two hoisting engineers who, it was declared, were not affiliated with the union. The men were not taken off, and at a meeting of the board of business agents yesterday, strike measures were decided upon. The original intention had been to call all the men off yesterday morning, but the union iron-workers' delegate went directly to the work from the meeting and took the iron men off. The other trades followed yesterday. The Teamsters' local called a strike last night in sympathy with their colleagues.

D. C. Weeks & Son are the contractors on the telephone structure. As on the Prudential job, Post & McCord have the iron work contracts. It is against the open shop policy of this firm that the fight is being waged. Post & McCord have expressed themselves as satisfied with their stand. They were employing about seventeen union men on the telephone job when the men quit. Others had been engaged, in New York, in anticipation of trouble on the telephone work. Some came over, but were persuaded by the union delegate not to go to work. There were half a dozen working yesterday morning, piling iron, but no actual construction work was going on.

The sentiment at the Trades Council headquarters today was in favor of a fight to a finish. As yet, the leaders said no energetic measures had been taken to bring pressure to bear on the iron work contractors to induce a change of policy. What measures may be adopted were not disclosed.

Conditions at the new Prudential building were unchanged since yesterday. The Hedden Construction Company were putting on no new men, but repeated the statement made yesterday that if the local men did not care to return their places would be filled pretty soon with outside union labor.

KNIGHTS MAY DINE ON COLUMBUS DAY.

The Knights of Columbus of Elizabeth will probably celebrate Columbus Day, October 12, with a banquet this year. A committee was appointed at the meeting of Elizabeth Council at Masonic Hall last night to look into the matter and to decide whether the project of having the annual banquet of the Knights on that date, instead of in February, would meet with the approval of the members.

There seems to be a general sentiment among the members in favor of the idea. In the past the dinner has been held at the height of the winter season and has come close to the dinner of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, the A. O. H. and other associations whose membership is more or less widespread.

The committee appointed is composed of Michael Fagan, chairman; George J. S. Murphy, secretary; P. J. Connell, James P. Salmon and James J Coleman. It will report at the next meeting.

Owls' National Convention.

The American Order of Owls opened its first annual convention at Reading yesterday. Several hundred delegates from all parts of the country were present. Dr. F. S. O'Hara, supreme president of the order, responded to the address of welcome delivered by Mayor Rick. The convention will be in session four days.

The West End Tabernacle is constantly growing in membership and interest in the work is also increasing. The Sunday-school now numbers fifty, and the attendance at the regular Sunday services is large for the summer season. Robert Love is in charge of the work there.

SWIMMING SAVES BOYS.

Four Upset in Rowboat Have Hard Fight for Lives.

Four youngsters, John Willis, Frank Hillery, Patrick Pollick and John Probsky, of Bayonne, braved the billows of Newark Bay in a rowboat yesterday afternoon and narrowly escaped drowning. Only the heroic efforts on the part of the youths, all good swimmers, brought them safely to shore, after swimming a distance of almost a mile.

The quartet started out from the foot of the City Park, Bayonne, shortly after noon. They had rowed far out into the bay, when a sudden swell, caused by the Majestic, the Newark excursion steamer, capsized the boat. The boys were thrown into the water. Before they arose from their sudden plunge the rowboat was carried beyond their reach by the tide.

CLEAN PAPER MONEY NEW TREASURY PLAN

When the present press of work incident to the new tariff law and the approaching necessity for the making up of estimates is over the Treasury Department intends to undertake a number of reforms in the paper currency of the country. Not the least of these reforms is the proposition to wash national banknotes, and thus wage a governmental war on germs. There is under consideration also a plan to change the size and design of practically all the notes now in circulation, retiring the present issue as rapidly as possible.

Physicians have inveighed for years against the banknotes as conveyers of disease. The attention of the Treasury officials in the past has been called to the danger that lurks in notes which have passed from hand to hand, accumulating the germs of disease that threaten the health of the nation. A dirty and crumpled banknote, under microscopic examination has been found to contain some billions of such germs to the square inch.

As a result of this agitation Secretary MacVeagh has called upon Director Ralph of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing to submit a plan whereby the danger could be obviated. Director Ralph at once began experiments, with the result that he has discovered a chemical solution, or "bath," that makes the tough fibre of the banknote almost as good as new, does not injure the ink, and completely and inexorably eliminates the dangerous bacteria.

Samples of notes so treated are now in the possession of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Norton. While they have not the crispness of the new notes, as they come from the Treasury, they are obviously clean. Further experiments are being made at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in the hope of discovering some method by which the bills may be completely restored to their pristine freshness.

If these experiments are successful the cost of producing National banknotes will be greatly reduced. Now, when dirty and bedraggled notes are returned to the Treasury they are destroyed, and this destruction entails practically a complete loss of the expensive paper and the equally expensive inks used in their manufacture, for no means have been discovered whereby the pulp can be used in the manufacture of new notes, because of the indelible ink, which discolors it.

TWO THEATRES FOR SALE.

Bayonne's Principal Playhouses to Go Under Hammer Today.

George Carragan, president of the First National Bank, of Bayonne, as receiver, will sell at auction this afternoon the two principal playhouses of Bayonne, the Opera House and the Bayonne Theatre. Both are controlled by the Bayonne Amusement Company.

The sale will be held at the theatre on Broadway.

At Proctor's.

The bill at Proctor's theatre today is unquestionably one of the best yet presented at this house. The hoop rollers and jugglers are great, while the acrobats are among the best in their line. The comedienne in popular songs and the comedy pair complete a strong attraction. Tomorrow there will be a complete change of vaudeville and films d'art, always of a high standard. The crowds that have been patronizing Proctor's this summer attest the popularity of this kind of amusement. It is always cool and comfortable at this house.

BEARD SACRIFICED TO THE FIRE FIEND.

Elizabeth, Aug. 11.—One man had his beard burned off, another was scorched and another injured in a fire at the shoe shop of Abraham Cuttner, 61 First street, Elizabeth yesterday. The stock in the store was burned and a can of paint exploded.

Cuttner and his workman, Otto Selmberg, and a painter whose name has not been ascertained, were sitting in the rear of the store, when one of them threw away a match, which fell, lighted, on a can of paint. The paper stretched over the top of the can caught fire and the paint exploded.

In trying to put out the blaze, Cuttner was burned about the hands and his beard was burned off close to his face. Selmberg, in running out to give the alarm, broke through a plate glass door and his arm was gashed from wrist to elbow. The painter was slightly burned.

An alarm was turned in from box 63 and the firemen put out the blaze before it spread to another building. The injured men were terated at a nearby drug store.

AUTOMOBILE COMMISSIONER REVOKES SEVERAL LICENSES

J. B. R. Smith, State Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, yesterday revoked the driver's license of Arthur J. Stumpf, of Harrison, and the registration certificates of Jacob L. Stumpf, of Arlington.

The charge against the two Stumpf's is that on the evening of July 4 a car owned by Jacob and driven by Arthur, hit a car driven by Dr. Herbert P. Leopold, of Philadelphia, injuring him and other members of his party. The driver of the Stumpf car is accused of having increased his speed and run away. The Stumpfs failed to appear in their own defense when summoned, and the revocation of their licenses followed.

MATCH REUNITES BROTHERS, SEPARATED FIFTEEN YEARS.

To John Hardy, of Clinton street, Bloomfield, strolling on the beach at Coney Island yesterday, there appeared a stranger who asked for a match with which to light his cigar. When he got it he remarked that his name was Charles Hardy and added the further information that he lived in Baltimore and that for fifteen years he had not seen his brother John.

"I'm John," said the man from Bloomfield, "and I'm glad to see you. Come out to Bloomfield and enjoy your vacation."

"I'll be glad to," said the man from Baltimore.

In Bloomfield last night John Hardy said that Charles had thought he was dead and he had thought Charles was dead and that the family reunion and celebration was likely to be one of the most elaborate affairs of that sort that Bloomfield has seen in some time.

ARMY TO WEAR DRAB KAHKI.

Contracts were awarded by the War Department yesterday for khaki with which an army of 100,000 men could be clothed. The order, which went to the Massachusetts Cotton Mills of Lowell, is for 825,000 yards of the cloth, with the privilege of increasing the amount by 50 per cent.

The contract calls for only about one-half of the amount the Government is prepared to purchase. Advertisements will appear tomorrow asking for bids for another million yards, the bids to be opened on March 1, 1910, and delivery to be made not later than next May.

The new uniforms are to be different in color from the present summer uniforms. They are to be an olive drab, somewhat on the order of the present winter clothing of the troops. Experience has shown that this color is much better in the field than tan and that the wearers are less easy of discovery by the enemy.

Edward C. Marsh.

Edward C. Marsh, for nearly sixty years a resident of Elizabeth, is dead at his residence, 140 Catherine street. Mr. Marsh was born in Westfield, and was 65 years old, and had lived in Elizabeth sixty years. He was a son of the late Linus B. Marsh, who built the old Marsh (now Dix) building on Broad street. When a young man Mr. Marsh went into the grocery business with his father, and then for himself, conducting a store at Catherine and Lafayette streets for many years. Mr. Marsh was a member of the Second Presbyterian church. He is survived by a son and daughter, Gardner H. Marsh and Miss Ethel C. Marsh. Interment will be in Rahway.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Robert Walpole, one of the town's oldest and best known residents, celebrated his seventy-seventh birthday yesterday at his home on Front street. Mr. Walpole, who is as spry as the youngest and attends to his duties as Court Constable regularly, intended to observe the day quietly and with this end in view engaged a day off and stayed at home. Mrs. Walpole and his children, however, had decided differently, and last night surprised him with a regular surprise party, which included not only the children, but a number of old friends. The veteran officer, however, was equal to the occasion and enjoyed the evening as well as his children and grand children. During the evening a collation was served by Mrs. Walpole, Mr. Walpole being the guest of honor. The even was an enjoyable one and Mr. Walpole received a number of useful reminders of his seventy-seventh natal day.

The dance held last night in Excelsoir Hall by the young people from here and Plainfield, was an enjoyable affair, notwithstanding the warm weather. The dance was given in honor of Miss Mabel Hand, who returns shortly to her home in Florida, after a visit of several months with her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Hand, of Park avenue.

The uncertainty of baseball was shown Saturday. Rahway defeated Plainfield, 3-2; Plainfield has defeated the local team two games this season, still the locals put it on to Rahway several weeks ago by a score of 13 to 3.

The members of St. Mary's parish, Stony Hill, will hold a lawn fete this afternoon and tonight on the rectory grounds, near the church.

Mrs. George L. Dunn and children enjoyed a day's outing, sailing up the Hudson River yesterday.

Rev. and Mrs. Franklin K. Mathews and family are enjoying life at Bradley Beach for a time.

Mrs. Walter Beard has returned from a two weeks visit with relatives at Palmyra.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Pay day on the L. V. R. R. this month will come on Thursday, the 12th, instead of the usual time the thirteenth of the month.

Repairs are being made by E. Ryno on his home on Front street. He is also building a barn on the rear of his property.

Many local friends regret to hear of the death of John Powers, of Plainfield, who was killed Saturday night in New York.

Miss Gertrude Horan, of New Brunswick, is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. John Horan, of this place.

Patrick McDonough is detained at his home by an injury to his hand which has developed into blood poisoning.

Imported from Philippines and Now Duty Free—$20,000 Saved.

By telegraphic order from Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Reynolds, 500,00 Philippine cigars were released from bond yesterday and admitted free of duty under the new tariff law. This is the first importation from the islands to fall under the new customs provisions relating to Philippine products.

The former duty in Philippine cigars was $45 a thousand. Under the new law 150,000,000 cigars will be admitted annually duty free. The shipment released yesterday has been held in bond pending the settlement of the tariff question. The duty collected under the old tariff would have amounted to $20,000.

TRAIN HITS YOUNG NEGRO.

Who Decides Finally That He Has Been Really Hurt.

William Rotter, a young negro living at Sixth and Wall streets, Elizabeth, was struck by a west bound train at the Central Railroad depot, at Broad street, Elizabeth, last night.

Rotter received only a glancing blow and was not thrown to the ground. Shortly after being hit, however, he fell to his knees, and it was decided to send him to the General Hospital.

It is believed that Rotter is not seriously injured.

Donald Mortimer, of Boston, Mass., who has been visiting his parents on West Seventh street, left today for a two weeks' vacation with relatives in Pennsylvania. He will return home for a few days before returning to Boston.

Mrs. K. E. Flynn, of West Fourth street, has returned home from a two weeks' visit with her daughter, Mrs. Donlon, wife of Dr. Donlon, of New York, who is spending the summer at her summer cottage on Sewell avenue, Asbury Park.

COL. A. A. POPE OF BICYCLE FAME DEAD

Col. Albert A. Pope died at his summer home, Lindermere-by-the-Sea, Cohasset, Mass., yesterday afternoon. For more than a year Col. Pope had been in poor health due to the troubles of his bicycle and automobile enterprises, which were forced into the hands of a receiver not long after the recent panic.

Col. Pope was born in Boston, May 20, 1843, and received his early education in the public schools of Brookline. His father suffered financial reverses and the lad went to work for a Brookline farmer. At the age of 15 he went to work in the Quincy market and three years later when the rebellion broke out he enlisted in the Thirty-fifth Massachusetts Infantry. He rose rapidly from the ranks and when the regiment was mustered out he was brevetted Lieutenant-Colonel for gallant conduct in the battles of Fredericksburg, Knoxville, Poplar Springs Church and Petersburg. On his return from the war he engaged in the making of shoe manufacturers' supplies.

When in 1876 the first imported bicycles came into this country Col. Pope foresaw an opportunity for building a great fortune by their manufacture in this country. He founded the Pope Manufacturing Company and became a millionaire through the medium of the bicycle.

When the craze subsided and the automobile supplanted the wheel in public favor the company began to get into difficulties. The Pope Motor Company was organized as a subsidiary corporation to the Pope Manufacturing Company and started the manufacture of automobiles. Financial troubles beset both firms and in the panic they were forced into the hands of a receiver.

He was a director for many years in a number of banks and corporations. He was a member of the Loyal Legion, Society of Cincinnati, and many other organizations. He was a visitor on the boards of Wellesley College and Lawrence scientific school, Harvard.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

The Hon. Charles N. Fowler is no longer chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency. So certain monetary legislation which it would have been his pride and privilege to direct in a positive way, to the great advantage of the nation and the world at large, he will have to do with only in the capacity of a private member.

Under the circumstances it is natural that Mr. Fowler should be gloomy as he looks into the future as far as a statesman can see. For he is a great believer in the wisdom of committees, when properly directed by the right sort of chairmen. On the other hand, he has no very high opinion of the House as a whole. Thus, speaking of the new tariff law, while admitting that his own State is not likely to suffer, he is forced to admit that everything is not as it ought to be. As he puts it:

"It is probably as good a revision as we could hope to get, as long as tariff revisions must be based upon trades and not upon facts. Nor need we expect a tariff revision based upon facts until we have a permanent tariff commission composed of men of the very highest character and recognized as a responsible body, precisely as we now regard the Supreme Court."

To whom or what would Mr. Fowler make his ideal commission responsible? No doubt to the Executive It is the fashion nowadays for Congress to abandon as many of its powers as possible. But how simple it would be for a little band of highly trained experts, all of them as well informed on the subject of the tariff as Mr. Fowler is on finance, to frame a bill, submit it for Executive approval, and then have it sent to the National Legislature for formal acceptance. Under such circumstances the wheels would go around with no friction whatever. And when the work was over there would be no complaint like that which we heard of late to the effect that the new law was not perfect.—New York Evening Sun.

Surprised Mr. Ripley.

Elmer E. Ripley, the popular letter carrier, of East Fifth street, was agreeably surprised last night when friends to the number of thirty or more, who had gathered at the residence of Mrs. Armstrong on Watchung avenue, marched in upon him at a little after 8 o'clock. They brought with them as a reminder of Mr. Ripley's natal day a fine silver mounted umbrella handsomely engraved with Mr. Ripley's initials. The evening was spent in playing progressive euchre and the honors were as follows: Mr. Templin, first men's prize; Mr. Cochrane, second men's prize; Mrs. Van Fleet, first woman's prize; Mrs. Latrourette, second women's prize. After the cards refreshments were served and the party broke up at about 1 o'clock this morning.

Miss Anna Dixon, of New York, has returned from a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Cormick McDonough, of Fairview avenue.

FIFTY HORSES DIE IN A $40,000 BLAZE

Jersey City, Aug. 11.—A fire that broke out in one of the two big stables in Burns Brothers' coal yard, formerly owned by the Hudson Coal Company, in less than an hour last evening completely destroyed both stables, and burned over fifty horses to death. Some say the number was nearer seventy-five.

The stables adjoined the coal pockets of the firm, which contained many thousand tons of coal, mostly of the pea and bituminous variety. The coal, however, did not catch fire.

The pockets and stables were on the south side of the Morris Canal at Jersey avenue. The stables were over two blocks in length each and about forty feet wide. Hundreds of tons of hay in bales were consumed and made hot work for the firemen. The scene of the fire was almost inaccessible for the fire apparatus except the hose. It was a two-alarm fire and thousands of people were attracted to the spot.

Some of the burned horses were in the veterinary department, located in one of the stables. Other horses were out with wagons. There were nearly 150 horses in the stables when the fire broke out. The stablemen saved over half of them, however. About 200 wagons, including cast-off ones, were stored in the yard. The fire did not reach these.

The burned plant will be practically out of commission today, but the firm has several others in the city, including one at Communipaw. It was said that the delivery of coal by contract would not be interfered with. The main office of the firm is in the Pennsylvania Railroad terminal buildings, in New York. It was impossible to learn the exact amount of the loss, but it is estimated at from $30,000 to $50,000.

INTEREST DOCTORS IN HALF-PAY DAY.

The board of directors of the hospital half pay day committee met at its headquarters, 68 Broad street, Elizabeth, last night, and made plans for the completion of the list of captains to take up the detailed work of the committee in the 125 districts into which the city has been divided. All the vacancies will be filled, it is expected, at the next meeting of the board next Tuesday.

A motion by James C. Connolly that the doctors of the city be asked to come to a meeting of the board Tuesday night was carried. The directors were informed that the doctors of Bayonne, which held a successful half-pay day, had been of great service to the Bayonne committee, and it is thought that the doctors of Elizabeth will also take an interest in the work. An especial effort will be made to interest Dr. Victor Mravlag, the Mayor, in the enterprise.

Reports from local parochial schools and some of the out-of-town boards of education were received to the effect that it would be impossible for the committee to distribute among the pupils of the schools celluloid buttons advertising the pay day. The Elizabeth Board of Education will be asked to take up the matter at its meeting tonight.

GUARDSMEN GOOD AT FIREFIGHTING.

Soldiers of the Second Regiment, which had just pitched camp, are popular today with the people of Manasquan. Guardsmen near the hosehouse saw a blaze burst out from the express barn of John Petit on Osborne avenue. Hurrying to the hosehouse, they pulled the apparatus to the fire. By the time the town firemen arrived the soldiers had the fire practically under control.

The large barn, with its contents, was a total loss. The residence and other nearby houses were saved, after a hard fight. The origin of the blaze is unknown.

PRESIDENT OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST BANK.

In the president's room of the National City Bank sits a man in the prime of life, Frank Arthur Vanderlip, whose iron-gray hair and moustache and keen blue eyes suggest the truly Americanesque type of aggressive business ability which has developed from the erstwhile farmer boy of Aurora, Ill. His close study and keen analysis of financial topics while in Chicago journalism marked him early as a man of unusual ability in matters of finance. He went to Washington as secretary to Secretary of the Treasury Lyman J. Gage, and later was appointed first assistant Secretary of the Treasury by President McKinley. In both positions he increased his influence and reputation.

His brilliant career is an epitome of the history of his nation, passing rapidly from youthful obscurity to a position of trust and importance.—From National Magazine.

Candid Analysis.

"What are your views on the income tax?"

"Pretty much the same as on the tariff," answered Senator Sorghum. "There would be no objection to it if it could be so arranged that my especial friends won't have to pay it."—Washington Star.

ONLY ONE.

The Record in Plainfield Is a Unique One.

If the reader has a "bad back" or any kidney ill and is looking for relief and cure, better depend on the only remedy endorsed by people you know. Doan's Kidney Pills relieve quickly—cure permanently. Plainfield citizens testify to this. Here is a case of it:

A. C. Lazzi, 44 Elm place, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for five years and from my experience feel that I cannot give them too much praise. I have to do a great deal of stooping at my work and I think that my kidneys became weakened in this way. I suffered from a dull, grinding pain in my back, and also had attacks of rheumatism. Another source of annoyance was the irregular action of the kidney secretions. While suffering from a spell of this trouble, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Randolph's Pharmacy and shortly after I was well again. Since then hard work has brought on one or two slight attacks of backache but a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills have never failed to give me instant relief."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

The Flemington village trustees have contracted for all-night lights during the next five years.

A camp of the P. O. S. of A. has been organized at Clinton with thirty-four charter members.

The Hunterdon county farmers' picnic will be held on the Flemington Fair Grounds August 18 and 19.

Dr. Charles Cunningham, of Hammonton, deputy coroner of Atlantic county, is a candidate for the Assembly.

William M. Braddock, of Newfield, has been elected a member of the Board of Education of Franklin Township.

Thieves entered the residence of William R. Jones, of Newfield, in the absence of the family and stole $25.

The two-year-old child of William Somers, of Millville, almost choked to death while eating candy yesterday, but physicians saved its life.

The Menantoco Bleach and Dye Works of Millville, which employs about 600 hands, closed yesterday for a week to make repairs.

The eighteen-month-old baby of Postmaster S. A. Gardner, at South Vineland, drank freely of a mixture containing turpentine, but its life was saved by a physician.

Edgar J. Wrigley, of Hurffville, has received word from government officials at Washington that a large stock of black bass will be sent him for Bethel Lake.

Warrants for the arrest of twelve foreigners, who closed a Sunday celebration with a free fight at the house of Nicholas Cara, have been issued by Mayor Smith, of Millville.

The Richards Dredging Company of Philadelphia was the lowest bidder, at nineteen cents per yard, for dredging Cooper's Creek, Camden, when bids were opened at the United States engineer's office in Wilmington yesterday.

When he scratched his arm with a piece of wire, Boyd Reigel, twenty-one years old, of 1140 Baring street, Camden, paid no attention to the injury inflicted until yesterday, when it was found that blood poisoning had developed. His arm is swollen to almost twice its normal size.

Panic-stricken passengers of a West Jersey and Seashore electric train fled from the two rear cars at Gloucester City yesterday, when the overhead feed wire dropped and set fire to the car roofs. No one was hurt, and the local firemen soon extinguished the blaze which caused but little damage.

Supreme Court Justice Garrison, in Camden, yesterday, granted counsel for the Whitney Glass Company a writ of certiorari to review the action of the Glassboro Township Committee in passing an ordinance for the paving of certain Glassboro streets. It is claimed that the committee's action in passing the ordinance, with only two members present, was illegal.

John F. Shanley and Henry Holeman, who have been in the Soldiers' Home at Vineland for some time, have been dismissed by order of the board of managers. Both men protested when detailed to do some work about the institution by the superintendent, Capt. John Shields, and the board took the matter up. Shanley is preparing to engage counsel to push his plea that he was not physically able to work. The wives of the men were allowed to remain.

So effectively did Alexander McVetty, a leather dealer at Merion, Pa., present his defense in the Camden Police Court yesterday that Recorder Stackhouse dismissed the automobile speeding charge made against him by Motor Cycle Policeman Kay. Mr. McVetty said he was positive that he was not driving his car faster than the law allows, and as Policeman Kay stated that the Merion manufacturer had always been careful in the past to keep within the speed limit the magistrate gave the autoist the benefit of the doubt.

WORTH KNOWING.

Old pieces of soap can be put into a small baking powder box which has been punctured with nail holes. The box can be thrown into the dishpan and used the same as any soap shaker. This is a good way to use small particles of toilet and laundry soap.

For the roast of cold lamb course serve an egg salad sprinkled with minced mint leaves.

Place a box of lime in the closet in which jams, preserves, etc., are stored away. It will prevent mold from gathering on the fruit.

A small clean sponge and a bowl of water are essentials upon the ironing board when fine lingerie garments must frequently be dampened. A bowl of clear starch water is also needed.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Williams Cache.

Ed Banks had been recalled before daybreak from the middle pass. Two of the men wanted were now known to have crossed the creek, which meant they must work out of the country through Williams Cache.

"If you will take your best two men, Ed," said Whispering Smith, sitting down with Banks at breakfast, "and strike straight for Canadian pass to help Gene and Bob Johnson, I'll undertake to ride in and talk to Rebstock while Kennedy and Bob Scott watch Deep creek. The boy gives a good description, and the two men that did the job here are Du Sang and Flat Nose. Did I tell you how we picked up the trail yesterday? Magpies. They shot a scrub horse that gave out on them and skinned the brand. It hastened the banquet, but we got there before the birds were all seated. Great luck, wasn't it? And it gave us a beautiful trail. One of the party crossed the Goose river at American fork, and Brill Young and Reed followed him. Four came through the Mission mountains; that is a cinch and they are in the Cache—and if they get out it is our fault personally, Ed, and not the Lord's."

Williams Cache lies in the form of a great horn, with a narrow entrance at the lower end known as the Door, and a rock fissure at the upper end leading into Canadian pass; but this fissure is so narrow that a man with a rifle could withstand a regiment. For 100 miles east and west rise the granite walls of the Mission range, broken nowhere save by the formation known as the Cache. Even this does not penerate the range; it is a pocket, and runs not over half-way into it and out again. But no man really knows the Cache; the most that may be said is that the main valley is known, and it is known as the roughest mountain fissure between the Spanish sinks and the Mantrap country. Williams Cache lies between walls 2,000 feet high, and within it is a small labyrinth of canyons. A generation ago, when Medicine Bend for one winter was the terminus of the overland railroad, vigilantes mercilessly cleaned out the town, and the few outlaws that escaped the shotgun and the noose at Medicine Bend found refuge in a far-away and unknown mountain gorge once named by French trappers the Cache. Years after these outcasts had come to infest it came one desperado more ferocious than all that had gone before. He made a frontier retreat of the Cache, and left to it the legacy of his evil name, Williams. Since his day it has served, as it served before, for the haunt of outlawed men. No honest man lives in Williams Cache, and few men of any sort live there long, since their lives are lives of violence; neither the law nor a woman crosses Deep creek. But from the day of Williams to this day the Cache has had its ruler, and when Whispering Smith rode with a little party through the Door into the Cache the morning after the murder in Mission valley he sent an envoy to Rebstock, whose success as a cattle thief had brought its inevitable penalty. It had made Rebstock a man of consequence and of property and a man subject to the anxieties and annoyances of such responsibility.

Sitting once in the Three Horses at Medicine Bend, Rebstock had talked with Whispering Smith. "I used to have a good time," he growled. "When I was rustling a little bunch of steers, just a small bunch all by myself, and hadn't a cent in the world, no place to sleep and nothing to eat, I had a good time. Now I have to keep my money in the bank; that ain't pleasant—you know that. Every man that brings a bunch of cattle across Deep creek has stole 'em, and expects me to buy 'em or lend him money. I'm busy with inspectors all the time, deviling with brands, standing off the Stock association and all kinds of trouble. I've got too many cows, too much money. I'm afraid somebody will shoot me if I go to sleep, or poison me if I take a drink. Whispering Smith, I'd like to give you a half-interest in my business. That's on the square. You're a young man, and handy; it wouldn't cost you a cent, and you can have half of the whole shooting-match if you'll cross Deep creek and help me run the gang." Such was Rebstock free from anxiety and in a confidential moment. Under pressure he was, like all men, different.

Whispering Smith had acquaintance even in the Cache, and after a little careful reconnoitering he found a crippled-up thief, driving a milch cow down the Cache, who was willing to take a message to the boss.

Whispering Smith gave his instructions explicitly, facing the messenger, as the two sat in their saddles, with an importunate eye. "Say to Rebstock exactly these words," he insisted. "This is from Whispering Smith: I want Du Sang. He killed a friend of mine last night at Mission Springs. I happened to be near there and know he rode in last night. He can't get out; the Canadian is plugged. I won't stand for the killing, and it is Du Sang or a clean-up in the Cache all around, and then I'll get Du Sang anyway. Regards."

Riding circumspectly in and about the entrance to the Cache, the party waited an hour for an answer. When the answer came, it was unsatisfactory. Rebstock declined to appear upon so trivial a matter, and Whispering Smith refused to specify a further grievance. More parley and stronger messages were necessary to stir the Deep creek monarch, but at last he sent word asking Whispering Smith to come to his cabin accompanied only by Kennedy.

The two railroad men rode up the canyon together. "And now I will show you a lean and hungry thief grown monstrous and miserly, Farrell," said Whispering Smith.

At the head of a short pocket between two sheer granite walls they saw Rebstock's weather-beaten cabin, and he stood in front of it smoking. He looked moodily at his visitors out of eyes buried between rolls of fat. Whispering Smith was a little harsh as the two shook hands, but he dismounted and followed Rebstock into the house.

"What are you so high and mighty about?" he demanded, throwing his hat on the table near which Rebstock had seated himself. "Why don't you come out when I send a man to you, or send word what you will do? What have you got to kick about? Haven't you been treated right?"

Being in no position to complain, but shrewdly aware that much unpleasantness was in the wind, Rebstock beat about the bush. He had had rheumatism; he couldn't ride; he had been in bed three weeks and hadn't seen Du Sang for three months. "You ain't chasing up here after Du Sang because he killed a man at Mission Springs. I know better than that. That ain't the first man he's killed, and it ain't a' goin' to be the last."

Whispering Smith lifted his finger and for the first time smiled. "Now there you err, Rebstock—it is 'a goin' to be' the last. So you think I'm after you, do you? Well, if I were, what are you going to do about it? Rebstock, do you think, if I wanted you, I would send a message for you to come out and meet me? Not on your life! When I want you I'll come to your shack and drag you out by the hair of the head. Sit down!" roared Whispering Smith.

Rebstock, who weighed at least 275 pounds, had lifted himself up to glare and swear freely. Now he dropped angrily back into his chair. "Well, who do you want?" he bellowed in kind.

A smile softened the asperity of the railroad man's face. "That's a fair question and I give you a straight answer. I'm not bluffing: I want Du Sang."

Rebstock squirmed. He swore with shortened breath that he knew nothing about Du Sang; that Du Sang had stolen his cattle; that hanging was too good for him; that he would join any posse in searching for him; and that he had not seen him for three months.

"Likely enough," assented Whispering Smith, "but this is wasting time. He rode in here last night after killing old Dan Baggs. Your estimable nephew Barney is with him, and Karg is with him, and I want them, but, in especial and particular, I want Du Sang."

Rebstock denied, protested, wheezed and stormed, but Whispering Smith was immovable. He would not stir from the Cache upon any promises. Rebstock offered to surrender any one else in the Cache—hinted strongly at two different men for whom handsome rewards were out; but every compromise suggested was met with the same good-natured words: "I want Du Sang."

At last the smile changed on Whispering Smith's face. It lighted his eyes still, but with a different expression. "See here, Rebstock, you and I have always got along, haven't we? I've no desire to crowd any man to the wall that is a man. Now I am going to tell you the simple truth. Du Sang has got you scared to death. That man is a faker, Rebstock. Because he kills men right and left without any provocation, you think he is dangerous. He isn't; there are a dozen men in the Cache just as good with a gun as Du Sang is. Don't shake your head. I know what I'm talking about. He is a jay with a gun, and you may tell him I said so; do you hear? Tell him to come out if he wants me to demonstrate it. He has got everybody, including you, scared to death. Now, I say, don't be silly. I want Du Sang."

Rebstock rose to his feet solemnly and pointed his finger at Whispering Smith. "Whispering Smith, you know me—"

"I know you for a fat rascal."

"That's all right. You know me, and, just as you say, we always get along because we both got sense."

"You're hiding yours to-day, Rebstock."

"No matter; I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll give you all the horseflesh you can kill and all the men you can hire to go after him, and I'll bury your dead myself. You think he can't shoot? I give you a tip on the square." Whispering Smith snorted. "He'll shoot the four buttons off your coat in four shots." Smith kicked Rebstock's dog contemptuously. "And do it while you are falling down. I've seen him do it," persisted Rebstock, moist with perspiration. "I'm not looking for a chance to go against a sure thing; I wash my hands of the job."

Whispering Smith rose. "It was no trick to see he had you scared to death. You are losing your wits, old man. The albino is a faker, and I tell you I am going to run him out of the country." Whispering Smith reached for his hat. "Our treaty ends right here. You promised to harbor no man in your sink that ever went against our road. You know as well as I do that this man, with four others, held up our train night before last at Tower W, shot our engineman to death for mere delight, killed a messenger, took $65,000 out of the through safe and made his good get-away. Now, don't lie; you know every word of it, and you thought you could pull it out of me by a bluff. I track him to your door. He is inside the Cache this minute. You know every curve and canyon and jail-bird in it, and they pay you blood-money and hush-money every month; and when I ask you not to give up a dozen men the company is entitled to, but merely to send this pink-eyed lobster out with his guns to talk with me, you wash your hands of the job, do you? Now listen. If you don't send Du Sang into the open before noon to-morrow, I'll run every living steer and every living man out of Williams Cache before I cross the Crawling Stone again, so help me God! And I'll send for cowboys within 30 minutes to begin the job. I'll scrape your Deep Creek canyons till the rattlesnakes squeal. I'll make Williams Cache so wild that a timber-wolf can't follow his own trail through it. You'll break with me, will you, Rebstock? Then wind up your bank account; before I finish with you I'll put you in stripes and feed buzzards off your table."

Rebstock's face was apoplectic. He choked with a torrent of oaths. Whispering Smith, paying no attention, walked out to where Kennedy was waiting. He swung into the saddle, ignoring Rebstock's abjurations, and with Kennedy rode away.

"It is hard to do anything with a man that is scared to death," said Smith to his companion. "Then, too, Rebstock's nephew is probably in this. In any case, when Du Sang has got Rebstock scared, he is a dangerous man to be abroad. We have got to smoke him out, Farrell. Lance Dunning insisted the other day he wanted to do me a favor. I'll see if he'll lend me Stormy Gorman and some of his cowpunchers for a round-up. We've got to smoke Du Sang out. A round-up is the thing. But, by heaven, if that round-up is actually pulled off it will be a classic when you and I are gone."

CHAPTER XXVII.

The Fight in the Cache.

A clear night and a good moon made a long ride possible, and the Crawling Stone contingent, headed by Stormy Gorman, began coming into the railroad camp by three o'clock the next morning. With them rode the two Youngs, who had lost the trail they followed across Goose river and joined the cowboys on the road to the north.

The party divided under Kennedy and Smith, who rode through the Door into the Cache just before daybreak.

"I don't know what I am steering you against this morning, Farrell," said Whispering Smith. "Certainly I should hate to run you into Du Sang, but we can't tell where we shall strike him. If we have laid out the work right I ought to see him as soon as anybody does. Accidents do happen, but remember he will never be any more dangerous than he is at the first moment. Get him to talk. He gets nervous if he can't shoot right away. When you pull, get a bullet into his stomach at the start, if you possibly can, to spoil his aim. We mustn't make the mistake of underestimating him. Rebstock is right; he is a fright with a revolver, and Sinclair and Seagrue are the only men in the mountains that can handle a rifle with him. Now we split here; and good luck!"

"Don't you want to take Brill Young with you?"

"You take both the Youngs, Farrell. We shall be among rocks, and if he tries to rush us there is cover."

Stormy Gorman with four Crawling Stone cowboys followed Whispering Smith. Every rider on the range had a grievance against Williams Cache, and any of them would have been glad to undertake reprisals against the rustlers under the wing of Whispering Smith.

Just how in the mountains—without telegraph, newspapers, and all ordinary means of publicity—news travels so fast may not certainly be said. The scattered lines of telephone wires help, but news outstrips the wires. Moreover, there are no telephones in the Mission mountains. But on the morning that the round-up party rode into the Cache it was known in the streets of Medicine Bend that the Tower W men had been tracked into the north country; that some, if not all, of them were in Williams Cache; that an ultimatum had been given, and that Whispering Smith and Kennedy had already ridden in with their men to make "it good."

Whispering Smith, with the cowboys, took the rough country to the left, and Kennedy and his party took the south prong of the Cache creek. The instructions were to make a clean sweep as the line advanced. Behind the center rode three men to take stock driven in from the wings. Word that was brief but reasonable had been sent everywhere ahead. Every man, it was promised, that could prove property should have a chance to do so at the Door that day and the next; but any brands that showed stolen cattle, or that had been skinned or tampered with in any way, were to be turned over to the Stock association for the benefit of owners.

The very first pocket raided started a row and uncovered 80 head of five-year-old steers bearing a mutilated Duck Bar brand. It was like poking at rattlesnakes to undertake to clean out the grassy retreats of the Cache, but the work was pushed on in spite of protests, threats, and resistance. Every man that rode out openly to make a protest was referred calmly to Rebstock, and before very long Rebstock's cabin had more men around it than had been seen together in the Cache for years. The impression that the whole jig was up, and that the refugees had been sold out by their own boss, was one that no railroad man undertook to discourage. The cowboys insisted on the cattle, with the assurance that Rebstock could explain everything. By noon the Cache was in an uproar. The cowboys were riding carefully, and their guards, rifles in hand, were watching the corners. Ahead of the slowly moving line with the growing bunch of cattle behind it, flourished as it were rather conspicuously, fugitive riders dashed back and forth with curses and yells across the narrow valley. If it had been Whispering Smith's intention to raise a large-sized row it was apparent that he had been successful. Rebstock, driven to desperation, held council after council to determine what to do. Sorties were discussed, ambushes considered, and a pitched battle was planned. But, while ideas were plentiful, no one aspired to lead an attack on Whispering Smith.

Moreover, Williams Cache, it was conceded, would in the end be worsted if the company and the cowmen together seriously undertook with men and unlimited money to clean it out. Whispering Smith's party had no explanation to offer for the round-up, but when Rebstock made it known that the fight was over sending out Du Sang, the rage of the rustlers turned on Du Sang. Again, however, no man wanted to take up personally with Du Sang the question of the reasonableness of Whispering Smith's demand. Instead of doing so, they fell on Rebstock and demanded that if he were boss he make good and send Du Sang out.

Of all this commotion the railroad men saw only the outward indications. As the excitement grew on both sides there was perhaps a little more of display in the way the cattle were run in, especially when some long-lost bunch was brought to light and welcomed with yells from the center. A steer was killed at noon, everybody fed, and the line moved forward. The wind, which had slept in the sunshine of the morning, rose in the afternoon, and the dust whirled in little clouds where men or animals moved. From the center two men had gone back with the cattle gathered up to that time, and Bill Dancing, with Smith, Stormy Gorman, and two of the cowboys, were heading a draw to cross to the north side of the Cache, when three men rode out into the road 500 yards ahead and halted.

Whispering Smith spoke: "There come our men; stop here. This ground in front of us looks good to me; they may have chosen something over there that suits them better. Feel your guns and we'll start forward slowly; don't take your eyes off the bunch, whatever you do. Bill, you go back and help the men with the cattle; there will be four of us against three then."

"Not for mine!" said Bill Dancing, bluntly. "You may need help from an old fool yet. I'll see you through this and look after the cattle afterward."

"Then, Stormy, one or two of you go back," urged Whispering Smith, speaking to the cowboy foreman without turning his eyes. "There's no need of five of us in this."

But Stormy swore violently. "You go back yourself," exclaimed Stormy, when he could control his feelings. "We'll bring them fellows in for you in ten minutes with their hands in the air."

Open Evenings—Closed Sundays

AUTOISTS TO ENGAGE IN ROADABILITY RUN

H. A. Bonnell, chairman of the club run committee of the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club, has announced a roadability run for members of the big Newark club next Sunday. Bellewood Park, fifty-two and a half miles from Newark, is to be the destination, and Chairman Bonnell has received many inquiries regarding the route to be followed. The committee has secured a loving cup which will be presented to the member whose running time from Newark is nearest to the secret time schedule prepared in advance by Chairman Bonnell and his associates.

The committee will figure the time so that none of the drivers will have to exceed the speed limits of any of the towns and cities through which they pass and the club members who take part in the run will be asked to observe the speed limits on the run. The committee is planning to have the drivers leave their homes or the clubhouse at East Park street and Park place, Newark, about 9 o'clock on Sunday morning and arrive at Bellewood Park about 12 o'clock, so that dinner may be served to the party promptly at 12:30 o'clock.

The officials of the Lehigh Valley Railroad have given special permission for the clubmen to drive their cars inside Bellewood Park, a privilege rarely accorded motorists. The route selected by the committee is through Irvington, Springfield, Plainfield, Dunellen, Bound Brook, Somerville, Pluckemin, North Branch, Clinton, Perryville and Pattenburg to Bellewood.

MONTICELLO RAVAGED BY DISASTROUS BLAZE

A fire which started at 8:15 o'clock last evening in the electric light plant of the village of Monticello, Sullivan county, N. Y., destroyed the entire busines section of the village, and caused a loss of between $700,000 and $1,000,000. The residence section of the village was saved only by the use of dynamite, a number of buildings in the path of the flames having been destroyed by the explosives.

Thirty-six buildings in all were burned, including every store in the village except a furniture store; all of the large hotels, two newspaper offices and the national bank. The fire spread from the electric light plant to the Palatine Hotel and Palatine Music Hall, thence up and down both sides of Main street. The three fire companies of the village fought hard until they were put out of business by the burning of their lines of hose. Then the city of Port Jervis and the village of Liberty were called upon for help.

SONNET OF SABBATH MORN.

With silent awe I hail the sacred morn,
That scarcely wakes while all the fields are still;
A soothing calm on every breeze is borne,
A graver mummur echoes from the hill,
And softer sings the linnet from the thorn;
The skylark warbles in a tone less shrill.
Hail, light serene! hail, sacred Sabbath morn!
The sky a placid yellow lustre throws;
The gales that lately sighed along the grove
Have hushed their drowsy wings in dead repose;
The hovering rack of clouds forgets to move.
So soft the day when the first morn arose!

Poppies for House Use.

Poppies are among the prettiest of the garden flowers, but most people find them exceedingly difficult to use successfully for a cut flower. The secret of keeping them fresh in water, is to have a pail or jar well filled with water at hand when the flowers are cut. Plunge each immediately into the water, before it has a chance to droop. After the flowers have had an opportunity to drink their fill, they may be transferred into the vases for house use.

GRANGERS AT PITMAN

THE FARMER IS AN ARTIST.

President of New Jersey's Senate Tells How Improvements Can Be Made Through Legislation.

Hon. Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, President of the New Jersey State Senate, addressed the State Grange, at Pitman, Gloucester county, this afternoon on "The Importance of Agriculture to State and Nation." His audience was composed of members and friends of the grange to the number of over two thousand, and at its conclusion Mr. Frelinghuysen was loudly applauded. He said in part:

"It is a pleasure for me to be with you today and speak to you on a subject which interests all of us. When people connected with any pursuit gather in such numbers I cannot look upon them but with great respect, and I confess I am more impressed when asembled before me are those whose interests and whose hopes are connected with the cultivation of the soil.

"The importance of agriculture to a State or a nation is obvious to every man. The civilized and commercial countries are so connected and their interests so blended that the prospects of a short crop deranges and agitates the commerce of the whole trading world.

My county, Somerset, is an agricultural county. In it I reside and have spent the happiest days of my life on a farm whose acres were tilled by my great grandfather and my father, and it is my ambition that those who follow me will keep that same farm in cultivation. There are many untilled farms in the southwest section which are and will be reclaimed. How? By better means of transportation and higher prices for products, so that the farmer can compete with the higher wages of the cities. Such results can be brought about only by co-operation. You must take an active interest in legisaltion. New Jersey has done much for the farmer, but it can do more. Encourage your Senators and Assemblymen whenever they stand for your interests."

Referring to the milk question, Mr. Frelinghuysen said: "Many laws have been enacted to protect the public against unsanitary and unclean milk. This is a question which has been agitated for many years. The farmer is surrounded by restrictive laws. It is almost impossible for him under present conditions to secure an adequate return for this important food product.

"We are living in an age of scientific advance. Laws are being enacted for pure food, pure water and pure milk. I believe in simple justice to the farmer. I believe when a man gets up at 5 o'clock of a cold winter's morning and milks a kicking cow, after being compelled to become a Baptist, strains the milk and carries it four or five miles to a creamery, such milk ought to be worth 'liquid gold' from the laboring man's viewpoint. We have seen the cost of living advance but the farmer still gets a pittance for that important food of mankind.

"In the decade 1896 to 1906 the value of New Jersey farm products increased from $46,000,000 to $76,000,000, while the value of horses on the farm remained stationary during the whole period at $23,000,000. So Jersey has fallen into the background as a horse producing State. To improve conditions I introduced two bills—one providing that all stallions should be sound and free from all hereditary disease; the other creating a livestock commission and appropriating $20,000 for the purchase of heavy draft and coaching type horses. An excellent commission was named, the object being to encourage the farmers and breeders of New Jersey to produce a more useful as well as a more marketable type of work horses."

Mr. Frelinghuysen then gave a history of the work accomplished by the commission appointed under his bills and stated that within a few years Jersey will stand where she ought to stand as a livestock producing State. He also gave the grangers some very good advice on agricultural economics and lastly spoke on patriotism, telling the story of Philip Nolan, "the man without a country."

In conclusion the speaker said: "Whatever else may be undervalued or overlooked, let us never forget that the cultivation of the earth is the most important labor of man. Man may be civilized in some degree without great progress in manufactures and with little commerce with his distant neighbors, but without the cultivation of the earth he is in all histories a savage. When tillage

OUT OF JAIL—SPANKED

Cheap Detective Stories Led Busel to Borough Highway Robbery.

MOTHER IS SERIOUSLY ILL.

Moses Bender Furnished $250 Bail Last Night to Release Friend's Son From County Jail.

Sensational literature of the five-cent detective story type led Morris Busel, the thirteen year old son of Max Busel, of Manson place to commit highway robbery according to a statement made by him after his release on $250 bail from the Somerville County jail yesterday evening. The lad had been reading literature of this type for some time, and was imbued with the desire to do something daring. The robbery of a woman in broad daylight seemed to furnish every element of excitement that the lad craved and for this reason the hold up of Mrs. Arthur Vail on Somerset street was planned and carried out.

Since the lad's commitment to the county jail without bail by Justice Thomas Snape, of the borough, the boy's mother has been seriously ill. His release on bail furnished by Moses Bender, of Somerset street, by Judge Schenck yesterday, has not materially bettered her condition, and she is now under the care of a physician. The chap's father, who has a muscular right arm developed by fifteen years' handling of the shoemaker's hammer, vented his parental wrath on the youngster in an hour's session in the wood shed, this morning.

Up to the time of the flogging the little chap bore his disgrace with comparative indifference, and statements as to the effect of his conduct on his mother apparently did not affect him. He cried a little when taken to jail, and when put in the borough cell after the hearing before Justice Thomas Snape. The latter held young Busel for the grand jury without bail. Max Busel secured the legal service of Judge William Newcorn, and yesterday afternoon the two made the trip to Somerville, where they persuaded Judge Schenck whom they found at his home, to fix a bail for the release of the youngster. Moses Bender, of Somerset street, an intimate friend of Busel, furnished the money.

Young Busel is now at home and is not permitted to leave the street. His hearing will come up in September, when it is likely, that, owing to his age, he will be turned over to a probation officer. The lad read cheap literature in secret.

MT. ZION AND SHILOH S. S. OFF FOR A DAY'S OUTING.

Six large trolley cars were necessary to carry the members of the Mt. Zion and Shiloh Baptist church Sunday schools to Bound Brook this morning, from whence they took a Lehigh Valley train to Bellewood Park. Another excursion that left the Watchung avenue trolley station at the same time this morning carried the members of the Mt. Olive Baptist church to South Beach.

Rev. Edwin Maynard was in charge of the former excursion, which got off with a minimum of confusion and in good order. There were no "left behinds" and the trips to the places of destination were made in good time. The usual attractions of the park and beach were well patronized by the excursionists. Returning the excursionists will reach this city at about 9 o'clock.

Celebrates Birthday Anniversary.

Mrs. Sarah Powlison celebrated the eighty-sixth anniversary of her birthday yesterday at her home on Rockview avenue, the borough, surrounded by her relatives and intimate friends. Mrs. Powlison was born at Pluckemin, Somerset county, and lived there until her marriage. For a time she lived at Bound Brook and then removed to North Plainfield, thirty-one years ago. Her maiden name was Miss Sarah VanArsdale. She is the mother of J. S. Powlison, of Powlison & Jones, and an aunt to Borough Councilman Morris C. VanArsdale. She also has many other relatives.

Salt Water Day at Amboy.

Labor Day, September 6, will be salt water day at Eaglewood Park, Perth Amboy, and arrangements are being made to entertain a large crowd of colored people. There will be baseball, bowling, boating and fishing among the attractions, concluding with a pig chase.

David Brown Improving.

David Brown, who was severely injured while a passenger on a main line trolley car bound for Elizabeth, yesterday, was white, not colored. His home is in Elizabeth and he was on his way there when injured. His condition today is much improved.

COUNTY POLITICAL TALK

Assemblymen Kirstein, Schwartz and Pierce All Want Renominations.

LOCAL CANDIDATES FOR OFFICE

Although it is a trifle early to talk politics, the situation in Union county this year is interesting in many ways. There are several important offices to fill and it goes without saying that the contest will be a lively one. There are three Assemblymen to be elected to take the places of A. F. Kirstein, of Rahway; Augustus Schwartz, of Elizabeth, and Carlton B. Pierce, of Cranford.

Assemblyman Kirstein recently sold out his drug business at Rahway, and it is said that he is planning to make his home in Cincinnati. This he may decide to do, provided he fails to get a renomination, which, it is said, he expects. However, the party has not definitely decided on this question and it is possible that someone else may get the nomination. As Assemblyman Schwartz is completing his first term, his many friends believe that he is entitled to another one at Trenton. He has a good record and will doubtless be returned.

Thus far it is not known whether Assemblyman Pierce wants to go back. He has had two terms and he has a record of which anyone might be justly proud. If he wants a renomination he undoubtedly can have it, but in the event of his not getting it, there seems to be a strong sentiment in favor of William Jeffery, the "Bungalow Man," of Berkeley Heights. There are many people who believe that the more isolated parts of the county are entitled to representation and the friends of Mr. Jeffery say that he would make a good member of the lower house.

It is also rumored that Councilman Herbert Buxton, of this city, would like to go to the Assembly. During his long service in the Common Council he has familiarized himself thoroughly with not only city and county affairs but those of State. He is a good parliamentarian and his friends believe that he would make a good representative for Plainfield in that State body. If he should fail to get the nomination he will doubtless be a candidate for another term in the Common Council, where he has done good work.

The terms of Frank H. Smith as county register of deeds and James C. Calvert as county clerk, also expire this year and they will both be candidates for renomination. This year both offices will be put on a salary basis by the new State law. Heretofore, the register of deeds has received a salary of about $10,000 a year, it is said, while the county clerk's salary almost reaches those figures. According to the new law each will receive a salary of $5,500 Notwithstanding this fact both offices are eagerly sought, although thus far no opposition to the present incumbents has appeared. Both Mr. Smith and Mr. Calvert are particularly strong in the county and there is every reason to expect that they will receive renominations.

It is now a question whether the party wants to send any new Assemblymen to Trenton this year, or wait until next year, when the election of a United States Senator to succeed John Kean in 1911 will be the all-important matter to be considered. Among the leaders of the party there seems to be no question but that Senator Kean will succed himself. He is a strong factor in his district and politicians concede that it would be an exceedingly difficult proposition to elect someone else in his place.

John P. VanHorn Injured.

John P. VanHorn, of Duer street, employed at the Hall Signal Works, Garwood, met with a painful accident, this morning, soon after starting to work. His left hand was caught in a lathe and terribly lacerated from the palm to the ends of the fingers. Temporary treatment was given at the Works and Mr. VanHorn then returned home, where Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan attend to the injury.

Warren Chapel Excursion.

The annual excursion of Warren chapel to Asbury Park will be on Thursday, August 19, and as this will be about the last opportunity Plainfielders will have to take a day's outing at the shore, no doubt it will be a big excursion.

Y. M. H. A. Hall Dedication.

The new hall of the Young Men's Hebrew Association on Grove street, will be dedicated Sunday afternoon in an appropriate manner. Judge William Newcorn will be in charge and the exercises will be of an attractive character.

RELATIVES GIVE VERSION OF JOHN POWERS' DEATH

A statement by Mrs. Frank Burke, aunt of John P. Powers, the druggist whose mysterious death in Bellevue hospital, New York, Tuesday, will be thoroughly investigated by the New York police, is to the effect that the man was overcome by the heat in New York Saturday, and that the actions which led to his arrest were caused by dizziness and weakness. The dead man, relatives say, was practically a nervous wreck because of busines troubles, and was much weakened as the result of some dental work which caused an infection of the gum, preventing him from taking nourishment of any kind.

It is reported that relatives at the bedside of the dying man heard him say that his fatal injury, a fractured skull, was the result of a blow on the head. He was sinking fast at the time he is alleged to have made this statement, and could give no particulars of the assailant or place of assault.

The fact that Powers, when searched at the Jefferson Market court is said to have had but thirteen cents in his pockets, leads to the belief that robbery was the motive of assault, and that the man was blackjacked and held up while walking home. The down town streets are practically deserted at the early hour of his home coming.

The funeral will be held at the residence of Mrs. Burke, of West Fourth street, tomorrow morning, and there will be a subsequent service at St. Joseph's church.

BURGLARS WITH WAGON TAKE TOOLS WORTH $125

Burglars broke into the Whittier schoolhouse of Dunellen and the house on Prospect avenue, Dunellen, being built by Henry Wrage for his son Charles, last night, and carried off tools valued at over $125. There is no clue to the burglars. The tools must have been carried away in a wagon owing to weight and numbers.

The tools were stored in the basement of the Whittier school building, and when the workmen left it last night, the building was securely locked. The burglars effected an entrance through a window, and then opened one of the doors from the inside, through which the tools were presumably taken out to a wagon. The weight of the tools must have required the services of at least two men; and the police of the borough are working on this theory. In the Wrage house on Prospect avenue an entrance was also effected through a window and the same opening was gone through in getting the tools out.

No suspicious characters were noticed in the course of the evening by residents nearby nor was any noise heard. The police of Plainfield, North Plainfield, New Brunswick and Bound Brook have been notified of the burglary, and if any attempts are being made to pawn the tools they will be arrested.

Knights of Pythias Altar Traveling.

The Charity Altar of the Knights of Pythias, which was presented to Unity Lodge here a week ago, has been to Somerville Lodge, No. 59, and tonight will be taken by that lodge to New Brunswick Lodge, No. 30. The real purpose of the altar is to create among the Knights an interest in the future Pythian Home of New Jersey, to inspire them with a desire to provide ahead for those who through misfortune will not in their old days be able to provide for themselves. The visit of the altar to this city resulted in a hearty endorsement of the work.

Campers Entertain Friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Moorehouse, Mr. and Mrs. French and daughter, are enjoying the summer weather encamped on the side of the mountain. Yesterday a company of Plainfield friends visited them, those in the party being Mrs. Weston, Miss Grace Weston, Mrs. Cox and daughter, Mrs. Welch, Mrs. Fritz, Mrs. Leland, Miss Thompson, Mrs. Goodman and son, Charles. Mrs. Weston and Mrs. M. A. Grannatt entertained with readings of a comic nature. Refreshments were served under the tree and all joined in singing "Good Night, Ladies."

Fire in Potter Press Works.

A slight fire in the Potter Printing Press Works yesterday, was extinguished by the shop firemen without any assistance from the Plainfield fire department, which was not called.

Charles Staats, of Brooklyn, who has been spending several days here, has returned home.

—For Sale—1907 Maxwell, fully equipped, fine shape, $250. Thompson, 413 Park avenue. 8 12 2

An axe must needs be bright to hew, a spear be sharp to pierce;
To try to work when tools are dull is something really fierce.
Now here's a man both bright and sharp, who's gaining business fame;
What else could anyone expect, when Hugh Pierce is his name?

HUNDREDS OF CHILDREN ON K. OF C. OUTING

About fifteen hundred excursionists went to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove today in twenty-six cars, divided into two sections. The excursion was held by the Knights of Columbus, and included 200 Dunellen, 250 North Plainfield and 700 St. Mary's Sunday school children, who were given complimentary tickets by the lodge.

The excursionists gathered at the North avenue station at an early hour this morning armed with lunch boxes, umbrellas, parasols and other paraphenalia that helps to make an ideal day at the shore. The first section of fifteen cars was well filled and perfect order was insured by three policeman who were put on duty for the occasion. The second section was composed of fifteen cars, but four were dropped at Roselle. So far as is known there were but five "left overs," and this is considered an unusually small percentage, taking into account the size of the excursion.

The trip to the shore was made in good time, the excursionists arriving shortly before ten o'clock. From the station the Plainfielders flocked to the beach, where bathing was largely enjoyed. The other attractions of the shore resort were also patroized.

The committe in charge of the affair included John J. Kenney, Arthur Cannon, Francis J. Blatz, Andrew J. Kenney, and Joseph O'Keefe. The excursionists will leave the shore in time to arrive in this city tonight at about nine o'clock.

MASONIC BODY CONDUCTS FUNERAL FOR LATE MEMBER

The funeral services of Charles Yaeger were held from the late home on Webster place, at 2:30 o'clock, yesterday afternoon. Rev. Mory Bowers, curate of Grace church, officiated. The services were attended by Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M., of which M. Yaeger was a member for a great many years. There were numerous floral tributes, including four set pieces.

The Episcopal service was used at the house and at the grave the Masons took charge. W. G. Hutchcroft, as Master of the lodge, conducted the Masonic ritualistics service. The pall bearers were Charles Tallman, Edward Fluck, Stephen H. Schleif, Jacob Blimm, J. W. aVn Sickel, J. E. Flannery.

Fire Near Coal Yard.

Railroad ties piled against a shed near Wadley's coal yard at Madison avenue and the railroad caught fire from a locomotive spark last night at about 7 o'clock. Roland McCray, a colored boy, turned in an alarm from box 41 and the flames were extinguished with a chemical stream. The damage was slight.

G. O. P. OUTING TO BE A BIG AFFAIR

The annual outing of the G. O. P. of Union county at Rockaway, Saturday, promises to be one of the best ever held under the auspices of the county committee. In former years the objective point has been Witzel's Grove on Long Island, but the committee decided this year to make a change. The start will be made from Elizabethport about 10 o'clock, and the Plainfielders who contemplate going will leave here on the 8:25 train.

County Chairman F. H. Smith said last night that he thought fully four hundred of the "faithful ones" will make the trip. It is always a great day to discuss politics, at the start, but by the time the steamer gets in mid-stream politics are forgotten and the day is given over to a good time. Of course, all the county notables will be aboard and the lesser lights. There will be plenty to eat and drink and the committee in charge will see that everyone has a good time. At Rockaway a dinner will be served and on the return journey a trip about New York harbor will be enjoyed.

SWEDISH PEOPLE IN CHARGE OF SALVATION ARMY SERVICE.

Rev. Theodore Englund, pastor of the Swedish Evangelical church, conducted an interesting service at the Salvation Army tent, last night, assisted by the string band and choir from the Swedish church. Captain Hewitt welcomed the visitors heartily, speaking of his admiration for the Swedish people. After several songs in English, a greater part of the evening was taken up with the alternate singing by the Swedish choir and playing by the band. The selections were pleasing and were much appreciated by the congregation.

A duet was sung by the Misses Sadie and Julia Price, entitled "I'll Tell the Sweet Story of Grace." Rev. Mr. Englund took for his subject "Behold I Make All Things New," Revel 21: 5. He spoke of the religion of Christ being always new. One may start every day anew and need not carry burdens from day to day. He contrasted the affairs of the world and how they become old and wearisome whereas life in Christ is always fresh. Rev. Ora J. Shoop will speak at the tent tonight and the Misses Price will sing.

"In Dreamland" to Be Seen Here.

"In Dreamland," Emmet Devoy's comedy fantasy, will have its premier at the Plainfield theatre, Wednesday night, August 25. After a few one night stands an engagement will be played at the Park theatre, Philadelphia, and a tour of the Pacific coast and return will follow.

—Night School is in session now—Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, from 7:30 to 9:30. Tuition $4.00 per month. Special classes in English for young men and young women employed during the day. Drake Business College.  8 11 tf

INCREASE IN TAX RATE

Eight Point Advance in County Rate Probable and School Tax Also Higher.

LOCAL INCREASE IS EXPECTED.

Estimates Based on Partial, Unrevised Assessors' Reports Show Two Point Increase for City.

Estimates based on the tax assessors' books already turned in to the tax office, completed by "round number" estimates by the two assessors who have not finished their work, show that there will probably be an increase of two points in the local tax rate, which by this sort of computation will make it $1.51.

The county rate will probably show an increase of eight points on the .29 of last year, because of the fact that much more money is to be raised for county purposes. The appropriation of $40,000 for roads is a big item in this increased county budget. The State School tax will be increased one point. It was .21 last year.

The approximate raise of two points on the city figures will bring the local rate up to .92. This local increase of two points is of course based upon the unproved books of the assessors, and is subject to revision by the County Board of Taxation. The increase in the school tax is a certainty, and there is little probability of much change in the county rate increase of eight points.

All but the books of two assessors from this city have been returned to the County Board of Taxation, and there are several books from other parts of the county that have not yet reached Elizabeth. The county board is well under way with its work and it is generally understood that assessments are levied subject to revision of the county board, although as a rule not many changes are made, at least in the matter of reduction. Any taxpayer is privileged to make a complaint to the county taxing authorities, but this must be done in writing. As yet no official figures have been announced, and probably will not be for several days.

WILBUR F. BARRELL DIES IN BROOKLYN.

Wilbur F. Barrell, a former Plainfielder, and an old time minstrel, one of the survivors of that celebrated band of Philadelphia fun makers, Carncross' Minstrels, who in their Eleventh street theatre gained a national reputation, died Wednesday at his home, 346 Gates avenue, Brooklyn. He was sixty-nine years old.

Mr. Barrell joined the Carncross minstrels when he was a young man and remained with the company until fifteen years ago, when he retired. During his stage career he was associated with Francis Wilson, Eddie Foy and William Emerson. He left a son and four daughters, one of the latter being a member of the "Beauty Spot" company at the Herald Square Theatre.

Mr. Barrell lived in Plainfield for several years and was a well known figure in the events of his time here, and was very popular.

Netherwood Services Tonight.

The Young Peoples' Society of the Monroe Avenue church will take charge of the evening service at Netherwood Fresh Air Camp tonight. Mansfield Smith will be the speaker, and the string and vocal music on the program will be the special feature. The children and mothers enjoy the music so much that the societies feel repaid for their efforts in this line. The new songs the children hear are picked up in a surprising manner, and are remembered from year to year.

Victims of Typhoid.

Mrs. Robert Kenny, of West Fourth street, went to Pittsburg this morning, called there by the illness of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Kenny. The latter were married about six weeks ago, and when they returned from their wedding trip Mrs. Kenny was taken ill with typhoid fever and is still very sick. Mr. Kenny was stricken yesterday with the same disease. Mrs. Robert Kenny has gone to help in nursing the sick ones back to health.

Hope Excursion Saturday.

In commenting on the Scotch Plains-High Bridge game at the latter place, Saturday, the Clinton Democrat remarks: "Don't think for a moment that that bunch from Scotch Plains can't hit. The way they slammed the ball was discouraging at times, but they could not hit it when they most wanted to. * * * Eleven hits off a pitcher like McLaughlin shows that the High Bridgers were slamming the ball some, too.

The Plainfield A. C. will meet the strong North End A. C., of Elizabeth, here on Saturday. Slocum will do the pitching for Plainfield and Mooney, a new find by Manager Pope, will do the receiving.

"Cliff" Randolph seems to be holding his own with the Binghamton team, of the New York State League. Although a majority of the games in which he has pitched have not been victories, he has done good work. He is surely minor league material.

Nolan, who is now a fixture with the Plainfield Baseball Club, is playing his position in the field in faultless style and can always be depended upon for several hits.

It was a surprise to Plainfield that Rahway should get away with that game last week, although the latter team has always been more or less troublesome.

Considering the fact that the Y. M. C. A. team has been playing in hard luck, Manager Listman's aggregation has been more than holding its own this season. The boys have engaged in a number of contests where the scores have been big, but with a fair chance have managed to win out.

Mooney, who is now doing the catching for Plainfield A. C., is one of the best in his class in this vicinity. He formerly played with Scotch Plains before Alberts took the position. Manager Pope saw Mooney play one game and decided at once to try and land him for his team. His work is of the best, and he can throw to bases like a flash.

The New Brunswick team will meet the Plainfield Baseball Club on Crescent Oval, Saturday, and that means a fast contest from the start. Ortlieb will be depended upon to hold down "Dave" Driscoll's aggregation and it is said that the New Brunswick boys will have McKenna in their lineup for pitching honors. He has pitched here before and was formerly with Manager Daab's Hoboken team. He is a good one and Manager Dorflinger's boys will have to go some to beat him.

GOLF.

For the first time in four years the New Brunswick Golf team met defeat on their own course Saturday at the hands of the crack Plainfield team by the score of 11-9. The match was one of the closest in years and the scoring of 6 and 4 points respectively by C. B. Morgan and H. D. Hibbard against A. K. Kirkpatrick and R. A. Smith, of the local team, decided the match as this accounted for 10 of the 11 points. Tracey Smith was on the top of his game making the course in 76 strokes beating Wadsworth the best of the Hillside players 4 points. N. N. Williamson and C. A. McCormick were "there with the goods" also but were unable to counterbalance the scoring of the two Plainfield men. M. A. Wilson was defeated by 1 hole, after a close match by W. L. Glenney, Plainfield's No. 2 man.

Another match will be played between these two teams in September on the Plainfield course. This breaks the local golf team string of nine straight victories. The last five team matches were won by the local team last year and the first four of this season's matches resulted in victories for the local team.

KILLS BURGLAR IN CLARKSBORO POSTOFFICE

Surprising a burglar at work in the postoffice at Clarksboro, about four miles below Woodbury, in Gloucester county, early yesterday morning, Isaac T. Haines, the postmaster, shot and instantly killed the man with a double-barreled shotgun.

The intruder was Harry Mullen, forty-five years old, who was recently released from the Woodbury jail, and who had served time on several occasions for burglary.

A jury was empaneled by Coroner De Groff a few hours after the shooting, and a verdict was found of justifiable homicide. Prosecutor Rogers, of Gloucester county, will make an investigation, but it is probable that no further action will be taken.

Haines was aroused about 3 o'clock by a burglar alarm. Arming himself with his shotgun, he crept downstairs and saw a man bending over the cash till behind the counter. He opened fire and discharged both barrels at the intruder. One barrel took effect in the man's back and the other in the back of his head. Death followed instantly.

The shooting aroused the village and the dead man was found to be Harry Mullen, who had no home, but who was well known in the county. Mullen had been released from the Gloucester jail on July 8, after serving a three months' sentence for robbing the phosphate works of Isaac P. Thomas, at Paulsboro.

About a week ago the home of Sheriff Thomas Wilson, adjoining the jail in Woodbury, was entered and a coat belonging to Charles Wilson, father of the sheriff and warden of the prison, was taken, together with a cap belonging to the sheriff. The intruder also made a midnight lunch from the refrigerator. The stolen coat was worn by Mullen last night when he was killed.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Lake and children, of this city, are visiting Mrs. Lake's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Sharp, of Annandale.

THEY BEAT THE SCHEDULE

THEY LOOKED LIKE REGULARS.

Assist Manasquan Firemen—Fun on "K" Street—May Stay Over Sunday.

Sea Girt, N. J., Tuesday.

The Second Regiment marched into Camp Fort today at 9 a. m., three hours ahead of the schedule time. Every member of Co. K was with the company, a record few of the other companies can brag about.

If the Plainfield people could have seen the company when it marched before Governor Fort and were given the command "eyes right," they would have cause to feel proud of Company K. As one of the officers expressed it: "They look just like the regulars," and that expresses it fully.

The march from Farmingdale was the most thoroughly enjoyed of the "hike" to the State Camp. At 4:15 a. m. the entire regiment was on its way, and the men were greatly enthused in the novelty of the early morning march. It was not as hot as on the previous days and the men were well rested.

Lieut. Littell quickly put up the "shower" at the pump, and the men lost no time in making good use of same. Company K has the only shower bath arrangement on the Company streets. This is greatly appreciated by the men in the ranks.

Dinner was not ready until nearly 2 o'clock when the men partook of fried butterfish, coffee, and bread. The fish tasted fine.

A large fire at Manasquan, which was plainly visible, furnished the camp the only excitement of the day. Battery B, of Camden, which is part of the Second Regiment, was instrumental in putting out the fire as they formed a bucket brigade and saved the house from destruction. The barn and small buildings were entirely consumed.

When the Manasquan Fire Department arrived they laid a line of new hose. The Battery B men accidentally stepped on same in their rush and one of the fire department called out: "Don't dirty that hose. I have strict orders to keep it clean." This amused the entire crowd.

There is a rumor that the entire Regiment will stay over until Sunday so all the men may get another chance to get on the higher rifle ranges. A vote of all men will be taken and it looks as if they will decide to stay.

Corporal Maning is taking good care of the privates in his tent. He has a small "country grocery" in his suit case and is handing out salmon, cheese crackers and olive, etc. (Quartermaster Apgar will be after him if he keeps this up).

Private Ferris Pearsall is a quiet and gentlemanly as ever, he is thinking of buying a large plot of ground near camp and divide same into building lots, then sell them to the members of the Company.

Private Carter is doing a large business as the "Company" barber.

Sergt. O. R. Pierson has had a notice served on him by the other Sergeants that if he don't throw his old pipe away he will be tied to the pump until he makes up his mind and promises to purchase a new one.

The postoffice department at Westfield will be disorganized as their champion walker, Corporal Winter has sore feet.

Company C, of Elizabeth, is called the "cold feet" company, as for two days their haversacks were put on their wagon. There are several other "cold feet" companies coming from the western end of central New Jersey.

Private Ed Horn reported for duty and is crying his eyes out, as the other men will not speak to him on account of not doing any of the hike.

—Corporal.

TARIFF SESSION'S COST.

Including Printing, It Is Estimated as Between $800,000 and $900,000.

It is estimated that the cost of holding the special session of Congress to pass the tariff bill was at least $500,000. This does not include the increased expenses of the Government Printing Office in printing the hearings before the Ways and Means Committee, the various reports and documents, the Congressional Record, the tariff bill in its various stages and the Payne law as finally enacted. Accurate information as to the additional expense incurred by the Government Printing Office is not available, but it is estimated to be as much as $300,000 or $400,000.

The principal item of expense of the session was mileage. The mileage account of Representatives was $154,000 ,and of Senators $47,000. Extra pay for employes of Congress involved an expenditure of nearly $100,000. For miscellaneous expenses of the session an appropriation of $25,000 was provided in the urgent deficiency bill.

Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Williams, of West Front street, and their two sons, Clifford and Howard, have returned from a week's outing spent at Millington and Stirling.

CIVIL SERVICE RECORDS SHOW 1189 APPOINTMENTS

Some amusement has been caused about the State house by the statement, which recently was current, that the work of the Civil Service Commission has thus far resulted in the appointment of just one person to office. This inaccuracy is exposed by reference to the record of appointments which have actually been made. Omitting some hundreds in the labor class, for which no examinations were held, there were down to July 1 of this year, or in the first nine months of the operation of the law, no fewer than 1,189 appointments to places in the classified civil service under the provisions of the civil service law and as results of examinations conducted by the commission.

Of this number 843 were in the State service, the remainder being in the services of five municipalities which have adopted the law. The 843 State appointments comprised competitive places in seventeen different repartments and institutions of the State government at Trenton, Rahway, Morris Plains, Kearny, Vineland and Montclair. Among them were clerks, stenographers, typewriters, book-keepers, firemen engineers, guards, supervisors and others. The non-competitive appointments, which were also made after official examinations, were in nineteen different departments and institutions of the State service and included a great variety of occupations.

In the various municipal services competitive places were filled in ten departments or institutions in Newark, nine in Essex county, two in Jersey City and four in Bayonne. Non-competitive municipal appointments after examination were made in eight departments or institutions in Newark, five in Essex county, one in Jersey City and one in Bayonne.

A recapitulation of the various activities of the Civil Service Commission down to July 1 comprises the following items:

Competitive examinations held, 88; candidates examined, 1,672; candidates accepted and put on eligible lists, 636; candidates rejected, 999; not yet passed upon, 37; competitive appointments made, 94; non-competitive appointments made, 1,095; dismissals from service, 101; reinstatements of men wrongfully dismissed, 10.

FINAL RECEPTION AT SUMMER CAPITOL

Governor and Mrs. John Franklin Fort gave the final reception last night of a brilliant series of social functions which have marked the State encampment at the "Little White House," Sea Girt. The verandas of the cottage and the grounds adjoining were filled with guests.

Governor and Mrs. Fort was assisted in receiving by Miss Fort, General Sadler, Colonel Colgate, Lieutenant Colonels Schauffleur and Condit and Lieutnenant Nelson B. Gaskell. Many of the prominent society folk of the shore resorts and others from Trenton, Newark and nearby cities were in attendance.

All the officers of the Second New Jersey regiment, led by Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan, were on the veranda, as were also General Dennis F. Collins, of the First Brigade, and the members of his staff. A feature of the function was the fine concert which Winkler's Band, of Trenton, stationed on Robin's Knoll, adjoining the cottage, gave during the evening.

The clicking of typewriters will not be heard in the State Capitol at Trenton today, neither will the wheels of the various departments of the State House revolve at usual speed, for the pretty typewriter girls and the crelical force are all to be at Sea Girt as guests of Governor Fort.

A large throng is expected to witness the final review of the season, and special excursion trains from Trenton, New Brunswick and Elizabeth will take down a big crowd to see the boys of the Central New Jersey regiment. Preceding the review Governor Fort will hold a public reception at the cottage.

The great feature today will be the annual review of the Second regiment, under the command of Col. Dungan. He and his officers are anxious to make a fine display, as it will be the last Governor's day of the season. Battery B, light artillery, of Camden, under Captain Samuel G. Barnard, will also take part in the review this afternoon.

SUCCESSFUL NEGRO FARMERS.

The biggest negro farm in South Carolina is in Marion county, according to the Columbia Sun. It used to be Tracy Alford, but Tracy has invested in town property and cut his farm down. Marion yet holds the belt regardless of the clams of Sumter and Orangeburg counties, and even of William Murry, of Wedgefield, who has 180 acres in cotton and will make far over a hundred bales, and even our friend Bob Rabb, of Cross Hill, who makes 100 bales a year.

Butler General, a quiet, unassuming looking negro, who lives about five miles from Marion Courthouse, is truly the biggest negro farmer in South Carolina. General has 200 acres in cotton in one level field without a flow or a wash-out, and 100 acres in another lot, 300 acres in cotton as fine as any man's from which General says he will gather 280 bales and he expects more. This is his own land, for which he would not take $75 an acre.

It is one unbroken field of as fine farm land, level and all stumped, as Aycock or any white farmer owns and it's paid for. Cost him years ago $25 and $30 and acre. He has 200 acres of valuable timber land and several hundred acres on his other places, about one thousand acres in all. He runs eighteen plows on his plantation and used 140 tons of guano, costing him about $2,000. His farm supplies cost $3,000, making his outlay $5,000.

General is an open-hearted, progressive negro. He has a church and a school house on his place and gets all the labor he wants to work his farm. Anderson General, brother, works one of the plantations, keeping it up to the acre mark. Both the Generals are good, Christian-hearted men, lovers of the acre and loyal citizens.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

WOMAN FOR SCHOOL BOARD.

Members of Montclair Republican Club Ask Selection of Mrs. Greene.

Montclair women need not become militant suffragettes to win the right to vote, for at a meeting of the Upper Montclair Republican Club, when Mrs. Sarah E Greene was proposed for membership on the Montclair Board of Education, many of the male voters took up the cudgel for them so vigorously that the meeting was one of the most tumultuous the club has ever held. Mrs. Greene, who is the wife of Frederick D. Greene, was proposed for the school board to succeed Marcelon R. Wilson, by Irving Parker Mills. E. R. Tillinghast was another champion of Mrs. Greene.

Some of the Upper Montclair Republicans, however, were opposed to the idea of having a female director represent the north end of the town, and when a motion to indorse Mrs. Greene was put by the chairman, E. R. Mott, it was voted down. A committee, however, was appointed to confer with the First Ward Democratic Club as to the advisability of naming a woman for the office. If an agreement can be reached with the Democratic Club, of which Edward W. Townsend, who was a candidate for Congress last fall, is a member, Mrs. Greene will probably be the nominee of both organizations and will be elected without opposition, unless the anti-suffragettes put up a candidate later.

If Mrs. Greene is chosen she will be the first woman to serve on the Montclair Board of Education. Edward Madison, secretary of the Board of Education, said yesterday that a woman's presence in the board might accomplish several reforms, one of which would probably be the stopping of smoking by the directors while in session.

The Bayonne Opera House, at Avenue C and 26th street, Bayonne, which was erected two years ago, at an expense of more than $200,000, was sold at public auction yesterday afternoon by George Carragan, receiver for the Bayonne Amusement Company, owner of the building, together with a twelve-year lease of the Bayonne theatre, at Broadway and 23d street.

The purchaser for both the opera house and the theatre lease was former Recorder Hyman Lazarus, and the price was $155,080. He is one of the heaviest stockholders in the company.

PAYROLL $900,000 A DAY.

Pittsburg's industrial payroll has reached $900,000 a day, with the prospect that it will touch the $1,000,000 mark before the end of August. There are 250,000 men employed in the different mills in the Pittsburg district, and there is room for 25,000 more if the mill owners can find the proper kind of labor. Coke laborers are especially scarce.

As an evidence of the floodtide of prosperity the banks which supply the larger payrolls for the industries have requested the mill owners to give them several days' notice before paydays of the amount of money they will require.

At Proctor's.

There will be an entire change of bill at Proctor's theatre today, and it is said that it will be even better than the one offered during the first three days. The vaudeville numbers will include St. James and Dacre, in a big laughing hit, "Same Old Story;" the Waldon Brothers, "Emperors of German Comedy," very good; Maud De Laura, "the Physical Culture Girl," graceful and charming, and Wilbur & Harrington, clever dancing comedy pair. The films d'art will offer some interesting and amusing sketches.

AUTOMOBILE TRIALS FOR LONG BRANCH

Sanction was granted yesterday by the American Automobile Association to a committee representing the Board of Trade of Long Branch, for a series of speed tests on Ocean avenue, in that city, on Saturday, August 21. The arrangements for the trials were hastily made, but are now complete.

The city authorities of Long Branch some days ago gave permission to the Board of Trade for the closing of Ocean avenue to ordinary traffic during the hours required for the contests. Today the entry blanks will be printed and will be distributed from the local office of Montefiore G. Kahn, at Long Branch.

The trials will be part of the program arranged for athletic day at the New Jersey resort. Undoubtedly they will form an attractive part of the program, as a large number of high powdered automobiles are owned in and about Long Branch and the amateur element among the speeders will be well represented. Events for amateurs as well as professionals will be carded. The prizes will be in cash, bronze statuary and silver cups, the total running well up to $5,000.

One and three-quarter miles of Ocean avenue, an absolute straightaway, will be used. The tests will all be at one mile, the remainder of the run being for the purpose of getting up speed.

Oil has been applied to the road several times since last May, and at present the surface is in perfect condition for fast work, in the opinion of experts, who were taken to Long Branch from New York to make an examination.

Ten events, classified according to A. A. A. rules, will be listed. The committee in charge, consisting, in addition to Mr. Kahn, of Morton R. Rothschild, Failing Baruch, Charles Lee Bowler, Jr., and Harold A. Content, is prepared to place additional events on the card if warranted by the entries, which promise to be very numerous.

CATHOLIC SOCIETIES NAME OFFICERS.

At the closing session of the American Federation of Catholic Societies, held in Pittsburg, yesterday, the following officers were elected: President, E. G. Feeney of Brooklyn; vice presidents, J. B. Celkers, Newark; Thomas P. Flynn, Chicago; G. W. Stronger, St. Paul; Henry Wessling, Boston; J. J. Hynes, Buffalo, and Joseph W. Conroy, Cincinnati; national secretary, Anthony Matre, St. Louis; national treasurer, Mrs. Elizabeth Rodgers, Chicago. New Orleans was decided upon as the place of meeting in 1910.

Great impetus has been given a movement to erect a bronze monument on the battlefield of Gettysburg to the Rev. William Corby, who was the chaplain of the Irish Brigade throughout the Civil War. He was later first assistant general for the Order of the Holy Cross in all parts of the world.

Pope Pius X., through the Papal Secretary of State, Cardinal Merry del Val, sent his greeting to the convention yesterday. The greeting came in the form of a cable message to Bishop J. F. Regis Canevin.

DISTURBER OF MEETING IS DECLARED INSANE.

Law Judge Mills Tuesday afternoon pronounced Charles W. Berking, of Chatham, insane and incable of managing his property. The man will be taken to the State Hospital at Morris Plains. A hearing was given Berking on a complaint that he was dangerous to the public on account of his mental condition. It was stated that he had caused considerable annoyance to people in Chatham.

On occasions he held up several automobiles and then again went to the council meeting at Chatham and disturbed its proceedings. His boarding mistress, Mrs. Mary Long, told the court that Berking once attacked her unawares and threw her downstairs.

Dr. James Griswold, of Morristown, declared that he had examined Berking and believed him mentally unbalanced. He thought the man should be sent away, and stated that his mental troubles were not incurable.

VENDER OF BIBLES FREED BY RECORDER.

"It seems to me an injustice to compel me to spend a whole night in a cell for selling the Word of God on the street," Aaron Koffman, of New York, told Recorder Carroll when arraigned yesterday in Paterson, on a charge of peddling without a license.

Koffman was disposing of a batch of Old Testaments when arrested.

"The officer did his duty," the recorder told the prisoner, "but I will make an exception in your case and suspend sentence on condition that you go back to New York. They need the Word of God down there more than we do."

Koffman took the first train.

F. Morris, of Vineland.

What promises to be an interest-legal contest was brought into being at the meeting of Audobon Borough Council last evening, when that body refused to honor bills approximating $2,000 as issued by the J. Boyd Sylvester Construction Company of Philadelphia. The Sylvester company was awarded the contract for grading a number of the borough highways at the May session of council, and developments since that time indicate that there are two different contracts in existence.

A new value for beach front in Chelsea was set yesterday, when it cropped out that agreement had been made to pay $800 per front foot for land located between Morris and Chelsea avenues. The record price was made known through a report from the county clerk's office at May's Landing, showing that on August 4 an agreement to sell the property of Jeremiah H. Brode, covering an entire square of beach front, to William H. Steehle, of Philadelphia, for the consideration of $200,000, was recorded.

Mrs. Rulif Swackhamer and daughter, Mrs. Emma DuBois, of this city, are now visiting Miss Bertha Swackhamer at Whitehouse for the rest of the month.

PERSISTENT BURGLAR AN EIGHT-YEAR-OLD BOY.

Too young to be handled by the police, and released in the custody of his mother, eight-year-old Willie Hulse in the Central Police Court yesterday admitted that he has been burglarizing the grocery store of Glenn Brothers, at Broad and Perry streets, Trenton, systematically for several weeks past. The boy also confessed that his little sister had helped him in his burglaries, standing guard outside the store to warn him of the approach of any one.

For several weeks the Glenns have missed small articles, such as cakes and candies, from their store. Lately they noticed that the cash register was often tampered with, considerable amounts of change being taken. Monday night one of the clerks was left in the store after closing time. His watch was rewarded by the appearance of the little Hulse boy, who came from the cellar. The clerk seized him and held him until he could notify a policeman, who took him into custody.

The boy told Police Justice Harris today that he has been getting into the store by climbing through a cellar window, and that his sister stood guard outside. The girl was with him Monday night, but ran away when she looked in the store and saw her brother in the grasp of a clerk. The Glenns would not press the charge against the boy, and Police Justice Harris allowed him to go in the custody of his mother. The attention of Probation Officer Edmunds was called to the case.

SOME THINGS THAT ARE NICE TO EAT.

Odd that the things we like are always bad for us. Why, for instance, should old bread be more wholesome than new? The latter's reputation is simply shocking, and the excellence of the stale loaf is preached in every household. Yet does bread fresh from the oven actually produce injurious qualities which it loses in a day or two, or is it only our fancy? asks "Rosaline" in Black and White. Hard-boiled eggs, when hot and not included in pie or curry, are dangerous to tackle; but when cold and savory tit-bits on toast one may eat them with impunity. Of course, plum pudding, salmon, all nice eatables, have a bad character, and sometimes one speculates if it may not be due to their very niceness and had its origin in bygone Puritanism.

No doubt, good people once believed it chastened the spirit to deny the flesh the delicacies it desired; then sense of personal virtue waxed stronger after a meal of crusts and lentils than after one of turtle and fat capon, and it is not impossible that in the course of time we have confused physical with moral well-being.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 15, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—"Pilgrim's Progress" series.—VIII. Two valleys.—Ps. xxii, 1-8; Mic. vii, 7, 8; Rom. viii, 35-39.

Having sojourned in the Palace Plentiful and been instructed and having "put on the whole armor of God," Christian resumed his journey. He was accompanied part of the way by Discretion, Piety, Charity and Prudence, good companions for Christians at all time. These inhabitants of the palace accompanied him down to the foot of the hill upon which the beautiful palace was located. Supplying him with food and drink, they returned and left him to contiuue alone.

His first experiences following these events consisted in passing through two valleys, the valley of Humiliation and the valley of the Shadow of Death. In these valleys he met with serious difficulties and dangers. The Christian life is not always an easy one. Temptations assail us within and without. The pathway is often narrow and difficult of following, and all along the way we must trust in the strength of God and "follow where He leadeth." This was what Christian did, and in doing so he overcame. "Who is he that overcometh the world but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?" "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." Nothing "can separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus."

1. The valley of Humiliation. No sooner had Christian entered this valley than he met "a foul fiend coming over the field to meet him. His name was Apollyon." Apollyon represented an evil spirit who tries to disturb the faith of men, to devour their souls. Christian was alarmed, but met the enemy. An argument arose as to whether Christian belonged to the kingdom of Destruction or the kingdom of Christ. At last they entered upon a severe struggle. But Christian put his strength in God and won the victory. The temptation here described refers to an inward rather than an outward one. Bunyan passed through the most dreadful mental and spiritual temptations, far beyond what the average Christian does; hence his strong presentation of inward spiritual temptations and conflicts, which may not, from want of experience, be fully understood by all Christians. Yet we have our inward doubts and depressions. Sometimes God's providences produce in us such a frame of mind. We ask why and get no definite answer. But God will keep us and strengthen us for the battle if, like Christian, we put our trust in Him.

2. The valley of the Shadow of Death. From the first valley Christian passed into the second. Some who had turned back urged Christian to do so, telling him of their awful experience in the dark valley. But it was in the way to the celestial city, so undismayed he went boldly on. That some who start on the heavenly way and turn back should not cause us to do so. Fidelity unto the end is the only assurance of eternal life. "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee the crown of life." "No cross, no crown." The valley of the Shadow of Death was a place of awful experiences. The pathway was narrow and dark. "The mouth of hell stood hard by the wayside." There were flames of fire, fierce noises. He heard one singing, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the Shadow of Death I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me." At this he was comforted. He prayed unto God in his trouble, and God delivered him. Valleys of darkness beset our way. Despair seems to settle upon us. But let us not fear. God will be with us. And if God be with us who can be against us?

BIBLE READINGS.

Ex. v, 15-23; Ps. xxiii, 27; cvii, 1-8; Jer. ii, 6; Heb. iii, 12-19; Eph. vi, 10-18; Rom. viii, 20-23; I John ii, 8-11; v, 1-7; Rev. ii, 10.

International C. E. Headquarters.

The purchase of two lots of land at the corner of Longwood and Huntington avenues, in Boston, by the United Society of Christian Endeavor has assured the erection of a building for new international headquarters for the society. The two parcels contain 13,044 square feet and are assessed on a valuation of $19,323.25. A five story commodious building to cost $200,000 or more is planned. It will contain offices of the United Society of Christian Endeavor of America and the World's Christian Endeavor union. There will be accommodations for the different branches of the society's work, including the publishing house. The upper floors of the building will be divided into halls and offices. It is the expectation of the officers that the building will be begun in the fall, and suggestion is being considered of having the wood and stone used in its erection come from all parts of the world. It has also been suggested that some of the rooms be furnished and named after some of the countries interested in the work. In the subscription for shares of the building fund at $5 a share California has so far taken more shares than any other state in the west. Austria has sent $1,000, and the following have subscribed: Marshall and Caroline islands, Norway, Denmark, Germany, Spain, Portugal, Italy, France and Russia. It is known that $100,000 is devoted to the cause in the wills of people interested in the society. The trustees have $50,000 in hand and $30,000 in pledges.

From Far Norway.

All Norwegian Endeavorers send Dr. Clark blessings and thanks.

Whispering Smith

By Frank H. Spearman

Copyright, 1906, by Chas. Scribner's Sons.

"I know you would; I know it. But I'm paid for this sort of thing and you are not, and I advise no man to take unnecessary chances. If you all want to stay, why, stay; but don't ride ahead of the line, and let me do all the talking. See that your guns are loose—you'll never have but one chance to pull, and don't pull till you're ready. The albino is riding in the middle now, isn't he? And a little back, playing for a quick drop. Watch him. Who is that on the right? Can it be George Seagrue? Well, this is a bunch. And I guess Karg is with them."

Holding their horses to a slow walk the two parties gingerly approached each other. When the Cache riders halted the railroad riders halted; and when the three rode the five rode, but the three rode with absolute alignment and acted as one, while Whispering Smith had trouble in holding his men back until the two lines were 50 feet apart.

By this time the youngest of the cowboys had steadied and was thinking hard. Whispering Smith halted in perfect order and sitting their horses as if they were riding parade, the horses ambling at a snail's pace, the Cache riders advanced in the sunshine like one man. When Du Sang and his companions reined up, less than 12 feet separated the two lines.

Du Sang, blinking, spoke first: "Which of you fellows is heading this round-up?"

"I am heading the round-up," said Whispering Smith. "Why? Have you got some of your cattle?"

The two men spoke as quietly as school-teachers. Whispering Smith's expression in no way changed, except that as he spoke he lifted his eyebrows a little more than usual.

Du Sang looked at him closely as he went on: "What kind of a way is this to treat anybody? To ride into a valley like this and drive a man's cows away from his door without notice or papers? Is your name Smith?"

"My name is Smith; yours is Du Sang. Yes, I'll tell you, Du Sang. I carry an inspector's card from the Mountain Stock association—do you want to see it? When we get these cattle to the Door, any man in the Cache may come forward and prove his property. I shall leave instructions to that effect when we go, for I want you to go to Medicine Bend with me, Du Sang, as soon as convenient, and the men that are with me will finish the round-up."

"What do you want me for? There's no papers out against me, is there?"

"No, but I'm an officer, Du Sang. I'll see to the papers; I want you for murder."

"So they tell me. Well, you're after the wrong man. But I'll go with you; I don't care about that."

"Neither do I, Du Sang; and as you have some friends along, I won't break up the party. They may come, too."

"What for?"

"For stopping a train at Tower W Saturday night."

The three men looked at one another and laughed.

Du Sang with an oath spoke again: "The men you want are in Canada by this time. I can't speak for my friends; I don't know whether they want to go or not. As far as I am concerned, I haven't killed anybody that I know of. I suppose you'll pay my expenses back?"

"Why, yes, Du Sang, if you were coming back I would pay your expenses; but you are not coming back. You are riding down Williams Cache for the last time; you've ridden down it too many times already. This round-up is especially for you. Don't deceive yourself; when you ride with me out of the Cache, you won't come back."

Du Sang laughed, but his blinking eyes were as steady as a cat's. It did not escape Whispering Smith's notice that the mettlesome horses ridden by the outlaws were continually working around to the right of his party. He spoke amiably to Karg: "If you can't manage that horse, Karg, I can. Play fair. It looks to me as if you and Du Sang were getting ready to run for it, and leave George Seagrue to shoot his way through alone."

Du Sang, with some annoyance, intervened: "That's all right; I'll go with you. I'd rather see your papers, but if you're Whispering Smith it's all right. I'm due to shoot out a little game some time with you at Medicine Bend."

"Any time, Du Sang; only don't let your hand wabble next time. It's too close to your gun now to pull right."

"Well, I told you I was going to come, didn't I? And I'm coming—now!"

With the last word he whipped out his gun. There was a crash of bullets. Questioned once by McCloud and reproached for taking chances, Whispering Smith answered simply: "I have to take chances," he said. "All I ask is an even break."

But Kennedy had said there was no such thing as an even break with Whispering Smith. A few men in a generation amuse, baffle, and mystify other men with an art based on the principle that the action of the hand is quicker than the action of the eye. With Whispering Smith the drawing of a revolver and the art of throwing his shots instantly from wherever his hand rested was pure sleight-of-hand. To a dexterity so fatal he added a judgment that had not failed when confronted with deceit. From the moment that Du Sang first spoke, Smith, convinced that he meant to shoot his way through the line, waited only for the moment to come. When Du Sang's hand moved like a flash of light, Whispering Smith, who was holding his coat lapels in his hands, struck his pistol from the scabbard over his heart and threw a bullet at him before he could fire, as a conjurer throws a vanishing coin into the air. Spurring his horse fearfully as he did so, he dashed at Du Sang and Karg, leaped his horse through their line and, wheeling at arm's length, shot again. Bill Dancing jumped in his saddle, swayed, and toppled to the ground. Stormy Gorman gave a single whoop at the spectacle and, with his two cowboys at his heels, fled for life.

More serious than all, Smith found himself among three fast revolvers, working from an unmanageable horse. The beast tried to follow the fleeing cowboys, and when faced sharply about showed temper. The trained horses of the outlaws stood like statues, but Smith had to fight with his horse bucking at every shot. He threw his bullets as best he could first over one shoulder and then the other, and used the last cartridge in his revolver with Du Sang, Seagrue, and Karg shooting at him every time they could fire without hitting one another.

It was not the first time the Williams Cache gang had sworn to get him and had worked together to do it, but for the first time it looked as if they might do it. A single chance was left to Whispering Smith for his life, and with his coat slashed with bullets, he took it. For an instant his life hung on the success of a trick so appallingly awkward that a clever man might have failed in turning it. If his rifle should play free in the scabbard as he reached for it, he could fall to the ground, releasing it as he plunged from the saddle, and make a fight on his feet. If the rifle failed to release he was a dead man. To so narrow an issue are the cleverest combinations sometimes brought by chance. He dropped his empty revolver, ducked like a mud-hen on his horse's neck, threw back his leg, and, with all the precision he could summon, caught the grip of his muley in both hands. He made his fall heavily to the ground, landing on his shoulder. But as he keeled from the saddle the last thing that rolled over the saddle, like the flash of a porpoise fin, was the barrel of the rifle, secure in his hands. Karg, on horseback, was already bending over him, revolver in hand, but the shot was never fired. A 30-30 bullet from the ground knocked the gun into the air and tore every knuckle from Karg's hand. Du Sang spurred in from the right. A rifle-slug like an ax at the root caught him through the middle. His fingers stiffened. His six-shooter fell to the ground and he clutched his side. Seagrue, ducking low, put spurs to his horse, and Whispering Smith, covered with dust, rose on the battlefield alone.

Hats, revolvers and coats lay about him. Face downward, the huge bulk of Bill Dancing was stretched motionless in the road. Karg, crouching beside his fallen horse, held up the bloody stump of his gun hand, and Du Sang, 50 yards away, reeling like a drunken man in his saddle, spurred his horse in an aimless circle. Whispering Smith, running softly to the side of his own trembling animal, threw himself into the saddle, and, adjusting his rifle sights as the beast plunged down the draw, gave chase to Seagrue.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The Death of Du Sang.

Whispering Smith, with his horse in a lather, rode slowly back 20 minutes later with Seagrue disarmed ahead of him. The deserted battle-ground was alive with men. Stormy Gorman, hot for blood, had come back, captured Karg, and begun swearing all over again, and Smith listened with amiable surprise while he explained that seeing Dancing killed, and not being able to tell from Whispering Smith's peculiar tactics which side he was shooting at, Gorman and his companions had gone for help. While they angrily surrounded Karg and Seagrue, Smith slipped from his horse where Bill Dancing lay, lifted the huge head from the dust, and tried to turn the giant over. A groan greeted the attempt.

"Bill, open your eyes! Why would you not do as I wanted you to?" he murmured bitterly to himself. A second groan answered him. Smith called for water, and from a canteen drenched the pallid forehead, talking softly meanwhile; but his efforts to restore consciousness were unavailing. He turned to where two of the cowboys had dragged Karg to the ground and three others had their old companion Seagrue in hand. While two held huge revolvers within six inches of his head, a third was adjusting a rope-knot under his ear.

Whispering Smith became interested. "Hold on!" said he, mildly, "what is loose? What are you going to do?"

"We're going to hang these fellows," answered Stormy, with a volley of hair-raising imprecations.

"Oh, no! Just put them on horses under guard."

"That's what we're going to do," exclaimed the foreman. "Only we're going to run 'em over to those cottonwoods and drive the horses out from under 'em. Stand still, you tow-headed cow thief!" he cried, slipping the noose up tight on George Seagrue's neck.

"See here," returned Whispering Smith, showing some annoyance, "you may be joking, but I am not. Either do as I tell you or release those men."

"Well, I guess we are not joking very much. You heard me, didn't you?" demanded Stormy, angrily. "We are going to string these damned critters up right here in the draw on the first tree."

Whispering Smith drew a pocket-knife and walked to Flat Nose, slit the rope around his neck, pushed him out of the circle, and stood in front of him. "You can't play horse with my prisoners," he said, curtly. "Get over here, Karg. Come, now, who is going to walk in first? You act like a schoolboy, Gorman."

Hard words and a wrangle followed, but Smith did not change expression, and there was a back-down. "Have you fellows let Du Sang get away while you were playing fool here?" he asked.

"Du Sang's over the hill there on his horse, and full of fight yet," exclaimed one.

"Then we will look him up," suggested Smith. "Come, Seagrue."

"Don't go over there. He'll get you if you do," cried Gorman.

"Let us see about that. Seagrue, you and Karg walk ahead. Don't duck or run, either of you. Go on."

Just over the brow of the hill near which the fight had taken place, a man lay below a ledge of granite. The horse from which he had fallen was grazing close by, but the man had dragged himself out of the blinding sun to the shade of the sagebrush above the rock—the trail of it all lay very plain on the hard ground. Watching him narrowly, Smith, with his prisoners ahead and the cowboys riding in a circle behind, approached.

"Du Sang?"

Smith walked to him and bent down. "Are you suffering much, Du Sang?"

The wounded man, sinking with shock and internal hemorrhage, uttered a string of oaths.

Smith listened quietly till he had done; then he knelt beside him and put his hand on Du Sang's hand. "Tell me where you are hit, Du Sang. Put your hand to it. Is it the stomach? Let me turn you on your side. Easy. Does your belt hurt? Just a minute, now; I can loosen that."

"I know you," muttered Du Sang, thickly. Then his eyes—terrible, rolling, pink eyes—brightened and he swore violently.

"Du Sang, you are not bleeding much, but I'm afraid you are badly hurt," said Whispering Smith. "Is there anything I can do for you?"

"Get me some water."

A creek flowed at no great distance below the hill, but the cowboys refused to go for water. Whispering Smith would have gone with Seagrue and Karg, but Du Sang begged him not to leave him alone lest Gorman should kill him. Smith canvassed the situation a moment. "I'll put you on my horse," said he at length, "and take you down to the creek."

He turned to the cowboys and asked them to help, but they refused to touch Du Sang.

Whispering Smith kept his patience. "Karg, take that horse's head," said he. "Come here, Seagrue; help me lift Du Sang on the horse." The boys seem to be afraid of getting blood on their hands."

With Whispering Smith and Seagrue supporting Du Sang in the saddle and Karg leading the horse, the cavalcade moved slowly down to the creek, where a tiny stream purled among the rocks. The water revived the injured man for a moment; he had even strength enough, with some help, to ride again; and, moving in the same halting order, they took him to Rebstock's cabin. Rebstock, at the door, refused to let the sinking man be brought into the house. He cursed Du Sang as the cause of all the trouble. But Du Sang cursed him with usury, and, while Whispering Smith listened, told Rebstock with bitter oaths that if he had given the boy Barney anything but a scrub horse they never would have been trailed. More than this concerning the affair Du Sang would not say, and never said. The procession turned from the door. Seagrue led the way to Rebstock's stable, and they laid Du Sang on some hay.

Afterward they got a cot under him. With surprising vitality he talked a long time to Whispering Smith, but at last fell into a stupor. At nine o'clock that night he sat up. Ed Banks and Kennedy were standing beside the cot. Du Sang became delirious, and in his delirium called the name of Whispering Smith; but Smith was at Baggs' cabin with Bill Dancing. In a spasm of pain, Du Sang, opening his eyes, suddenly threw himself back. The cot broke, and the dying man rolled under the feet of the frightened horses. In the light of the lanterns they lifted him back, but he was bleeding slowly at the mouth, quite dead.

The surgeon, afterward, found two fatal wounds upon him. The first shot, passing through the stomach, explained Du Sang's failure to kill at a distance in which, uninjured, he could have placed five shots within the compass of a silver dollar. Firing for Whispering Smith's heart, he had, despite the fearful shock, put four bullets through his coat before the rifle-ball from the ground, tearing at right angles across the path of the first bullet, had cut down his life to a question of hours.

Bill Dancing who had been hit in the head and stunned, had been moved back to the cabin at Mission Springs, and lay in the little bedroom. A doctor at Oroville had been sent for, but had not come. At midnight of the second day, Smith, who was beside his bed, saw him rouse up, and noted the brightness of his eyes as he looked around. "Bill," he declared, hopefully, as he sat beside the bed, "you are better, hang it! I know you are. How do you feel?"

"Ain't that blamed doctor here yet? Then give me my boots. I'm going back to Medicine Bend to Doc Torpy."

In the morning Whispering Smith, who had cleansed and dressed the wound and felt sure the bullet had not penetrated the skull, offered no objection to the proposal beyond cautioning him to ride slowly. "You can go down part way with the prisoners, Bill," suggested Whispering Smith. "Brill Young is going to take them to Oroville, and you can act as chairman of the guard."

Before the party started, Smith called Seagrue to him. "George, you saved my life once. Do you remember—in the Pan Handle? Well, I gave you yours twice in the Cache day before yesterday. I don't know how badly you are into this thing. If you kept clear of the killing at Tower W I will do what I can for you. Don't talk to anybody."

CHAPTER XXIX.

McCloud and Dicksie.

News of the fight in Williams Cache reached Medicine Bend in the night. Horsemen, filling in the gaps between telephones leading to the north country, made the circuit complete, but the accounts, confused and colored in the repeating, came in a cloud of conflicting rumors. In the streets, little groups of men discussed the fragmentary reports as they came from the railroad offices. Toward morning, Sleepy Cat, nearer the scene of the fight, began sending in telegraphic reports in which truth and rumor were strangely mixed. McCloud waited at the wires all night, hoping for trustworthy advices as to the result, but received none. Even during the morning nothing came, and the silence seemed more ominous than the bad news of the early night. Routine business was almost suspended and McCloud and Rooney Lee kept the wires warm with inquiries, but neither the telephone nor the telegraph would yield any definite word as to what had actually happened in the Williams Cache fight. It was easy to fear the worst.

At the noon hour McCloud was signing letters when Dicksie Dunning walked hurriedly up the hall and hesitated in the passageway before the open door of his office. He gave an exclamation as he pushed back his chair. She was in her riding suit just as she had slipped from her saddle. "Oh, Mr. McCloud, have you heard the awful news? Whispering Smith was killed yesterday in Williams Cache by Du Sang."

McCloud stiffened a little. "I hope that can't be true. We have had nothing here but rumors; perhaps it is these that you have heard."

THE WILDERNESS.

This theatre of bloody conflicts is a vast sea, so to speak, of dense forest—a second growth more than a century old. It is made up chiefly of scrubby, low-limbed, stubborn oaks, and disordered, haggard pines—for the soil is cold and thin—with here and there scattering clumps of alien cedars. Some of the oaks are large enough to cut two railroad ties, and every once and a while you come across an acre or two of pines ten to twelve inches in diameter, tall and tapering, true to the soaring propensities of their kind. But generally, and above all where the battle was fought, the trees are noticeably stunted, and so close together, and their lower limbs so intermingled with a thic underbrush, that it is very difficult indeed to make one's way through them.—July Atlantic.

BOROUGH LAD INJURED IN PRINTING OFFICE.

Charles MacGonegal, a fourteen-year-old boy, of Stony Brook road, had his knee severely lacerated on a job printing press in the composing rooms of the North Plainfield Weekly Review yesterday afternoon.

The lad was watching one of the printers feed the press and was told not to go too closely to it. Despite the warning he did so, and a loose trouser end caught in the gearing. The press was stopped as quickly as possible, and Chief of Police George Weiss, who happened to be near, summoned Dr. Buchanan, who treated the lad. At his home today, the lad showed much improvement, and is not seriously injured.

W. J. WRIGHT GETS J. S. MACKEY'S JOB

To the surprise and openly expressed dissatisfaction of some of the politicians of Bergen county, Governor Fort yesterday announced that he had appointed Wendell J. Wright, of Demarest, to be prosecutor, succeeding John S. Mackay, who was appointed to take the place of Ernest Koester, deceased.

Members of what is known politically as the "old Hackensack ring" stood unitedly for the permanent appointment of Mackay. Wendell Wright is a law partner of Senator Edmund W. Wakalee, and is at present a judge for the third district of Bergen county. He has been appointed to at least eight or nine positions as counsel to different boroughs, his opponents say, was made counsel to the Board of Freeholders and is on the new County Building committee.

Sheriff Brewster, County Clerk Ramsey and Surrogate Hester said yesterday that Wright had been given his share of patronage and that Mackay's twelve years of service entitled him to succeed Koester as prosecutor.

When asked yesterday what he thought of the appointment, Mackay said he would have something to say perhaps at a later date. He said he was uncertain if he would again assume the assistant prosecutorship, although it is understood it will be offered to him.

Father and Son Arrested at Newark Charged With Swindling.

Darius Wilson, seventy-one years old, and his son, James, thirty-three years old, who says he is a physician and that his home is in East Foxboro, Mass., were arrested yesterday in Newark in connection with an alleged swindle. They assert that they have been instituting lodges of the Ancient and Egyptian Rite Masons and that they have not represented themselves as Free and Accepted Masons. They were held for further examination.

According to Morris Besser, two men called at his store some time ago and said that they had been sent out by the Grand Lodge of Masons to initiate candidates who were not able to pay the usual fee. They agreed to initiate Besser and make him a full fledged Mason for $7.50. They told him they would be able to "put him through" in a couple of days. Tuesday he received a letter instructing him to report at the Continental Hotel at 7:30 that night.

He was at the hotel at the appointed time and was put through a number of movements, which the "agents" explained were the high and low signs of the order. Then he said they took his money and let him go. Besser says that when he used the "signs" with real Masons they laughed at him.

OCTOGENARIAN TALKS AT CHURCH JUBILEE.

Events pertaining to the laying of the corner stone of the First Baptist church, Milburn, on August 10, 1859, were recalled Tuesday night at the special services held in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the laying of the stone. The occurrences on that day fifty years ago were told of by William Hastings, of Westfield avenue, Springfield, who is the only living member of the committee of the church which had charge of laying of the stone. Mrs. J. D. Meeker, of Main street, Millburn, took part in the ceremonies, but was unable to be present at last night's anniversary services owing to her feeble condition.

Despite his age, the octogenarian spoke on the upbuilding of the parish for twenty minutes. Since it was ofunded in 1858 by six members of the Northfield Baptist church, Mr. Hastings said, he was one of the first to join the church, and he has attended services with regularity ever since, being present at almost every morning service up to date.

Short addresses were made by Rev. Carey S. Thomas, the present pastor of the church; Rev. F. E. Osborne, of Orange, a former pastor, and Rev. D. De Wolfe, secretary of the Baptist State convention, while Edward D. Pannell, clerk of the church, read the history of the parish from data secured from the record books. Mr. Pannell read a congratulatory telegram from Rev. H. C. Townley, of Peekskill, N. Y., the first pastor of the Millburn church.

It was only yesterday that Mr. Townley's whereabouts was made known to Mr. Pannell, who immediately wired the former rector to come to Millburn to attend the ceremonies.

A message of greeting was sent to Mrs. J. D. Meeker.

PLAINFIELD A. C. TO MEET NORTH ENDS OF ELIZABETH.

The Plainfield A. C. will play the North End A. C., of Elizabeth, on the field at Clinton avenue and South Second street, Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. This will be one of the hardest contests the locals have on their schedule, the first one being won by the North Ends by a score of 6 to 1. This team has lost only two games this season and will have that clever combination, Brennan and Stanley as their battery.

Manager Pope has a fast trio of twirlers to select from, Slocum, Johnston and Miller. He has not decided which one he will use as yet. Mooney will catch and it is well worth the time to see how easily he throws out daring base-runners, which is not appreciated by opposing players. As the G. & T. V. Club and the Monroe A. C. will not have the opportunity to see their teams play, no games being scheduled Saturday, they will have a chance to see the Plainfield-North End contest.

SAYS POLITICIANS WISH TO CONTROL THE BEACH.

Politicians are plotting for the control of the beach front, according to Clarence S. Steiner, president of the Public Grounds Commission, Asbury Park. "And there is no doubt in my mind but that they will get it eventually," he said in an interview yesterday.

This statement, coming from Mr. Steiner, who is serving a second term as a beach commissioner, having been a member of the first commission along with Henry C. Winsor and J. Lyle Kinmonth, is not without significance. Politicians have long had their eye upon the beach body. They recognize its political advantages and the talk of increasing the present body from three to five members, the reported agitation for a change of methods in beach administration, it is declared, is part of an elaborate scheme devised looking to the domination by politics of the beach board.

QUEEN ANNE'S DEED TO CARTARET IS CONSUMED.

In searching ruins of the burned home of Mrs. C. C. Alexander, daughter of Commodore John Stevens, at Hoboken, Tuesday, it was found that the original deed from Queen Anne to Governor Cartaret, first conolel Governor of New Jersey, and from the Governor to the Bayard family, was destroyed in the flames.

Another loss was that of a picture by Tonyea, representing a Dutch farm scene, the painting being over 400 years old. Valuable old laces that have been in the family for hundreds of years, and the entire wedding outfit of Mrs. A. S. Alexander, formerly Miss Barney, of New York, were consumed.

Mrs. C. C. Alexander is at present prostrated in her home at Bernardsville over the loss of her house and its contents. The fire occured Thursday night last.

WANT THIRTY-CENT FARE FROM SOUTH ORANGE

That it costs more to ride on the Lackawanna Railroad from South Orange to New York, by the single fare scale, than from intermediate stations to the metropolis is the contention made by Albert G. Borden, of South Orange, in a letter which he has written on behalf of commuters to the South Orange Village Board of Trustees. The fare question has been argued by commuters on trains, and now the board is asked to take up the matter with the railroad officials.

According to Mr. Borden's communication five to ten cents can be saved on a single New York trip by buying tickets at South Orange to stations between and then from them to New York. He figures it out as follows: "A through ticket to New York from South Orange costs forty cents. The fare to Orange is ten cents, and from there to New York, twenty-five cents, a total of thirty-five cents, with a saving of a nickel.

"And again: A ticket to Roseville costs fifteen cents, from there to New York fifteen more, a total of ten cents less than the fare from South Orange."

The board is urged to confer with the railroad officials with the purpose of obtaining a thirty-cent fare from South Orange.

Mr. Borden holds that this should be granted the more readily because the Lackawanna charges an extra fare through the Hudson River tunnel, which is not done, it is alleged, by the Pennsylvania Railroad.

GRAND ARMY REVIEWED BY COMMANDER NEVIUS.

The fanfare of trumpets, the roll of drums, the rhythmic tramp of the marchers upon the pavement, the fluttering of banners, all the accessories of the annual parade, the feature event of Grand Army encampments, gave Salt Lake City yesterday a martial aspect.

The dawn of the day banished thoughts of new commanders and meeting places. The parade was the thing. At 10 o'clock the different divisions wheeled into line by the Brigham Young statue at the head of Main street. The column was strictly military. The fifteenth infantry, U. S. A., from Fort Douglass, took the lead, followed by the Utah National Guard and the carriages conveying the commander-in-chief, his staff and distinguished guests.

Illinois led the States. Then came Wisconsin, Pennsylvania and Ohio, on down the list to Oklahoma. The Union ex-prisoners of war marched after Oklahoma and the Utah comrades modestly brought up the rear. To the music of a score of bands, the column moved slowly down the broad street past cheering thousands of spectators.

Seven blocks, one mile in Salt Lake, brought the head of the procession to South Seventh street, where 1,200 school children in red, white and blue robes and caps formed a beautiful human flag.

The living flag joined the parade in marching order and followed the veterans to the starting point where the historic ranks passed in review before Henry M. Nevius, commander in chief.

The forty-third march of the Grand Army of the Republic over, the commander reviewed the living flag and the crowd then dispersed.

WHISK BROOM FACTORY IS TOTALLY DESTROYED.

Fire of unknown origin early last evening destroyed the plant of the Trenton Whisk Broom Works, at Canal and Park street, Trenton, together with its contents, entailing a loss of $40,000, all of which is covered by insurance. The building, which is of brick, was used as a storehouse for raw material and manufactured product. It was owned by Mrs. John J. Cook, of 923 South Clinton avenue. The building was valued at $10,000 and the stock, which was owned by Eckstein Brothers, of New York, at $30,000.

The fire was discovered by Elizabeth Lewis, the seven-year-old daughter of Michael Lewis who conducts a saloon on the opposite corner from the works. The little girl ran into the house and told her father that the works across the street were on fire, that she saw flames coming from a barrel in the rear of the building. Mr. Lewis called up fire headquarters on the telephone.

Fined for Riding on Sidewalk.

J. V. Eliot, a Colonial Insurance agent of this city, was fined one dollar by Recorder David S. Campbell this morning for riding on the sidewalks of the Dunellen streets. He rode but a short distance on the main street sidewalk, before going to the street, and for doing this he was arrested by Marshal Sliney. Judge Campbell took into consideration the circumstance and imposed the minimum fine.

Auto Accident At Dunellen.

A man by the name of Bowers, of this city had a slight mishap with his automobile at Dunellen this noon. Three of the leaves of a front spring broke down, and as the machine was going at a slow rate of speed the whole spring gave way. Another machine was summoned from a local garage which took the automobile party home, while machinists made repairs.

THAW STILL INSANE GOES BACK TO MATTEAWAN

Under the decision of Supreme Court Justice Mills, filed this morning, Harry K. Thaw must go back to Matteawan Asylum. Justice Mills dismisses the writ and remands Thaw to the State institution for the criminal insane.

The decision of Justice Mills makes the way to the divorce court easy for Evelyn Nesbit Thaw. It enables her to bring proceedings that would assure her immediate freedom.

It was some minutes after the decision was filed before the prisoner heard the news. He was apparently much agitated. He declined to make any statement in advance of the arrival of his counsel, Charles Lerschauser. He, however, took a copy of Justice Mills' decision and, turning to the part in which Thaw's beliefs about White were referred to, underscored these lines:

"If these beliefs constituted delusions in his mind when he committed the homicide, they are the same now."

This, said Thaw, was not so.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

The company playing "At Cripple Creek," which will be seen at the Plainfield theatre next Saturday, is the most expensive one playing at popular prices on the road this season. The scenic and electrical effects are magnificent, and the play which is a strong western melodrama, with plenty of love and pathos, comedy that holds the attention throughout and keeps the audience in continuous good humor is Hal Reid's best. The place is under the direction of Charles H. Wirz, which is sufficient guaranty that it is a A No. 1 production in every particular.

Hay Fire in North Plainfield.

Fire broke out in the cut grass in a field belonging to Assessor Justus H. Cooley, at the corner of Hudson place and Somerset street, North Plainfield, just after 1 o'clock this afternoon. The house and barn on the adjoining property belonging to John Van Ness was saved after heroic work by the North Plainfield firemen and neighbors who beat out the flames. The grass on the burned area had been cut some time and burned like tinder. The loss on hay and the fences is estimated at $200.

A Conscientious Sentry.

An officer, at a State camp, decided to see for himself how his sentries were doing their duty. He was somewhat surprised at overhearing the following:

"Halt! Who goes there?"

"Friend—with a bottle."

Pass, friend. Halt bottle."—Everybody's.

Home-Made Rag Doll.

A Roseville mother who wished to make a rag doll for her small daughter utilized the face of a pretty girl from a stenciled pillow cover. The effect was decidedly attractive and made the manufacture of the rag doll a simple matter.

ROUTINE AT STATE CAMP

PLAINFIELD BOYS ARE POPULAR

Lieut. A. I. Littell in Charge of Rifle Practice on the Range—Board of Freeholders Given a Hearty Reception.

Sea Girt, Thursday.

The regular routine at the State Camp started at first call for reveille, at 5:30 o'clock, Wednesday morning, and the members of Co. K are now fully initiated into camp duties. The reveille call is at 5:40, assembly at 5:45, with the formation under arms. Roll call, result to be reported to the officer of the day, and ten minutes' instruction in the manual of arms.

The mess call, breakfast, is given at 6:30, sick call at 7, fatigue call, camp police, 7:05, first sergeant's call, 7:25; first call guard mount at 7:45, and at 7:50 the assembly. For the purpose of instruction, each company will be subdivided in four details and the guard will be mounted in accordance with infantry drill regulations.

The first call, drill, is at 8:30, assembly at 8:40 and recall at 10:30. Between the hours of 10:30 and 11:30 bathing will be permitted north of the rifle range, under the supervision of an assistant surgeon detailed from the hospital corps. The school call is given at 11, the recall at 11:45 and mess call, dinner, at 12 o'clock noon. The routine for the afternoon is as follows:

First call, drill, 1:50; assembly, 2; recall, 3:30; first call, regimental parade and retreat, 5:25; assembly, 5:30; mess call, supper, 6:30; first call, guard mount, 7:45; assembly, 7:50. The company will be inspected on its own parade ground by its commanding officer and marched to the post of the guard by the senior lieutenant. Tattoo, 10 p. m., call to quarters, 10:45; taps, 11. Check roll call will be taken a taps, the result to be reported to the officer of the day.

Yesterday Co. K tried to improve its fine record on the rifle range. Some large scores are looked for by Captain Kitchell and his able lieutenants, Peterson and Littell. The latter will look after the practice of the company.

For dinner the company had lamb stew, bread, butter and coffee. The coffee is just vile—not due to our cook, but the "stuff" sent to the quartermaster's department.

Mrs. J. Haviland, representing the Philadelphia Day Nursery Sunshine Association, is visiting Camp in the interest of the worthy work. Sergeant Hort is kept busy introducing her to the officers and members.

Corporal Rothberg was taken for Lieut Peterson's son—they are both insulted.

The Board of Freeholders was royally entertained by Cos. I, K and C.

Private J. Millwater is running around the Co. street with a bandage around the head and is in tears because he can't sing any more. This to the great joy of every member of Co. K. They will now have a little rest.

Private Sharp has been trying to borrow money of Private Loughlin, but as both are "broke" there is nothing doing. The former spent most of his money for ice cream, cake and candy—chiefly lolly-pops. The latter spent his for charitable purposes, giving all the change he had to the sunshine society for the care of homeless children. Private Breese was so hungry today that he begged one of the men for a piece of dog biscuit.

Private James Pearsall, known to the boys and others as "Handsome Jimmie," had a nightmare and was found climbing the flag-pole in front of the Governor's cottage. When he was awakened he thought he was at work for the telephone company.

Private Jesse Dayton need not come to camp now. If he does he will be lynched for not walking down with the boys.

Leonard J. Bennett arrived today and is the life of the company for his witty sayings. Master Henry Kitchell takes great interest in turning out with the comapny. Some day he expects to be a captain—just like his father.

—CORPORAL.

To Bless Banner in St. Joseph's.

At St. Joseph's church in North Plainfield tomorrow morning at 9:30 there will be a special service in which the banner of the Italian Benevolent Society will be blessed and a solmen high mass will be sung. The banner will first be blessed then will follow the mass which is in honor of the Assumption and which will be sung by Father Sciola. Father Sciola will be assisted by Fatheir Dietrich, of Bound Brook, and Father Baldwin, of Mount Saint Mary's college.

AMIESITE CO'S. PRODUCT TO BE GIVEN A TRIAL

The Amiesite factory which has been in course of construction at Bound Brook, for some time, will be turned over to the company by the builders tomorrow and the manufacture of the product begun. The material manufactured by the Amiesite Company is a top dressing for roads and is said to be superior to anything now used. This city will make a trial of the substance on Jefferson avenue and on Terrill road.

There are 600 feet of road on Jefferson avenue which has been filled in with slag and topped with coarse crushed stone involving an extra expense, but it is said that this will make a firmer and more lasting road bed than the ordinary fine crushed stone with the regular top dressing.

On Terrill road there are several steep grades to be treated and here the new material will receive its hardest test. This road has been straigtened out and when finished will open up one of the finest sections of the city. Cranford is also to have a test of the new material made on one of its streets. Walnut street in that town being the one selected by the county commissioners for the test.

FREEMAN STRAIT COULDN'T KEEP STRAIGHT; HE'S FREE.

Freeman Strait, the famed game warden of Watchung, appeared this morning before Mayor Townsend on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. This is the first time that Strait was about to kick the animal borough on that kind of a charge, and he promised to stick to the straight and narrow path for some time in future. Taking this into consideration the mayor suspended sentence.

Strait created a nuisance on Somerset street last evening, and despite warnings from Marshal Keller refused to go home. His horse was in an exhausted condition and fell down. Strait was about to kick the animal when stopped by the marshal, and later, when the wagon was taken home by an employee of Strait, and the latter wended his way up Somerset street in a disorderly way Keller placed him under arrest.

MRS. BLATZ SOLE MEMBER OF RIBAUD FAMILY.

Mr. and Mrs. Hilaire Blatz, of Chatam street, returned this morning from Piermont, N. Y., where they attended the funeral of Mrs. Blatz's brohter, Eugene Ribaud, who was drowned Sunday at Piermont.

The death of Eugene Ribaud, leaves Mrs. Blatz the sole surviving member of the Ribaud family, her father having died four years ago, and her mother, two years ago.

Ribaud was drowned at Piermont last Monday, and after the drowning it took three hours to recover the body.

Mrs. Blatz, of the borough, was immediately notified. She was at Atlantic City with Mr. Blatz at the time, so they left for Piermont immediately. The funeral was held yesterday, and Mr. and Mrs. Blatz returned to their home in the borough this morning.

CHARLES DAVIE IS CHARGED WITH DESERTION.

Charles Davie, of 26 Manning avenue, is charged by his wife, Ada Davie, of Dunellen, with desertion. The hearing will come up in New Brunswick before Judge Suydam. Davie is a fireman of the Central Railroad and received his pay last Monday. At this time, his wife charges, he left her and a four-year-old daughter without means of support.

Mr. and Mrs. Davie it is said had a disagreement just previous to this, and since then Davie has been living in North Plainfield. Yesterday Mrs. Davie swore out the warrant for her husband's arrest.

"RECRUITS" SWORN IN BY SPANISH-AMERICAN VETERANS

The members of Camp Bageley, Spanish-American War Veterans, of this city, met last evening. Two "recruits" were sworn in. They are Sharpless Brooks, of East Bound Brook, and James H. Lane, of Grove street.

An informal social time was enjoyed by the veterans after the transaction of routine business, and plans for several social affairs to be held during the coming winter were discussed. There was a good attendance at the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barlow, of Grove street, are parents of a son born to them yesterday.

Y.M.C.A. CAMPERS RETURN

The Association State Camp Breaks Up After a Successful Season.

ATHLETIC AWARDS GIVEN OUT.

Charles Martin, a Local Association Member, Wins Honors in Season's Quoit Contest.

One of the most successful seasons that the State camp of the Y. M. C. A. has enjoyed came to a close Thursday. Excellent camp spirit was manifested in each of the three sections of campers and there was a large increase in the number of association men from all parts of the State.

In athletics, Orange association was the victor with ninety-three points, and will hold the Hilton Bull cup for this year. The boys having the highest number of points were Henderson Murphree, Roland Gifford, P. R. Campbell, H. Baldwin and Spencer Hamilton. Montclair association was a close second with ninety-one points, the Elizabeth third, with seventy-six points, and Paterson fourth, with forty-three points.

In aquatics the Fred Burckett cup was awarded to the Montclair association, having secured sixty-four points, and the five highest were Francis Peale, H. Murray iKtchen, Niles Suarez, Donald Brewster and Eustaes Strout. Orange association was second with fifty-nine points; Elizabeth third, with twenty-seven points, and Hudson City third, with thirteen points.

In tennis, Charles Williams, of Montclair, held first place in the first section, and Francis Peal in the second section and James Simister in the third section. In the finals Jas. Simister won out and will hold the cup for one year.

In quoits it was very close between Gordon Kissock, of Summit, and Charles Martin, of this city, but finally Charles Martin won out and will play off with Arthur Winey, champion of the third section. The champion of the State camp, as well as the victors of all the camps of the State, will meet at a central point this fall to play off the State championship games, and the winner will be awarded the silver cup.

The boys are beginning to send in their pictures for the photography competition, but it will not be known for several weeks who the winner will be.

The camp has been fortunate this year in having a number of experts in attendance at different times during the seasons, and among them were Alfred Gaskill, State forester; A. S. Williams, representing the New York zoological gardens, with special lectures on snakes of New Jersey; J. C. Lipman, professor of agriculture at Rutgers College; A. B. Kummel, State geologist; Lieut. W. E. Longfellow of the U. S. Volunteer Life Saving Corps. The State Library Commission also loaned a very fine set of nature study books, and the U. S. Department of Agriculture assisted in their department of work.

A special meeting of the boys' work committee of the State composed of Charles T. Kilborne, East Orange, chairman; H. S. Park, Ridgewood; J. T. Sproull, Arlington, and David Lindsay, Newark, was held at Wawayanda on Saturday and a number of improvements were suggested for the enusing year.

The after party, under the leadership of Charles R. Scott, the director, will spend several days in carrying out the plans proposed by the committee and throughout the winter preparations for the 1910 camp will be made so as to increase the efficiency of the camp.

STRANGER WOULD SELL BOX OF CIGARS FOR 50 CENTS.

Chief Marshal Sliney, of Dunellen, found a man selling cigars for fifty cents a box on the Dunellen main street last night, and arrested him on suspicion. At his hearing before Borough Recorder David S. Campbell, the man said he was George Gardner, and told the court that he had been employed in a laundry in this city.

"These look like real good cigars," said the Recorder, selecting one from the box the man had when arrested. "Yes," replied the prisoner, I bought them on speculation from a man in Plainfield." He could not say where the seller had bought the weeds, so Recorder Campbell telephoned Chief Kiely to find out if any cigar stores in "The City Beautiful" were shy part of their stock. The local police reported everything safe, and Gardner was freed.

A Grass Fire.

The firemen had a run to Central avenue, near Ninth street last night on a still alarm of fire. Burning grass in a field was extinguished without damage.

DAMAGE SUIT AGAINST REV. DR. C. A. EATON

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, who has recently bought a farm on the mountain at Watchung, is being sued for damages by Samuel Goldstein, a former tenant on the Bartle farm, which property was included in the land purchased by Dr. Eaton. The cause of the action is: Goldstein had a lease of the farm known as the William Bartle farm at Watchung, and when Dr. Eaton began to buy up the land he bought the property from Bartle which is occupied by Goldstein.

Dr. Eaton went to Goldstein, so it is said, and got him to sign an agreement whereby Goldstein surrendered his lease in consideration of the Doctor's moving the house occupied by Goldstein across the road and giving him the house rent free until March, 1901. Doctor Eaton employed a house mover to place the building on the other side of the road and it was done, but since the house has rested on its new foundation it has sunk and has become uninhabitable, so it is alleged.

The case is to come before the Somerset county circuit court next month. Robert Newton Crane appears for Goldstein and Winfield S. Angleman will defend the action for Rev. Dr. Eaton.

ANNUAL OUTING OF THE UNION CO. REPUBLICANS.

The fifth annual outing of the Union County Republican Committee takes place tomorrow at Schilling's Atlas Grove, Rockaway Beach, Long Island. The steamer Isabelle will convey the party, leaving Elizabethport from the city dock promptly at 10 o'clock in the morning. The committee having the outing in charge is Andrew McCardell, of this city, chairman; William A. Bembridge, S. Russling Ryno, Herbert Buxton, of Plainfield; Henry Pflug, treasurer, and Edward Bauer, secretary.

Among those who will join the excursionists are Senator John Kean, James White, Vivian Lewis, of Passaic, who has a gubernatorial bee in his bonnet; "Uncle Dan" Voorhees, of Morristown; Mayor Victor Mvralag, of Elizabeth; County Clerk J. C. Calvert and Count Chairman Frank H. Smith. It is expected that at least seventy-five or eighty people will attend from this city. There will be games of all sorts including baseball. The party will reach home about 9 o'clock.

MANY FRIENDS ATTEND FUNERAL OF J. P. POWERS.

The funeral of John P. Powers took place this morning from St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield. Father Miller, the pastor, conducted the services and a solemn high mass of requiem was sung. The church was filled with the friends and relatives of the young man and many floral offerings testified to the esteem in which he was held.

The Knights of Columbus and the Plainfield Druggists' Association were represented with beautiful set pieces of roses and forget-me-nots while many other pieces were from friends. Many of those who attended the services at the church were deterred from accompanying the body to the cemetery owing to the rain. The pall bearers were John J. Kenney, Dennis Gavin, John Traynor, Joseph Burke, James Burke and Frank Burke. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

NOISY HORSE THIEVES SCARED OFF BY BOY.

Awakened by the noise of a wagon, William Goff and his son, of North avenue, thwarted a couple of horse thieves, the police say, by putting to flight its two occupants, whom they discovered in the back yard, near the barn, at 2 o'clock this morning.

The two heard the rattling of the wagon at the house, and when it stopped suddenly in front of the door, the son got up and saw from the window that two men climbed out and walked rapidly toward the stable. He called to them, asking what they wanted, and at his hail, the two ran out of the yard, climbed into the wagon and drove rapidly away. The police were notified.

Will Probably Pay Part.

It is likely that the Public Service Corporation will assume a share of the cost of oiling the streets in this city upon which their tracks run. Under the contract by which the streets are sprinkled the P. S. C. bears a portion of the expense and with the advent of oil for the laying of dust the question of a like arrangement come up. Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett said this morning that a bill had been sent to the P. S. C. and from conversation held with the officers of the corporation it was likely the bill would be paid. The amount of the charge was not stated.

MISSTEPS, MISS DUNAVAN SPRAINS ANKLE AND TOE

She was standing on the edge of the front porch and in stepping backward miscalculated the distance to the steps. As a result of this she was thrown backwards and in catching her foot on the ground wrenched it badly, spraining the ankle and a toe of her left foot.

Dr. T. H. Tomlinson was summoned, after friends carried her into the house. Temporary relief was given her by these until the arrival of the physician, who found the ankle to be severely sprained. A plaster cast was put on and it will be several weeks before Miss Dunavan is able to be about again.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE MRS. ALEXANDER BENEDICT.

The funeral services of Mrs. Alexander Benedict were held yesterday afternoon at her late residence, 3[illegible] Duer street, and was attended by many of her friends as well as relatives. Notwithstanding the request that flowers be omitted, the casket was literally covered with beautiful set pieces all tokens of the love and esteem in which Mrs. Benedict was held.

Rev. James T. Shock, who conducted the services in the absence of Rev. John Y. Broek, spoke feelingly of the life and character of Mrs. Benedict and likened her life to the full sheaf of wheat, ready for the garner. Her character was a beautiful example of God's influence and she shed abroad and around her influences that were alway for good. Mrs. Benedict was a charter member of Trinity Reformed church and up to the time of her death was a faithful attendant at the services in the church. She is mourned by a host of friends.

HOUSE NUMBERS WRONG, CRAIG PLACE TANGLE

A peculiar mix up in conditions on Duer street has developed which may cost every property owner along that thoroughfare a small sum of money to set right. Owing to the building of a new double house just below Craig place, between the bridge and the German Reformed church, the house numbering of the street has been thrown out of harmony. There are at prseent two numbers 5 and 7 for different houses on the same side of the street, but on different blocks.

As a result of this, Dr. George R. Boston recently had a load of straw delivered at his house, which should have gone to Mrs. Ann Hedden, who lives at the same number on Duer street, but beyond Craig place. Mail has been confused repeatedly and both people have been put to much inconvenience.

Duer street formerly began at Craig place and the first number on that thoroughfare on the odd side, number 5 was given to the house now occupied by Mrs. Ann Hedden. The street was cut through to connect with Plainfield, and now begins at the middle of the Madison avenue—Duer street bridge. Hence when Dr. Boston recently built a new house below Craig place numbers 5 and 7 were given to his property. There is room for more houses below Craig place on Duer street, and as a result of this it is only a question of time when they will be built and the necessity of more accurate house numbering is made apparent. Otherwise there will be more "dual" numbers.

The houses are not numbered by the "standard block" system on Duer street, which makes every block total one hunderd. For this reason it will take more than two blocks to set the present wrong numbering straight.

The expense of the numbering must be borne by the property owners along the street, and as the cost of house numbers varies from three cents to five dollars, it would not be easy to compute the total expense of the improvement. The matter will be called to the attention of the borough council at its next meeting.

Dissolution of Partnership.

The catering establishment hitherto conducted by David DeMolli and Joseph Milani on West Front street has been dissolved by mutual consent and will hereafter be conducted by Mr. DeMolli under the old firm name. The firm has been doing business for the last five or six years.

Charles A. Lee and daughter, Marguerite, of Grove street, left today for Sebago Lake, Maine, where they will remain two weeks.

SHE CONFESSES FORGERY

HELD IN $300 BAIL FOR TRIAL.

Winston Woman, Arrested in City National Bank, Admits That She Forged Clergyman's Name.

Celia Winston, the colored servant of Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, who was arrested Saturday when she tried to cash a "queer" check at the City National Bank, confessed that she has forged the clergyman's name on three checks when subjected to a second "third degree" examination by Chief Kiely at police headquarters last night. Arraigned before City Judge William N. Runyon at the session of court today, the woman entered a plea of non vult through her counsel, S. S. Swackhamer, and was held under $300 bail to await the action of the grand jury. Her bond was to have been furnished at 11 o'clock today, but when the bondsman learned that she had made a confession, he refused to supply the money. The prisoner was taken to the county jail at Elizabeth this afternoon.

Held as a "suspicious character" in a cell at police headquarters since her arrest, the Winston woman, faced by proof positive of her guilt, has maintained a policy of denial of the charge of forgery brought against her by Cashier William F. Arnold, of the City National Bank. An examination of the two checks on which the domestic secured $20 shows that she made no studied attempt to imitate the clergyman's writing, and when urged to write his name after her arrest, her writing showed the same characteristics as the signatures on the forged checks. Money was secured on two forged checks for $10 apiece, dated July 3 and July 24, although the forgery was not discovered until their return to the City National Bank by the persons who had cashed them for her.

The woman's arrest Saturday followed her attempt to cash a check for $15 at the City National Bank. The check was dated "August 31" and when the domestic's attention was called to this date, she said that Mrs. Zelie had made the mistake. She sent this check to the clergyman's wife, who is with him at Cherryfield, Maine, for a summer sojourn, but neither she nor the police have received a reply. The clergyman has written to Mr. Arnold, declaring that he had suspicions of the woman as a forger and putting the matter entirely in his hands. David Mason, whom the servant says is her husband, was in court this morning.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS EXCURSION WAS A SUCCESS.

The annual excursion of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, to Asbury Park, yesterday, was a great success. Thirty pasenger coaches were required to convey the Plainfielders and those from North Plainfield, Stirling and Dunellen to the shore, and not an accident of any kind happened to mar the day's pleasure. It was one of the best managed affairs of the season, and the efficient committee made it a business to see that every precaution against accident was provided for.

The Plainfielders had a fine time at the shore. There was a strong sea breeze and all the attractions were well patronized. Among those who probably had the best time was "Uncle Dave," who found much pleasure in ditributing small coins to the children. They were all his friends and the remebrance helped many a tot to have some fun.

R. A. Suffern's Sketch of Africa.

This week's issue of "The Independent," printed in New York, has an article of intense interest on "The World's Greatest Shooting Preserve," by Robert A. Suffern, of this city. Mr. Suffern has just returned from an extensixe trip through British East Africa and his account of the African wilds with its untamed inhabitants and much talked of game is well worth the reading, not only by the sportsman, but by every lover of nature.

A LONDON POSTER "AD" THAT IS COMING DOWN.

A week ago gangs of bill stickers began putting up posters on billboards and walls all over London. They put up 40,000 of them. The paste was no sooner dry than other gangs of men, working feverishly day and night, commenced pulling them down. They are still at it.

The posters have been officially objected to, though it appears that the advertiser did not mean to offend anybody. In the wording of his poster he simply followed time-honored custom. But there are some things in England you can't advertise in that way.

Pictorially, the poster represents a hand holding up titled a tin box with a sieve cover, from which was pouring a stream of powder. Several insects, of several kinds, coming in contact with the powder, turned over, and, incontinently and without any fuss at all, died.

There are two lines of type, one above and the other below the picture. The top line says that somebody's powder is guaranteed to administer instant death to cockroaches, fleas, bedbugs and other vermin.

The bottom line remarks: "Supplied to his majestey the lKng."

Notwithstanding the intimation that Brunswick will bring one of the Eastern League mound artists with them tomorrow, Manager Dorflinger believes his boys will win out. Ortlieb is just as good now as earlier in the season and the confidence he has in his team mates to back him up will tend to correct any impression that Manager Driscoll may have that his team will have a walkover. Britz Martin has his eye on the ball these days and it will be a good pitcher who can fan him. Boyd and Barnes sometimes loosen up a welt that puts fringe on the ball, besides every man on the home team will be on his metal to make the series a tie. Then they will go in and win the rubber.

GOLF.

Contrary to the usual custom the Plainfield Country Club decided not to continue the weekly competitions after the Independence Day events, and there will be no events on the club course until Labor Day, September 6, when there will be a Labor Day handicap.

The Labor Day Handicap will be a thirty-six hole competition and is sure to bring out a big field of players as a majority of the members are home from their summer outing by that time.

Other special events during the fall include the Election Day handicap in November, the Thanksgiving Day handicap and point-winners consolation handicap, October 30, and November 3 match play.

There will also be the Fall handicap cup competition, weekly event, commencing with the play on Labor Day, for classes A and B.

The Plainfield Country Club is now enjoying unusual prosperity and new members are constantly being received. The improvements at the club-house are greatly enjoyed by the members and the course is in the best of condition despite the recent dry spell, which has wrought so much havoc with the grass in this section.

The Park Golf Club is experiencing a successful season. The competitions are being continued and every week there is a large field out to contest for the President's and Golf Club trophies. During the fall there will be a number of special competitions which are sure to add interest.

Interest continues at the Westfield Golf Club, where weekly competitions are held. There was some talk of giving up the course, but there were a sufficient number of the members who liked the game well enough to maintain the course and club-house.

There is some talk of a team match between the Plainfield Country Club and the Park Golf Club. Such a match should be full of interest, and the result would doubtless be close.

Although numbered as one of the veterans among the professional golfers in this country, Tom Gourlay, of the Forest Hill Field Club, continues to flourish like the green bay tree. In a round of the links with one of the members yesterday Tom reeled off an even 70, 35 each way, thereby equaling the record for the course made by himself several weeks ago.

In getting his 4 at the long seventh Gourlay laid a third shot on the green from the edge of the woods. On the homeward journey he slipped up with a 6 at the fifteenth, but made amends by running down a putt for a 2 at the next. His card was:

Out ..4 4 5 4 4 4 4 3 2—35
In ...4 4 4 4 4 6 2 4 3—35—70

Local golfers who have been playing at Deal recently are enthusiastic over the condition of the greens, which were never better. The fairway, however, has suffered like all others because of the continuous drought.

Jack Jolly, the professional, has just returned from a trip through the West, and he says the game is booming everywhere. In fact, all courses, both East and West, are experiencing the busiest kind of a season.

Although favored by an ideal location, the old course of the Shinnecock Hills Golf Club has suffered considerably since a year ago. The fairway is in such poor condition that the officials are at their wits' end to know what to do. It will probably require months of hard work and much expense to get the turf back to former standard.

"V. D. B." PENNIES ALL OUT.

New Issue of Coins Without Initials —Profit of $350,000 for Speculators.

The last of the Lincoln pennies bearing the initials "V. D. B.," was given out at the Treasury Department Monday. When coining is resumed no initial will be on the pieces.

It was first thought a compromise could be effected by striking out the first two initials and leaving an inconspicuous "B." It was found, however, that this plan would necessitate the casting of an entirely new die and a delay for two weeks, so all the letters will be clipped from the die and the new issue will be resumed on Thursday or Friday. It is reported, however, that Mr. Brenner threatens to get out an injunction.

Since the commencement of the issue last Monday 22,350,000 of the pennies have been put in circulation, and small boys, and other venders, in Washington and other cities of the country are still making irregular sales of the coins at fancy prices. It is estimated that the new issue has sold so far on the street at an average profit of 150 per cent., the coins going ordinarily two for 5 cents. That means a profit to the venders of something like $350,000.

NECESSITIES GOING HIGHER.

Bradstreet's Says the Average Is Next to the Highest on Record.

Bradstreet's index number of commodity prices as of August 1 shows that the prices of necessaries are rising steadily. The August 1 number is $8.5039, the highest that has been quoted since December 1, 1907, when prices were beginning to show the effect of the slump in business, and it is one-half of 1 per cent. over the figure for July 1. Taking comparison by the season of the year it is the highest figure for August 1 on record with the exception of that on August 1, 1907. Bradstreet's says:

"Every one knows that commodities are high, and that as a result household budgets in homes of limited incomes feel the burden of this upward tendency. In fact, in some quarters economies have to be rigidly practiced in order to make both ends meet; as it were.

"Under the circumstances there is naturally more or less discontent because of the high level of things, which feeling is hardly assuaged by the knowledge that employment is becoming more plentiful, the wages were not cut to any extent during the recent depression, that yields of farm products from the big surplus-producing regions are of bounteous proportions, and that as a result prosperity is gaining a better foothold. Indeed, these plenteous supplies of farm products portend an easier situation in the not distant future, the cereals having already felt the effects of actual or prospective new supplies."

NEW YORK'S CUSTOMS RECEIPTS

MIDDLESEX COUNTY VALUATIONS INCREASE

According to the returns of the State Board of Assessors on the valuation and assessment of second-class railroad property just made to the Middlesex County Tax Board, the valuation in Piscataway township is $243,851, as against $244,351 last year. In Dunellen the valuation is $51,039 as against $50,939 last year, a substantial increase.

The rates of taxation would be lower in Middlesex county this year if all other conditions were the same as before. That will be the case should the Supreme Court decide that second-class railroad property shall be included in the returns of the comptroller.

This question was raised a few weeks ago when the borough of Kenilworth took action against the State board for the equalizations of taxes, the comptroller and the boards of the twenty-one counties in the State. As yet the court has not rendered its decision and the State board has made its customary return to Clerk Spencer.

The rates of valuation for second-class railroad property in this county this year is $3,029,695, whereas it was $2,925,820 last year. In some cases the valuation is the same, but in the majority of instances there is an increase, which is a benefit for the invidual property holder.

CONFER ON HAT STRIKE.

Governor Fort Brings Parties Together and Hopes for Good Results.

A conference was held at Sea Girt yesterday between Governor Fort, the president of the United Hatters of North America, John A. Moffit, and a number of manufacturers of the hatting industry of the Oranges and Newark, where there has been a prolonged strike, working great loss upon both manufacturers and workmen. The conference came about through the invitation of Governor Fort. He sent for Mr. Moffitt some days ago and had a talk with him about his side of the difficulty, and he had a full discussion with the manufacturers about their side of the strike. The joint conference was a result of these two conferences.

The Governor would not give out any details of the conference, but that progress was made is to be inferred from the fact that the national president of the union and the manufacturers came out chatting with each other. All the Governor would say in relation to the matter was that he was hopeful that an agreement would be reached.

"I can say nothing at this time," Mr. Moffit said, "but on Saturday I will issue a full statement."

PRESIDENT'S POLICY ON RECESS APPOINTMENTS.

President Taft has made the important declaration that it will be his policy to make as few recess appointments as possible. In cases of vacancies on the federal bench, especially, the President has stated that he will make appointments only in districts or circuits where the need of a judge is shown to be imperative.

Mr. Taft's declaration of his policy as to recess appointments came up in connection with the vacancy on the District Court bench at Chicago, occasioned by the death of Judge Bethea. Mr. Taft will not fill this vacancy until Congress meets in December.

TRAIN CUPS UNSANITARY.

New Jersey Board of Health Wants Individual Cups on Railway Cars.

The State Board of Health, in a resolution officially condemned yesterday the drinking cup or glass in use on railroad trains. It formally asked the companies running through New Jersey to smash their drinking glasses.

In its plan the board recommended the installation free of expense to passengers of germ-proof drinking cups of antiseptic paper, which could be thrown away after one drink. Slot machines, it was also suggested, might be placed in the cars carrying these germ-proof cups, and selling them for a penny.

KNOX INSPECTS INLET WORK.

For the purpose of inspecting government work at inlets, P. C. Knox, Secretary of State; Huntington Wilson, Assistant Secretary of State; Representative Henry C. Loudenslager, of New Jersey, and Leslie M. Shaw met on the beach at Cape May yesterday and started on a walk and ferriage trip up the New Jersey beaches.

Railway Tax Values in New Jersey.

The State Board of Assessors has completed its work assessing second class railroad property in this State and finds that the total is $73,750,321 for taxing purposes. This does not include the "main stem," which is a strip 100 feet wide of the through line of the roads. The valuation of second-class railroad property this year is $3,500,000 greater than for last year.

The first requisite in making children's shoes that will stand the rough usage which a child is bound to give it is good leather.

VanArsdale Uses It.

The next necessity is to have lasts that are truly shaped to meet the demands of growing and developing feet.

VanArsdale Has Them.

Taste must be displayed in designing the patterns and styles, else a child's shoe would be ungainly and cumbersome. And with all these requirements the matter of cost cannot be lost sight of. The shoe must be priced right.

BIG AUTOMOBILE RACE.

Quaker City Club Arranging Event for Benefit for Charity.

Arrangements are being made by a committee appointed by Mayor Reyburn, of Philadelphia, for what will probably be one of the greatest automobile races ever held in this country. The race will be held in Fairmont Park on Saturday, October 9, and will be over a 300-mile course.

Already a score of entries have been received by the Quaker City Automobile Club, under whose auspices the race will be held. Besides $5,000 in cash prizes, of which $2,500 will go to the winner, it is probable the city will give a handsome silver cup to the victor.

It is expected that a large sum of money will be raised from charges for parking space, grand stand seats and concessions, and all this money will be donated to charity.

Darius Wilson, who is more than seventy years old, and his son, James D. Wilson, of East Foxboro, Mass., who were arrested in Newark on Wednesday on charges of swindling by taking money for what they declare to be Masonic degrees, were held yesterday in $1,500 bail each to await the action of the Essex county grand jury. The senior Wilson collapsed soon after his arrest, and was given a comfortable witness room instead of a cell. The court proceedings in his case were held in the witness room, as he remained in bed by permission of the police.

Charges against father and son were made by Morris Besser, of No. 291 Orange street, and John O. C. Johnson, of 301 New street. They said the Wilsons had given them secret grips and other signs which they were told would identify them among Masons everywhere. Besser tried the signs on a Masonic friend and got no response other than an inquiry as to his sanity. It was set forth in the complaints against the two prisoners yesterday that they had obtained $7.85 from each of the complainants by acting as "grand master" and "grand secretary," respectively, for initiation in the "Ancient Egyptian rite of Freemasonry."

Masons in court yesterday said that the elder Wilson formerly belonged to the order. According to the police the Wilsons have been going about the country for years organizing fraternal societies. The elder Wilson said that his son is a regularly ordained Episcopal clergyman. He denied the accusations of fraud in dealing with Besser and Johnson.

LAUNCH AFIRE ON LAKE HOPATCONG.

Other Boats Go to Rescue and Occupants Are Taken Off.

A blazing gasolene launch out on at Lake Hopatcong yesterday with an excited party on board, caused a number of small craft to rush to the rescue. One of the boats, responding to the calls for help, had a patent fire extinguisher on board and was thus enabled to save the threatened launch.

The launch belongs to William Nixon, of Morristown, but had been taken for the day by William Jennings, of Paterson. He had with him several women, two of whom were Ida Lewis and Jennie Watson, of Paterson. The exhaust set fire to the woodwork of the boat, and the occupants became wildly excited. The Wastens, Peter Pfeiffer, of Hoboken, and the Firefly, the Jacobs brothers, of Paterson, were the first alongside. The Jacobs brothers had the extinguisher, and put out the flames which had taken a good hold forward and were threatening the tank. All the occupants of the boat were taken off and landed safely.

NATIONAL WITH STATE BANK EXAMINATIONS.

Lawrence O. Murray, Comptroller of Currency, has directed all national bank examiners to forward at once to the office in Washington a list of national banks in their respective districts which have affiliations with State institutions and occupy the same building or which are in close proximity in their business affairs. The Comptroller has also asked for information from the examiners on the plans for co-operation between national and State bank examiners.

He has directed specifically that if possible the next examination by a national examiner of such institutions should be made jointly with the examination of the State examiner.

Newark's Big Increase.

An increase of more than $32,000,000 in the taxable valuations of Newark was indicated in the abstract of ratables returned to the Essex County Tax Board yesterday by the City Tax Board. The total value of assessed property in Newark for the present year is $327,926,050. Most of the increase in assessments was upon personality, of which about $18,600,000 was on the property of the Prudential Insurance Company.

GOVERNOR FORT LAUDS THE CIVIL SERVICE

In a speech at Sea Girt yesterday to employes of the various State departments Governor Fort declared himself to be a strong supporter of the principle of civil service in the work of the State. He said:

"From my earliest days I have been a firm believer in the principle of civil service, and long before I had any thought of ever holding political office I earnestly advocated the principle upon the public platform. The thought that the State is behind you in your work and that you do not depend upon some powerful politician for your position promotes reliable and satisfactory service upon your part. Only through such assurance as the Civil Service law gives can a strong and efficient service be made possible.

"It gave me great pleasure to place my signature to the Civil Service bill when it passed the Legislature, and I assure you that I will do all in my power to improve and strengthen it while I continue in my present office."

Pretty typewriters from all the State departments at Trenton, as well as many of the men who keep the wheels of State business in motion, were guests of Governor Fort, who had the Commission on Public Buildings declare a holiday for this midsummer outing. The happy vacationists were profuse in their thanks to the Executive as they greeted him on the wide veranda of the "Little White House," where he stood surrounded by his staff, with a cheerful word of greeting for all the men and young women who serve the State at Trenton. Later, they were all his guests at the luncheon under the big white tent, pitched on the lawn near the cottage.

In the presence of thousands of applauding visitors from all the summer resorts of the coast and excursionists from central Jersey the Second Regiment, commanded by Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan, and Battery B, of Camden, commanded by Captain Barnard, and the United States Marine Corps were reviewed by Governor Fort and staff.

When Governor Fort entered the extreme eastern gate of the parade field the guns boomed forth the official salute. Immediately after the formal review the men of the regiment sprang a sensational surprise in a shelter tent drill on the big field. Many of the spectators had never witnessed such a drill before. It was a treat to see the celerity with which the plain was converted into a tented city, being covered by more than six hundred brown shelter tents.

Colonel Dungan had as his guests last night Governor Fort and all the officers on the grounds. It was one of the largest dinners of the season. The camp life for the present season is closing in a brilliant way socially.

BIG ARMY MANOEUVERS WILL BEGIN TOMORROW.

The preliminaries of the biggest army manoeuvers ever attempted in this country began yesterday with the department, of Major-General Leonard Wood, his staff, foreign military attaches and others of the army transport Kilpatrick for Massachusetts. The entire force of almost 7,000 men who will act as the "invading army," under Genaral Tasker H. Bliss, left late in the day on transports for New Bedford, the base for the attacking troops.

Operations, which are designed by the War Department to try out coast defenses and show what can be done to repel invasion, will begin tomorrow and continue until August 21. The southeastern coast of Massachusetts, mainly about New Bedford, extending west to Taunton, north to Boston, and east to points west of the Cape Cod district, is the territory in which the big war game will be played. About 17,000 men will participate.

General Pew, of Massachusetts, will command the defenders who are madeup largely of the volunteer militia of Massachusetts and will make their headquarters in Boston.

General Wood is t act as the chief umpire. His staff accompanying him includes Colonel H. O. S. Heistand, adjutant general; Colonel George S. Andreson, chief of staff; Colonel Hall, judge advocate; Lieutenant Colonel Isaac W. Littel, chief quartermaster, and Colonel Abiel L. Smith, chief commissary. Then there will be Captain J. R. Proctor, aid to General Wood, and Captain Halstead Dorey and Lieutenant Arthur Poillon, acting aids.

The foreign attaches who will attend the manoeuvers include Colonel Baron de Bode, Imperial Russian Army; Major Davila, Mexican Army; Captain Count de Herbert Frigh, of the Royal British Engineers. These attaches will be in charge of Captain William S. Guignard, of the Second Field Artillery.

The transports that will carry the invading force will be the Meade, the Sumner, the McClellan, the General Ord, the General Schofield and one other. After these vessels have landed the attacking parties at New Bedford they will go out to sea and become battleships for the manoeuvers. Eight army launches will represent as many destroyers.

Mrs. McNamee, of Central avenue, is registered at "The Oceanside," Asbury Park, where she will be joined later by her son, James.

OPERATION PERFORMED ON MONTCLAIR PASTOR.

Rev. Albert Von Schlieder, pastor of the Montclair Heights Dutch Reformed church, is in Mountainside Hospital, Montclair, where he was operated on Wednesday for appendicitis.

It was said at the hospital yesterday that the operation was successful and that the patient was resting comfortably.

Mr. Schleider was taken ill on Tuesday last. Dr. William N. Harrison, of Oakwood avenue, Upper Montclair, was called.

The physician diagnosed his patients illness as appendicitis and ordered his removal to the hospital at once.

Policeman Baker yesterday found an old woman, who gave the name of Mrs. Mary Springfield, seventy-six years old, near the Timber Creek drawbridge. Adie sustained a compound fracture of the left leg and little Hiller was terribly bruised all over the body.

SOLD TWENTY-DOLLAR BILL FOR TEN CENTS.

Believing that a twenty-dollar gold certificate was a counterfeit, Raymond Leigh, thirteen years old, son of Abraham Leigh, of Burdtown, near Califon, sold the bill for ten cents. The buyer was Henry Neighbour, superintendent of the Vernoy Livingston quarries.

The boy was playing around the quarries with two Beam boys, about his age. The Leigh boy produced the bill, saying it was a counterfeit and that his older brother had two or three more like it.

Mr. Neighbour was notified and he asked Leigh if he would take ten cents for it. He accepted the offer. Mr. Neighbour then placed the certificate in the hands of Elston Beaty, of Califon, to await developments.

Hearing yesterday that Mr. Neighbour had purchased the bill for ten cents Mrs. Leigh demanded the money. She said that her son had not returned home since he left last Saturday. She declared that she received clothing annually from a friend in New York and that in the pocket of a coat she found a purse containing the bill in question with other "counterfeits." She believed they were of no value and placed them between the leaves of a book. At times she said she had given them to the children to bet with while playing marbles.

Favorites.

"What are you going to put in there?" asked his wife.

"Peas, dear," replied the man with the trowel. "Say, if you're going into the house, bring out a can with you. You know—the kind we had for dinner yesterday!"—Puck.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

A careful record of weather conditions in Newark, reported by "The Sunday Call" of that city, shows that for the last ten years the prognostications of the government Weather Bureau have been notably correct. The weather predictions have ranged from about 78 to 94 per cent of accuracy, and the predictions of temperature from 71 to 99. In the ten years there were seventeen months in which not a single error was made, but every day's prediction was exactly fulfilled. It is probable that a similar comparison of predictions and records all over the country would show a similar degree of accuracy. If only people paid half the attention to the correct forecasts that they do to the occasional errors, there would be an end of the groundless and foolish attacks upon the Weather Bureau.—The New York Times.

Another cut in the price of ice goes into effect today. It is one and the same time a good thing for the consumer and a bad thing for certain wholesalers. It puts ice within reach of the poor and it is an indictment of those wholesalers who kept the price up until they were forced by competition to put it down. To the average citizen it must seem as if this whole business would bear investigation. If ice can now be sold at a profit at the rate of $3.50 a ton why could it not have been sold at less than $6 a ton in the early part of the season or at least a month ago?

Of course the answer to this from the wholesalers is easily anticipated. They will say, no doubt, that cool weather and economy on the part of the consumer in the use of ice has left a price-reducing supply on their hands. That may or may not be true. If it is true it reduces the matter to a simple question of supply and demand. That this may apply and does apply, to natural ice no one will deny, but how it can be made to fit the manufacture and sale of artificial ice the consumer, in the light of the available information on the subject, will find it hard to understand. It must also seem to the most unthinking individual that if this ice can be sold now, with a fair measure of profit, at $3.50 or $4 a ton, there never was any good and honest reason for making the price $6.—Newark Evening News.

PHILADELPHIAN LOSES $200 ON OLD BUNCO GAME.

Harry Bryson, a young Philadelphian with a big roll of vacation money, fell an easy mark for $218 in an old bunco game worked by a fake "hotel man," according to statements made in Police Court, Atlantic City, yesterday. He appeared as complaining witness against "John Henry," an alleged New Yorker, who was held in $1,000 bail to stand trial for fraud.

Bryson met a talkative stranger on the boardwalk and was prevailed upon to match pennies. The sum wagered was gradually increased until Bryson was told he had won first $18 and then $200. The money was paid over to him. It was transferred temporarily to Henry, introduced as a hotel manager, when the engaging stranger insisted that Bryson produce $200 in cash to show that he could have paid if he had been the loser.

Bryson went to his hotel and got the money, which he gave to Henry, getting in exchange a "certified check" for $400. Henry was arrested later. He wept when held for trial.

He Knew.

The baby was being questioned playfully as to his senses.

"What are these for?" touching his eyes.

"To see wiv," he answered.

"And this?" touching his nose.

"To smell wiv," he answered.

"And your mouth?"

"Oh, to eat."

"What are your ears for?"

This was a puzzler, but after a moment, he said with firm conviction: "To wash."—Delineator.

"No, no!" Blake, one of our men, was in the fight and got back at the ranch at nine o'clock this morning. I heard the story myself, and I rode right in to—to see Marion, and my courage failed me—I came here first. Does she know, do you think? Blake saw him fall from the saddle after he was shot, and everybody ran away, and Du Sang and two other men were firing at him as he lay on the ground. He could not possibly have escaped with his life, Blake said; he must have been riddled with bullets. Isn't it terrible?" She sobbed suddenly, and McCloud, stunned at her words, led her to his chair and bent over her.

"Oh! Mr. McCloud, Have You Heard the Terrible News?"

"If his death means this to you, think of what it means to me!"

A flood of sympathy bore them together. The moment was hardly one for interruption, but the dispatcher's door opened and Rooney Lee halted, thunderstruck, on the threshold.

Dicksie's hand disappeared in her handkerchief. McCloud had been in wrecks before, and gathered himself together unmoved. "What is it, Rooney?"

The very calmness of the two at the table disconcerted the dispatcher. He held the message in his hand and shuffled his feet. "Give me your dispatch," said McCloud, impatiently.

Quite unable to take his hollow eyes off Dicksie, poor Rooney advanced, handed the telegram to McCloud, and beat an awkward retreat.

McCloud devoured the words of the message at a glance.

"Ah!" he cried, "this is from Gordon himself, sent from Sleepy Cat. He must be safe and unhurt! Listen!

Three of the Tower W men trailed into Williams Cache. In resisting arrest this morning, Du Sang was wounded and is dying to-night. Two prisoners, Karg and Seagrue. G. S.

"Those are Gordon's initials; it is the signature over which he telegraphs me. You see, this was sent last night long after Blake left. He is safe; I will take my life on it."

Dicksie sank back while McCloud re-read the message. "Oh, isn't that a relief?" she exclaimed. "But how can it be? I can't understand it at all, but he is safe, isn't he? I was heart-broken when I heard he was killed. Marion ought to know of this," she said, rising. "I am going to tell her."

"And may I come over after I tell Rooney Lee to repeat this to headquarters?"

"Why, of course, if you want to."

When McCloud reached the cottage Dicksie met him. "Katie Dancing's mother is sick, and she has gone home. Poor Marion is all alone this morning, and half dead with a sick headache," said Dicksie. "But I told her, and she said she shouldn't mind the headache now at all."

"But what are you going to do?"

"I am going to get dinner; do you want to help?"

"I'm going to help."

"Oh, you are? That would be very funny."

"Funny or not, I'm going to help."

"You would only be in the way."

"You don't know whether I should or not."

"I know I should do much better if you would go back and run the railroad a few minutes."

"The railroad be hanged. I am for dinner."

"But I will get dinner for you."

"You need not. I can get it for myself."

"You are perfectly absurd, and if we stand here disputing, Marion won't have anything to eat."

They went into the kitchen disputing about what should be cooked. At the end of an hour they had two fires going—one in the stove and one in Dicksie's cheeks. By that time it had been decided to have a luncheon instead of a dinner. Dicksie attempted some soup, and McCloud found a strip of bacon, and after he had cooked it, Dicksie, with her riding-skirt pinned up and her sleeves delightfully rolled back, began frying eggs. When Marion, unable longer to withstand the excitement, appeared, the engineer, flushed with endeavor, was making toast.

The three sat down at table together. They found they had forgotten the coffee, but Marion was not allowed to move from her chair. When the coffee was made ready the bacon had been eaten and more had to be fried. McCloud proved able for any part of the program, and when they rose it was four o'clock and too late, McCloud declared, to go back to the office that afternoon.

Marion and Dicksie, after a time, attempted jointly to get rid of him, but they found they could not, so the three talked about Whispering Smith. When the women tried to discourage McCloud by talking hats he played the wheezy piano, and when Dicksie spoke about going home he declared he would ride home with her. But Dicksie had no mind that he should, and when he asked to know why, without realizing what a flush lingered in his face, she said only, no; if she had reasons she would give none. McCloud persisted, because under the flush about his eyes was the resolve that he would take one long ride that evening, in any event. He had made up his mind for that ride—a longer one than he had ever taken before, or expected ever to take again—and would not be balked.

Dicksie, insisting upon going home, went so far as to have her horse brought from the stable. To her surprise, a horse for McCloud came over with it. Quiet to the verge of solemnity, but with McCloud following, Dicksie walked with admirable firmness out of the shop to the curb. McCloud gave her rein to her, and with a smile stood waiting to help her mount.

She was drawing on her second glove. "You are not going with me."

"You'll let me ride the same road, won't you—even if I can't keep up?"

Dicksie looked at his mount. "It would be difficult to keep up, with that horse."

"Would you ride away from me just because you have a better horse?"

"No, not just because I have a better horse."

He looked steadily at her without speaking.

"Why must you ride home with me when I don't want you to?" she asked, reproachfully. Fear had come upon her and she did not know what she was saying. She saw only the expression of his eyes and looked away, but she knew that his eyes followed her. The sun had set. The deserted street lay in the white half-light of a mountain evening, and the day's radiance was dying in the sky. In lower tones he spoke again, and she turned deadly white.

"I've wanted so long to say this, Dicksie, that I might as well be dead as to try to keep it back any longer. That's why I want to ride home with you if you are going to let me." He turned to stroke her horse's head. Dicksie stood seemingly helpless. McCloud slipped his finger into his waistcoat pocket and held something out in his hand. "This shell pin fell from your hair that night you were at camp by the bridge—do you remember? I couldn't bear to give it back."

Dicksie's eyes opened wide. "Let me see it. I don't think that is mine."

"Great heaven! Have I been carrying Marion Sinclair's pin for a month?" exclaimed McCloud. "Well, I won't lose any time in returning it to her, at any rate."

"Where are you going?" Dicksie's voice was faint.

"I'm going to give Marion her pin."

"Do nothing of the sort! Come here! Give it to me."

"Dicksie, dare you tell me, after a shock like that, it really is your pin?"

"Oh, I don't know whose pin it is!"

"Why, what is the matter?"

"Give me the pin!" She put her hands unsteadily up under her hat. "Here, for heaven's sake, if you must have something, take this comb!" She slipped from her head the shell that held her knotted hair. He caught her hand and kissed it, and she could not get it away.

"You are dear," murmured Dicksie, "if you are silly. The reason I wouldn't let you ride home with me is because I was afraid you might get shot. How do you suppose I should feel if you were killed? Or, don't you think I have any feeling?"

"But, Dicksie, is it all right?"

"How do I know? What do you mean? I will not let you ride home with me, and you will not let me ride home alone. Tie Jim again. I am going to stay with Marion all night."

GRASPS COMPANION; TWO NEARLY DROWN.

Miss Annie Belford, daughter of Freeholder Samuel Belford, and Miss Elsie Neusche, were rescued from drowning in the Delaware River at the girls' bathing beach, opposite Cold Eddy, Belvidere, Monday afternoon. Miss Gardner, Miss Neusche and Miss Helen Hopler had ventured out some distance from shore. Miss Neusche could not swim, and when the trio found themselves in deep water she began struggling and screaming. Grasping Miss Belford, she pulled her down, and both disappeared. Meanwhile Miss Hopler attracted the attention of those on shore.

William Hurlburt, a young man visiting here from Buffalo, N. Y., leaped in the water and swam to where the girls were struggling. At the same time Mrs. Chris B. Snyder jumped into her boat and rowed to the young women. The two managed to get hold of the drowning girls, and with great effort brought them ashore in an exhausted condition. A friend gave them a little stimulant and they were taken to their homes. Three persons have been saved from drowning here this season.

NEVIUS TALKS TO GRAND ARMY MEN

Delegates to the national encampment of the G. A. R. yesterday took up the work to be done in the interest of their organization. Meeting in executive session in Armory Hall, they entered upon an order of business which commenced with the report of the committee on credentials and included the appointment of standing committees, the annual address of the commander-in-chief, the reading of officials' reports, the holding of memorial exercises, the nomination of officers and the exemplification of ritual.

The nomination of officers and the address of Commander Henry M. Nevius, of Red Bank, were the features of the session. It was expected that resolutions in favor of certain pension and other legislation would cause animated debate. Some excitement may be generated today, when a new commander-in-chief will be elected and the next meeting place decided, although it is generally believed that former Governor Samuel R. Vansant, of Minnesota, is the choice of the one, and Atlantic City for the other.

Business sessions were also held yesterday by the women of the G. A. R., the Woman's Relief Corps, the Army Nurses, the Daughters of Veterans and the Naval War Veterans.

Commander-in-Chief Nevius in his address said in part:

"I have received a warm and cordial greeting wherever I have gone.

"I was greeted with great cordiality on my visit in the Southern departments, and I am satisfied that, were it not for those who did not participate in the great struggle, but who are still laboring to keep alive the lost cause, there would be no difficulty in cementing the bonds of union between the North and South.

"On December 31, 1907, the members in good standing of the Grand Army of the Republic numbered 225,157, and there were 18,489 on the suspended list. There were remaining in good standing on December 31, 1909, 220,616, and 8,539 remaining suspended. The number of comrades reported as having died between December 31, 1907, and December 31, 1908, was 10,124. Our gains during the fiscal year by muster, transfer, reinstatement and gain from delinquent reports total 21,154."

The speaker told of difficulties encountered in securing round trip rate of one fare to the Salt Lake encampment, saying:

"You will observe, comrades, that I have labored earnestly and zealously with the great railroad corporations in the interest of the G. A. R. for a reasonable rate to and from our encampment for the men who from '61 to '65 bore the brunt of battle and saved the Union—one and indivisable—and that the great railroad corporations which girdle it with their tracks have no feeling of patriotism and make no concessions to the comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic."

NAMES BESLER STATE SANITARIUM MANAGER.

W. G. Besler, of this city, vice-president and general manager of the New Jersey Central, has been appointed by Governor Fort to succeed Dr. J. Walter Ingham, of Phillipsburg, as a member of the board of managers of the State Sanitarium at Glen Gardner.

Through Mr. Besler it was said the Governor is hopeful that an end will come to differences which have existed between members of the board as to the methods to pursue in the management of the institution. That there has been friction in the board in the past the Governor is well aware, and evidence of the fact is found in the number of resignations among the managers.

One of the points of controversy has been the adoption of means to curtail the expenditures. The per capita cost for maintenance last year was $12 a week for each inmate. This has been reduced to $10.28 a week, and the board expects that by practising economy there may be still further reductions.

SLEEPY KITTEN STOPS TRAIN.

A sleepy little kitten, Tuesday night, held up the Perth Amboy local for about five minutes a few hundred yards south of the station of the Pennsylvania Railroad, Elizabeth. The tracks enter Elizabeth from the south in a wide curve, and the engineer, looking out of his cab, saw a dark spot on the rail as he started to slow up. He made it out to be a kitten, curled up on the rail, and he stopped his engine a few feet from it. The fireman got out and picked the kitten up. It was fast asleep.

Passengers, craning their necks out of the windows, saw the fireman turn the kitten over to the conductor, who told the story. Two women passengers made a simultaneous quest for the animal and one offered a dollar. The other raised her to two, and they bid against each other until the kitten was passed over for a $5 bill, which the conductor handed to the engineer.

BASEBALL.

In this inning Cliff gave two free passes besides hitting two batsmen. Aside from this erratic work the Plainfielder gave a good account of himself.

Plainfield vs. Elizabeth.

The Plainfield Athletic club and the North End Athletic club of Elizabeth, will present their strongest lineups when they meet on the Clinton avenue grounds tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. As the game will undoubtedly be full of ginger there ought to be a large attendance to encourage the locals. The teams will line up in the following order: North End—Seymour, 2b; Jones, 3b; Knowles, ss; Dick, cf; Martin, 1b; Palmer, lf; Stanley, c; Brennan, p; Springer, rf. Plainfield A. C.—Hann, ss; Johnston or Slocum, p; Luthman, 3b; Moran, 2b; Meyer, 1b; Mooney, c; Miller, lf; Ayers, cf; Blazier, rf. The main line trolley car passes within one block of the grounds.

Wants "Red" Waller.

CAMPMEETING RESORT TAXED.

Exempt from lot taxation for forty years, the Ocean Grove Campmeeting Association yesterday was assessed for property to the value of $4,064,800, when T. Nelson Lillagore, assessor of Neptune township, of which Ocean Grove forms a part, made his return to the county taxing authorities. His duplicate shows that the lessees of Ocean Grove lots are not named in his assessment, but that the association is made responsible for the payment of the new tax.

When the State Board for the Equalization of Taxes some months ago held that all campmeeting grounds were subject to taxation, following a decision of the Supreme Court, meeting of the county taxing authorities was held in Ocean Grove to decide whether the association or the lessees should pay the tax. The county board ruled that the lessees must pay the tax, and they appealed to the State board.

The higher body reversed the County Board, whereupon the association certioraried the case to the Supreme Court, from which tribunal another decision is awaited. The time having arrived to make the annual levy and fix the tax rate, Assessor Lillagore had no course but to obey the adjudication of the State board and levy against the association.

GETS PAY FOR LAND THE OCEAN HAS STOLEN.

That ocean front property at Atlantic City not only has a high but a rapidly increasing value, has been shown by a grant made by the State Riparian Commission, for which a price four times greater than the customary figure was paid. The grant was made to Howard G. Harris, of Atlantic City, and $20 a foot for 300 feet between Nashville and Franklin avenues, in Ventnor, was given to the State for the riparian title.

The grant was allowed by the commission upon the repeated request of Harris, and had to do with the settlement of the estate of John Trenwith, of Philadelphia, who was a wealthy owner of property in Ventnor and Chelsea. The sale to Harris by the estate was made by order of the court, and the selling agent was the Guarantee Trust Company, of Atlantic City. Just what the nature of the sale was, or its terms, the riparian commissioners were not informed, but enough was disclosed, it is understood, to lead to the belief title to the tract had been given which could not be successfully proven afterward without the riparian grant.

The Trenwith estate had been held in trust by the Guarantee Trust Company for many years, and the tract in Ventnor recently was sold. The purchaser later, so the story goes, found his ocean frontage was all right as far as breadth went, but was shy many feet in depth. Investigation proved the ocean had washed in and away much of the beach front, and that the title had been given for the full acreage in the original tract as it at first came into the trust company's hands.

The purchaser, it is related, felt he should have all the land he had paid for, and expressed a willingness to be satisfied with riparian rights to the tract in question. Somebody had to get these for him, it is understood, and they cost $6,000 for the 300 feet frontage. Whether the trust company lost this amount because of the defective title has not been brought out, but Harris was given the grant, which was allowed on July 31 last.

It has been a long time since any riparian grants have been made in this vicinity, the last highest price for the same being $5 a foot. The entire riparian frontage at this resort is now under control of the city, but Ventnor, which adjoins Atlantic City on the south, has never taken advantage of the act, except as far as ownership by individuals is concerned. It was learned yesterday that the State has never received as high a price for ocean front rights, although a slightly higher price has been asked before by the commission.

LUSITANIA CUTS RUN BY NEARLY 3 HOURS.

The Lusitania, of the Cunard line, reached port last night with a new record to her credit. She crossed by the long course in four days sixteen hours and forty minutes, nearly three hours better than her best previous performances. Her average speed was 25.65 knots and her daily runs, beginning Sunday, were 57, 655, 639, 640, 625 and 274 knots.

The Lusitania is still forty-five minutes behind the best time made by her sister ship, the Mauretania.

ANSWER FILED IN ODD FELLOWS' HOME SUIT.

An answer has been filed in the Court of Chancery in the injunction proceedings instituted by Sumner Lodge No. 180, I. O. O. F., of Jersey City, to restrain the Odd Fellows' Home of New Jersey, which formerly conducted the Odd Fellows' Home in Trenton, from distributing its assets. These include $12,000 received from the grand lodge of New Jersey for the transfer of the Odd Fellows' Home property to the grand lodge.

The defendant corporation denies the allegation of the bill that all the money received by it from donations and other sources was expended for the support and maintenance of the home, claiming that $4,000 was expended to pay part of the mortgage on the property, $2,500 was deposited in the bank, and $4,000 of the purchase price of the home is also on deposit. It appears from the answer that the donations received for the home were put with the money received by the corporation as dues from the lodges holding membership in the corporation. The fund thus mingled was used for the support of the home, except the balance remaining in the hands of the corporation and including the $12,000 received from the grand lodge.

It is denied that there was any understanding with the grand lodge that it was to have any equity in the assets of the defendant corporation. It is contended that even should the court decide that the money of the corporation is a trust fund it is nevertheless entitled under its constitution and bylaws to adminster the trust itself without consultation with either the grand lodge or Sumner Lodge. The latter is one of the fifty-eight lodges of the State composing the corporation of the Odd Fellows' Home. It claims that the assets should be distributed pro rata among these fifty-eight lodges. A schedule filed with the bill shows that Sumner Lodge contributed $2,257 to the Home, the total contributed by all the lodges in the corporation being $56,299.

THIS BURGLAR HAD THIRTY-FIVE SWEETHEARTS.

Many burglars have kept diaries, but it remained for Edgar Weidner to keep a complete list of his 109 stealings as well as a list of his alleged thirty-five sweethearts in three States. Weidner, who was sent to the Eastern Penitentiary by Judge Endlich, of Easton, Pa., under an indeterminate sentence, after pleading guilty to burglary and larceny, is considered by the county authorities to be a dangerous man.

County Detective Merkel was able to follow Weidner's movements and procure the information which finally broke down the prisoner's story and led him to confess the truthful history of a pocket diary, which Weidner dropped while pursued at Lyons, where he was caught by the Kutztown authorities.

Weidner broke jail at Boyertown, after his original arrest for deserting his wife. On the fly-leaf of this diary is written his name, "Edgar Weidner, of Kingsland, and Lyndhurst, N. J., and a native of Reading," in bold letters. Reading residences where he boarded are then mentioned.

Next is a list of thirty-five alleged sweethearts. The first twenty-five on the list are Reading women, one from New Jersey, a Kutztown widow, five Harrisburg favorites, two Philadelphia friends and another from Easton. Weidner deserted his wife when she was confined at the Reading hospital.

After the names and addresses of his sweethearts follows a list of 109 places which Weidner had evidently visited during his criminal escapades. These towns are located in Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey.

He left Kutztown, as he stated, on April 19, and came to Reading, leaving that city for Sinking Spring, Wernersville, Womelsdorf and thence to Harrisburg, whence he went to Philadelphia by way of Lancaster. He then proceeded to New Jersey by way of Camden, visiting Trenton, Princeton and Plainfield, crossing last from Phillipsburg to Easton. He then visited forty Pennsylvania towns.

In the places visited Weidner, according to his figures, got away with $403, the items ranging from $1 to $43.

Mrs. Schenck Still Suffers.

Mrs. I. C. Schenck, of John street, who was injured in a fall down the embankment near the Grant avenue station last Thursday night, is still confined to the bed and is suffering great pain. The physician in attendance says that the present trouble is due to the shock attending the fall. Mrs. Schenck attended the Methodist Sunday shcool excursion last Thursday and fell while alighting from the train on the return trip.

THAW FIGHT IS TO BE RENEWED

Harry Thaw was not taken to Mount Vernon today; but his attorney, Charles Morschauser, went there to be present when the order of commitment was signed by Justice Mills in chambers, and, although he said yesterday that he didn't think so, there was a possibility that Mr. Morschauser would argue that the prisoner be transferred from Matteawan to some other asylum. There is small chance of a transfer.

The ruling of the Justice was that Thaw must go back to Mateawan. Of that place the prisoner has a horror, and so has his mother, who painted a picture of the life there when she testified in the recent proceedings which was anything but agreeable.

The Thaw family has not retired from the firing line, despite the adverse decision and accompanying opinion of Supreme Court Justice Mills, and they may be expected in the near future to make another try to obtain the release of Harry. Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, who has stood by her son unflinchingly in the face of various setbacks, made it plain today that she would stand by her son in his fight for freedom.

ITALIAN MURDERER IS SHOT DEAD IN HIS CELL.

The quick report of four shots disturbed the peace of the Newark city jail this morning, and when it was over Angelo Capri, a prisoner, lay dead on the stone floor. Keeper John Corby had shot him in defending two other keepers, with whom the man had engaged in a desperate conflict.

Capri, lunging right and left with a length of stiff wire which had been used as a brace for a chair and was sharpened to razor keenness, drove Keepers Matthew Smith and John Bryant before him, and they were hard pressed when Keeper Corby placed himself in front of them and fired.

WU RECALLED.

Mystery Surrounds Action of Government.

Wu Ting-fang, the Minister of China to the United States, has been recalled and will be succeeded by Chang Yin Tang, deputy vice-president of the Chinese Board of Foreign Affairs. The reasons for this action on the part of the Chinese Government are not known here. Officials of the Chinese Legation say they are in the dark and the State Department has not been informed officially of the intention of Pekin to withdraw the Minister.

All that the legation will say is that Mr. Wu is recalled to Pekin for further assignment. The Minister himself is now in South America. He is Minister to Peru as well as to the United States, and he left here several months ago for Lima, where he intended to present his credentials to President Leguia, of Peru.

A Youthful Reasoner.

A teacher in a midland town in England is noted, says a writer in M. A. P., for his patriotic fervor. One day in class, while in a particularly uplifted mood, he turned to one of his pupils an average English boy of 12.

"Now Tommy," said he, "tell us what you would think if you saw the Union Jack waving proudly over the field of battle."

"I should think," replied Tommy, "that the wind was blowing."—Youth's Companion.

At Proctor's.

No better program of vaudeville has been seen at this popular place of entertainment than is on tap this week. The "Same Old Story," by St. James and Dacre, and Maud Le Laura, the "physical culture girl," in fact the whole program is one worth seeing. The films d'art are as usual away above the ordinary and are attracting hundreds of people nightly.

DAY OF ACCIDENTS FOR PLAINFIELD EXCURSIONISTS

Mrs. Anna White, of Plainfield avenue; Miss Mary Jones, of East Third street, and Leon Jones, of East Third street, all sustained injuries while enjoying amusements at Bellewood Park yesterday.

Mrs. White was riding on a merry go-round and while it was going at a good rate of speed fell off of one of the wooden horses, striking her head and injuring her shoulder. Miss Mary Jones, who saw that she was falling, hastened to her aid, and in so doing was thrown to the ground herself, spraining her right arm and striking her head also. Leon Jones struck his head, also in being thrown from one of the flying swings. This afternoon all three of the injured people were reported to be convalescent. Mrs. White and Miss Jones are under the care of Dr. J. C. Anderson. The former was taken home on a train last night after the accident, while the rest of the excursionists made the trip from Bound Brook to this city by trolley car.

3,000 colored people enjoyed the attractions at Bellewood Park, and from the Mt. Zion and Shiloh Baptist churches of this city, there were six large trolley cars full of the excursionists. Save for the foregoing accidents the excursion was a complete success in every respect.

Arrangements were completed yesterday by Director Denegar, of the convention bureau, for the annual State convention of the Patriotic Order Sons of America, which will open in Asbury Park Tuesday. About 500 delegates will attend. Meetings will be held in the Y. M. C. A. building on Sewall avenue, where Mayor Appleby will extend the freedom of the city at the opening session.

A canvass of the hotels for accommodations is now being made by the bureau, it being quite a problem to comfortably house such a large delegation for one night at this season. An information bureau will be opened at the St. James Hotel Tuesday morning and here all delegates will report and be assigned to their hotels in charge of guides supplied by the local camp.

—The finest fruit of the season is now being received by Neuman Bros. For tomorrow there will be fancy Delaware peaches by the basket, fancy Maryland muskmelons, Bartlett pears and plums.

N. Y. TO 'FRISCO BY AUTO

Major Gen. Leonard Wood Will Send a Message to Major-Gen. J. F. Weston.

WILL USE MITCHELL "RANGER."

Private Parrott, N. Y. N. G., Selected To Carry Dispatch Across the Country in Fully Equipped Car.

Not to be outdone by the foreign governments in seeking the greatest results from experiments in aviation and the practical adoption of the high class automobile for purposes of warfare, the United States government is pushing every advantage at its command to solve the air problem and minimize the dangers in utilizing the motor car in times of peril to the nation. Plans have been perfected at Washington for exhaustive tests in the use of the automobile, in dispatch service.

On the eighteenth of this month the first "transcontinental" organized war car ever intrusted with a military mission embracing practical road work and official dispatches bearing features will leave New York bound for San Francisco.

Major-General Leonard A. Wood, commanding the department of the East, has prepared an official dispatch to be delivered to Major-General John F. Weston, commander of the department of California, which is to be carried across the continent in an automobile by a military man who will endeavor to overcome numerous obstacles—constructive, from a military standpoint—adhere to a fixed running schedule, and visit such military posts on the long, transcontinental route, as the courier in charge of the expedition may elect to include in his itinerary.

M. E. Parrott, of Poughkeepsie, a private in the New York State National Guard, a trained soldier, enthusiastic automobile tourist and a graduate of a military school that has made a specialty of training men for large military operations in the field, has been appointed to bear the dispatch from General Wood to General Weston.

The machine selected for the test is the Mitchell "Ranger," a four cylinder Mitchell touring car, the first 1910 Model turned out at the Racine factory, under the personal supervision of Designer Bate. The car will have no special mechanical equipment, the motor and all parts of the frame, axles, wheels, springs, etc., being the same as the Mitchell Motor Car Company will supply for all of its 1910 output. In the tonneau, however, will be carried shelter tents and sleeping paraphernalia for private Parrott, his driver and the remainder of the khaki-clad detail assigned to the car.

The Mitchell "Ranger," in the estimation of the trained soldiers who will make this long trip, is especially adapted to the diversified highways and trails that will be used. With its clearance, roadability, and tried motor and breaking features the dispatch car may be depended upon to go through with a "perfect score" each day.

Specifications submitted to General Wood for the motor car to be used in making this memorable test provide for a modest legend to be painted on the bonnet of the "war car" briefly stating its mission.

Private Parrot has elected to wear the regulation khaki uniform of the army service and all who travel with him will be similarly attired. The official driver of the Mitchell "Ranger" will be Frank X. Zirbes, well known as the pilot of the Mitchell car in -1908 "around the clock" endurance race at Milwaukee, Wis., and other big events, who will hold the wheel of the war car all the way from New York to San Francisco.

Private Parrott will start from Governor's Island in New York city and follow in a general way the route taken two years ago by the New York-Paris racers.

It is not unlikely that the Mitchell "Ranger" will make a few detours in order to report at the most prominent military posts slightly off the route.

Plainfielders in the West.

Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Young, of Craig place, who left on August 3 for a two months' tour of the western States writes from Salt Lake City to friends here, that she is having a delightful trip, the weather being ideal. Their trip will include Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco, the Alaska-Youkon Exposition and returning, will visit Yellowstone Park, Chicago and other places of interest. They will return the latter part of September.

Will Hold Country Dance.

The Wolf Hill Athletic Club of Gilette will hold a country dance at that place on Saturday night, August 28. A four-horse stage will leave Front and Somerset streets at 8 o'clock sharp for Gilette.

NEW IDEA CANDIDATES

Republican Faction Will Have Councilmanic Ticket This Fall, 'Tis Said.

SEVEN COUNCILMEN RETIRE.

Councilman Wilson The Only One Who Has Not Asked to Be Returned—Tax Collector Favored.

There is no question but that the fight in the approaching campaign in this city will be over the election of the three Councilmen-at-large, and it is said that the New Idea faction of the Republican party will make a strong effort to secure additional representation in the city body. The terms of Councilmen F. E. Mygatt, C. C. Randolph and F. L. Montgomery, who are members at large, will expire. All will doubtless look for a renomination. The ward councilmen whose terms expire are W. W. Wilson and Herbert Buxton in the Fourth; George S. Clay in the Second, and W. L. Gloak in the First. In all seven councilmen will retire, and in addition the terms of Tax Collector W. R. Townsend and W. S. Tyler as a member of the Board of Education, will expire.

It is said that Councilmen Mygatt, C. C. Randolph and Montgomery will again be placed in nomination for another term, but even though the Democrats should by default fail to name a ticket in opposition, it seems to be certain that there will be a contest. The direct primaries make a lively time possible, for as a nomination will almost be equivalent to an election, that will be made the battleground.

Councilman Wilson, it is said, owing to business reasons, is not anxious to serve another term, but no doubt his friends will try to persuade him to accept a renomination. There is no apparent opposition to Councilman Clay in the Second ward, and there is no question but that he will be returned for a full term.

Thus far the New Idea members have not disclosed their plans for the local campaign and there has been no public announcement as to possible candidates.

Tax Collector W. R. Townsend will doubtless again be placed in nomination. He has given satisfaction as a collector, according to his many friends, and it is expected that he will have the full support of his party.

There seems to be no question but that Mr. Tyler will be returned to the Board of Education. He is particularly strong in his ward, as has been shown in past years when he was a member of the Common Council. His friends say that if he wants to continue as a member of the board he can do so. It is not at all likely that he will have any opposition.

DOUBLE RUNAWAY CAUSES CONSIDERABLE EXCITEMENT.

A double runaway took place in the borough yesterday afternoon when a horse owned by Louis K. Hyde attached to a light trap ran away down Mountain avenue towards Somerset street, and there collided with a Public Service Corporation wagon causing the horse attached to it, to run away also.

Mr. Hyde's horse took fright at an automobile and broke away from where it was standing near the lodge. No one was in the rig at the time. Chief of Police eGorge Weiss, of the borough, saw the runaway and stopped the Hyde horse, while pedestrians along Somerset street caught the other animal, which was going at a good pace towards this city.

Neither of the wagons was damaged to any extent and the horses were uninjured.

Judge Enjoys Auto Trip.

Judge and Mrs. William N. Newcorn returned last night from an automobile trip to Long Branch. The trip was made in Mr. Newcorn's new Mitchell car. Good roads were reported most of the way, save for one bad stretch. There were no breakdowns or holdups for speeding, and the trip was ideal in every respect. Though the trip was made by Mr. Newcorn's family, going to Long Branch, his daughter, Miss Netta Newcorn, and niece, Miss Jessie Levy, of Pittsburg, remained at the shore as the guests of Mrs. Newcorn's sister, who has a cottage there.

KEAN ON G. O. P. OUTING

BOOM FOR VIVIAN LEWIS.

Politicians Seem to Favor Him for Gubernatorial Candidate—Big Plainfield Turnout.

The Steamer Isabelle, with 500 good and faithful Republicans aboard, left Elizabethport at 10:30 o'clock this morning for the annual outing of the G. O. P. of Union county to Rockaway Beach. It was planned to start at 10 o'clock, but a telephone message was received from Vivian Lewis that he intended making the trip, but would be a little late. In consequence the boat was held up for a half hour.

Today's trip is a notable one in several respects. United States Senator John Kean is "among those present" for the first time on a similar outing, and it is expected that the popular Union county man will receive a cordial reception. There are nearly one hundred Plainfielders in the party, headed by County Chairman F. H. Smith.

It is expected that a quiet Union county boom will be started today for Vivian Lewis as a gubernatorial candidate. It is known that he has aspirations in that direction and will doubtless accept the opportunity to get the support of the county members of the party, as well as the leaders.

Other booms started were for F. H. Smith as a candidate for renomination as county register, and James C. Calvert as country clerk. Every member of the party was supplied with a badge bearing the name of Mr. Smith and Mr. Calvert.

At the beach an old-time clambake was enjoyed. During the afternoon the time was spent playing all kinds of games, including baseball, and concluding with a fat men's race. The day's outing was concluded with a sight-seeing trip about New York harbor.

Among the Plainfielders in the party are County Chairman F. H. Smith, Andrew McCardell, Councilmen Herbert Buxton, Frank Dewitt Randolph, Charles H. Dunham, Alexander D. Ayres, James Stewart, John D. Townsend, William R. Townsend, Joseph Bowman, George Foster, Geo. J. Tobin, Charles Ward, John Mortimer and Winfield S. Angleman.

ITALIANS CELEBRATE FEAST OF ASSUMPTION

The annual celebration of the feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary was started by the local Italians early this morning and delegations of Italians from Dunellen, New Market, Westfield and Scotch Plains joined the Plainfielders in a celebration of mass at St. Joseph's church at 9:30 o'clock. There were about 400 Italians at the mass, which was celebrated by Rev. Father Miller.

An Italian band arrived from Newark early today, and has been parading the streets and giving concerts in front of various business places morning and afternoon. There are twenty-six musicians under the leadership of Major Campione, and the music is excellent. The band will render a program of Italian national music and opera selections at Concert Park, near Tier's Lake, tonight, when there will be an elaborate display of fireworks.

The celebration this year is being conducted under the auspices of the Plainfield Sick and Benefit Association, and the money raised will be devoted to local Italian charity.

Washington Rock Popular.

Washington Rock continues to be the favorite rendezvous for picnicking parties in this vicinity, despite the undeveloped section of the mountain in which it is located. Parties have been visiting the rock almost steadily during the past five weeks, and there seems to be no abatement in the number as the summer advances.

Investigating Health Conditions.

The assistant inspector of the State Board of Health has investigated conditions at Bonegut brook, Dunellen, which were alleged to be unsanitary, owing to residents along the brook throwing refuse into it. The matter will receive attention later, but for the immediate present nothing will be done.

Collector Brown Improved.

Tax Collector George F. Brown, of the borough, who has been seriously ill for a long time, having been confined to his room for months, shows signs of slight improvement and is now able to get about the house with assistance.

HEALTH INSPECTOR ACTS; M'INTYRE IS BURIED

After having served his country in the Civil War in the Eighth U. S colored troops, William McIntyre, who has lived here for nearly half a century, and who died Monday friendless and poor, was buried yesterday through the generosity of Henry DeMott, of Somerset street. The Borough Health Inspector viewed the body of the dead man and ordered that it be buried.

Relatives were consulted but no money could be raised to bear the cost of burial. As he had lost his discharge papers no assistance could be obtained from the government. Meanwhile the need of burial was urgent. The borough Overseer of the Poor was consulted in the matter. He talked with Mayor Townsend; but no money was forthcoming. A meagre return of $10 from a life insurance company was made, but this lacked $15 of the necessary amount.

Becoming disgusted with the procedure of events, Mr. DeMott bore the expense personally, and the veteran negro received a respectable burial.

STRANGE WOMAN ROBS DUNELLEN MAN OF $30

A clever robbery was prepetrated in Dunellen Thursday afternoon, when an unknown woman took $30 from the top of the safe in the office of William H. Cole, a coal and grain dealer of that place. Mr. Cole left the money on top of the safe while he stepped into a back room for a second, intending to unlock the combination when he returned. As the office was deserted at the time he did this with impunity.

When he went up to the safe a few minutes later to put the money in it, the greenbacks were gone. For the moment he thought that he put the bills in his pocket, and so made a search through them as well as about the office. When he convinced himself that he had left the bills on the top of the safe the idea of a robbery dawned in his mind and he went outside to look for the thief. The time that he had taken to search the office and through his pockets had evidently given the thief time to get away for there was no one in sight. He informed the police of the matter and the only clue is that furnished by some pedestrians who said that they say a strange woman in the vicinity of the office earlier in the afterinoon. Marshal Sliney is now working on the case.

STATE AUTO FUNDS TO IMPROVE COUNTY ROADS

Now that the Union County Board of Freeholders will receive about $10,000 for use on the county roads, that being the county share of the fund collected by the State from motor vehicle registration, licenses and fines, Major King, director of the board, has been making a list of the roads upon which the freeholders wish the money applied. Before the money will be paid, however, the roads to be improved, must be designated and be approved by the State commissioner.

Major King will shortly forward this information to Commissioner Gilkyson. The roads selected are Seven Bridge road and Morris avenue, Springfield; St. George's avenue, Linden; North avenue, Garwood and Westfield; South avenue, Fanwood, and Mountain avenue, Scotch Plains.

The funds which is now being divided has been accumulating for three or four years. The law first said that the money in this fund could only be used for State Aid Roads. Another law was passed the next year including county roads and last year another law was passed which allows still more latitude. In every instance, however, the State commissioner has to be satisfied that the money is rightly used for the improvement of roads which need it. Hereafter, it is probable that the money will be divided among the counties annually.

Attended a Luncheon.

Mrs. C. D. VanZandt and Miss Emma VanZandt, of Fairview avenue, attended a luncheon, which was given by Mrs. R. Droescher, of Cranford, Thursday afternoon. Covers were laid for ten and guests were present from Cranford, Westfield and Plainfield.

CLOSE STATE CAMP AT SEA GIRT TODAY

During the legislative session at Trenton last winter an attempt was made to cut off the annual appropriation for the encampment of the National Guard in State camp here. Judging from the thousands who have visited the camp during the annual encampment, which closed today at noon, there is no more popular institution in the State than the Guard, and the majority of visitors at Camp Fort believe the Sea Girt encampment is necessary to maintain it and cause it to retain its attractiveness for the young men of the State.

No regiment in the history of the Guard has had such a gruelling as the Second, which breaks camp here today at noon. The men of the regiment "hiked" down from Trenton, reaching here after sixty miles of hard tramping, footsore and weary, last Tuesday. Being the last regiment to leave they will have to take down all the tents on the grounds and store them and everything else in the big warehouse. This is the first season a regiment has been compelled to do this work.

The men of the regiment will face the brigade headquarters of General Dennis Collins at one o'clock today, when, to the strains of "The Star Spangled Banner," the big flags will be run down, the men will then march past the "little white house," to be informally reviewed by the Governor, and the military life of Sea Girt will be officially closed for the year.

The regular army officers who have been here this year watching the work of the New Jersey militia stated that they had never been in a camp of State militia where the men and officers had taken such an earnest interest in their work as in this encampment here this summer.

Governor Fort will remain at the State cottage here for several weeks, and Sea Girt will thus continue to be the summer capital until some time in September.

CHARLES DILTS PAYS EXTRA FINE FOR RUNNING AWAY.

Charles Dilts, of Jackson avenue, who escaped from Marshall Pope, of the borough police force on July 22, when the latter arrested another man, was fined five dollars this morning by Mayor Townsend in the borough police court.

The police have been on the lookout for Dilts for some time. His partner was fined $2, but as Dilts caused the police extra work in locating him, an additional three dollars was added to his debt.

REV. DR. CHAMBLISS TO ADDRESS S. S. WORKERS

Rev. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, will address the annual convention of the Middlesex county Sunday-schools to be held at the Sayreville M. E. church Thursday, September 9. His address will be given at the closing service of the convention, to be held Thursday evening.

Extensive preparations for the convention are now nearing completion, and a program of especial interest to Sunday-school workers has been arranged by the committee, which is made up of the officers of the Middlesex county association. The opening services will be marked by devotional exercises in charge of Rev. R. R. Stier, pastor of the Sayreville German Presbyterian chruch; Rev. Harold P. Sloan, of the South River M. E. church, and Rev. Samuel Hickman, of the entertaining church.

Evangelistic work in the Sunday-school will be the subject of an address to pastors and leaders by Rev. Abram Duryee, of Hackensack, who is prominent in State Christian Endeavor work. Rev. Mr. Duryee will also conduct a conference on the subject, during the noon intermission. Miss Alice B. Hamlin, who succeeds Miss Rose Scott as superintendent of elementary work, will address the convention on "Missions in the Sunday school." The occasion will mark her first appearance in convention. Rev. E. M. Ferguson, the State secretary, will exhibit a chart showing the progress of the various schols throughout the county and how the work is approaching the standard set down by the State Sunday-school association.

The County Sunday-school association is headed by Rev. F. T. B. Reynolds, of Spotswood, and among its officers are Rev. W. W. Casselberry, formerly pastor of the Dunellen Presbyterian church, who is first vice-president, and Rev. Henry N. Jordan, of Dunellen, who is superintendent of the home department.

TRAIN STARTED EARLY AND SIX EXCURSIONISTS ARE LEFT

Six people were left behind by the Hope Chapel excursion this morning. Rather than miss the day at the shore they took a regular train to Elizabethport, and from there went to the Park.

Previous to this all of the excursion trains have left the station at 7:15 o'clock, but the Hope chapel excursion left at 8 o'clock promptly. Hence the confusion in the schedule time, although the change in time was well advertised; but despite this six persons were left.

THE LAWS EXPLAINED

Technicalities Under High Court Decisions Governed Canfield Case.

LANDLORDS VERSES TENANTS.

Unrecorded Contract May Be Enforced Against Ordinary Creditors of Buyer.

The recent decision handed down by Judge Newcorn in the replevin suit of Alfred Canfield, of Newark, against Louis Kadish, of this city, in which the former sought to recover two pool tables and their accessories, was quite in keeping with precedent and the cases mentioned in his findings prove the Judge's stand as taken.

In a similar suit brought by one Davis and a landlord against a Mrs. Herring in November, 1858, in which household goods were seized and impounded for rent due the defendant, won on the ground that the landlord had no right to seize the goods which were held by Mrs. Herring on a bill of sale.

The then Judge opined that a person holding personal property under a bill of sale has a good title that cannot be impeached for fraud by the vendor, or any person claiming title under him, except a bona fide creditor having a legal lien upon the property.

A distress, or suit, will not lie (stand good) for rent until it is due; and, although the property is not appraised and sold until after the rent is due, the irregularity is not thereby cured but the distrainor (plaintiff) will be liable as a trespasser from the beginning.

The party whose goods are unlawfully distrained does not forfeit or waive any legal right, by not claiming the goods when the distress is made. In other words the party who actually owns the goods does not lose his interests in them when they may be seized illegally.

On the other hand respecting goods held on a duly executed lease the position taken by the Judge in the case of the Singer Mfg. Company in November, 1903, is equally clear. D. Wolffe & Co., sought to restrain the Singer Company from seizing a sewing machine held on a lease by a woman client of the defendant. The judge ruled in this case that as a lease had been duly signed by the woman and only a portion of the amount due on the machine had been paid the company had retained its title to the machine. The legal opinion in this case is, that in order to impound, that is, to seize and hold under restraint goods sold under a lease, the leasing company or individual loses its claim only when the full amount of the money consideration is paid by the purchaser of the property. Such a lease is not a contract for the conditional sale of goods required to be recorded according to law.

There is another phase of the question treated in the suit of Reichman vs. Masker at a later date in which the judge holds that an unrecorded contract for the conditional sale of goods and chatties accompanied by an actual delivery and followed by an actual and continued change of possession of the things contracted to be sold, may be enforced against ordinary creditors of the person contracting to buy the goods.

In the Canfield case L. Moledesky seized two pool table bought on a lease from Canfield by Samuel Thornton, and offered the tables for sale at public auction. The defendant, Kadish bought the tables, although a notice had been served that the goods had not been paid for up to the time of the sale. It was proved at the trial that Thornton had signed a lease and the full amount due on the tables not having been paid, according to the law on the subject the tables really belonged to Canfield. The seizure by Moldesky was for rent due on the premises occupied by the buyer of the tables. As a natural result, according to the rulings in the previous three cases noted by Judge Newcorn, the case was won by Canfield and the costs and counsel fee allowed to Lawyer Robert Newton Crane, who appeared for Canfield.

Tier, superintendent of the primary department of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school, is to give the talk to the children at the King's Daughters' Baby Camp on the Mountain, tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

The rebuilt Almonesson Methodist church will be re-dedicated September 12.

Salem Common Council has decided to install an up-to-date fire alarm system.

A trail of blood leading from the place showed that a burglar who tried to rob the Florence Fundry store was badly injured in the attempt.

French's Hotel at Woodstown, was sold by the heirs of the late Samuel French yesterday at public sale for $37,000 to S. C. Keith, of Newtown, Pa.

In charge of Rev. L. A. Parsels, of Philadelphia, the fifteenth annual National Park Campmeeting was opened yesterday with a large attendance.

Falling off the front porch of her home the little daughter of Charles Osbourne, of Audubon, cut her scalp so severely that six stitches were required to close the wound.

While at work at the I. P. Thomas phosphate works, at Paulsboro, yesterday, Asbury McLain fell sixty feet from a scaffold and was so badly injured that he was removed to Cooper Hospital, Camden.

Three priests yesterday took part in the funeral services of Alonzo Jones, the Camden man who was killed by a trolley car while riding his motorcycle on Monday, at the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

Harry H. Cramm, of Atlantic City, was the first local victim of the new gunning law, which requires a license, for he was arrested yesterday on the Brigantine Beach while shooting snipe. The arrest was made by Game Wardens Anson J. Rider, of Ocean county, and Howard Mathis, of Burlington. Magistrate De Hart imposed a fine of $20.

Professor Munyon, of Philadelphia, appeared in police court yesterday to pay a fine of $25 imposed upon Lewis Gangir, his chauffeur, arrested by the police Wednesday night while spinning down Pacific avenue at a forty-mile clip. Professor Munyon, who was in the machine with a party of friends, averred he had no idea the car was going so fast.

Thrice within the present week has Camden High School been entered by a thief who has something of a vein of humor. Several articles of a minor character have been carried away despite the fact that the police have been looking for the intruder. Yesterday he purloined some money and a box of cigars, leaving this note: "You can't lose me; I'll be back again."

Shooting out of a pipe, where Anthony Marshall, aged forty-five, was working in the plant of the Camden cork plant, at the foot of Jefferson street, last night, a mass of burning cork struck him squarely in the face and over the arms and seriously burned him. The cork is sent through the pipe after being broken and cut, and it is thought the mass ignited because of friction with a stone or nail in the pipe.

Declaring he had been fleeced for $218 by amiable strangers he met on the Boardwalk, Harry Bryson, of Philadelphia, caused the arrest yesterday of John Henry, a well-dressed New Yorker, who, he claims, was the principal in the plot through which he lost his money. Henry, representing himself, it is alleged, to be the manager of the Hotel Worthington, received the Philadelphian's bank roll and disappeared. He was held for trial in $1,000 bail.

Anna Eleha Derr, of Ocean City, has asked the Court of Chancery to grant her a divorce from her husband, George Lewis Derr, the man she twice married, because he has now deserted her. She deposes that she first married the man June 20, 1902. She further says that she again married him, to please her parents, when they had a church wedding in Ocean City, September 20, 1902. The desertion of the man is alleged to have taken place in 1905. She has a child about six years old.

Failing to board the car of a southbound train, which his wife had entered before the train started in Woodbury, yesterday afternoon, Charles Boehn, of Elmer, seized the handrails of a following car, but found the door closed. Fearing if he let go that he would be thrown under the wheels, he was dragged fifty yards before he was shaken off. His face was badly cut and one wrist was wrenched. When the train was stopped and his wife told of his injuries she almost collapsed and had to be assisted to the station.

BUTTER FROM OIL PLANT.

The Standard Oil Company began work this week on a $60,000 plant for the manufacture of butter from oil. The company's chemists, after months of labor, have evolved a process by which they say butter and lard may be manufactured from oil.

At the Tidewater Works in the rear of the new site is the machinery, recently patented, which will be used in transforming the oil into the product. More than $300,000, it is said, was spent before the process was perfected.

The new plant will be erected on a site 400x250 feet, fronting on East Twenty-second street, and adjoining the Tidewater Oil yard. The plant will employ several hundred men.

Scene from "Cripple Creek," at Plainfield Theatre, this Afternoon and Tonight.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

A cast of clever New York artists are engaged in presenting "At Cripple Creek," which will come to the Plainfield theatre tonight, under the direction of Charles H. Wurz. This play is a strong Western melodrama with exceedingly strong climaxes, and with the handsome scenic effects and electrical accessories all that could be wished for. As the name of the play suggests, it has all the local color of a western mining camp and filled with thrills sure to please the most exacting audience. Its success has been phenominal and it is considered to be one of Hal Reid's best efforts. Standing room only has been the order of things since the play was put on the boards.

The pulpit at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will be occupied tomorrow by Rev. Professor J. E. Frame, of Union Theological Seminary. He will also supply the pulpit on Sunday morning, August 22. The evening services are omitted during August.

GETTING READY TO COUNT. THE TOTAL POPULATION.

Acting Secretary McHarg, of the Department of Commerce and Labor and Census Director Durand left yesterday for Beverly, Mass., to confer with President Taft relative to the appointments of the supervisors who will be in immediate charge of the work of taking the thirteenth census beginning April 1, 1910.

Director Durand, before leaving, said that it was necessary for the successful preparation for the enumeration which takes place next April that the supervisors enter on their work fully six months ahead of the census date, making October 15 next the general time limit. Provision is made in the law in case any supervisor has not been appointed and qualified ninety days before April 15 for the appointment by the director of a temporary supervisor or the detail of a census employe to act as supervisor. The director anticipates that October 15 will see all his field chiefs in harness and hard at work.

COMMERCE COMMISSION ORDERS COAL RATES CUT.

The Interstate Commerce Commission Thursday handed down a decision requiring the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, the Pennsylvania, the Western Maryland Railroad and thirty-one connecting carriers east of the Ohio river and north of and in Maryland to reduce the rate on coal from the Georges Creek Basin coal field in Allegany county, Maryland.

The commission ruled that the carriers' rates on coal mined in the Maryland field when destined to places in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New England are unreasonable and discriminatory and ought not to exceed the rates to the same destinations from the Meyersdale, Austen-Newberg and upper Potomac regions in Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

The carriers have until September 20 to reduce their rates in conformity with the commission's decision, but are authorized to put the new rates into effect on three days' notice if they see fit to do so.

CONFESSION FROM THE GRAVE BY BERTSCHIE.

Kingston, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Chief Ward, of the police department here, has received a letter written by Adolph Bertschie just before his electrocution at Trenton this week, in which the writer confesses that he robbed the home of John D. Schoonmaker, a former president of the American Ice Company. He asks forgiveness for stealing silverware worth $1,000, which, he said, he destroyed the next day.

One of Bertschie's aliases was William Travis, and he is believed to have been the same William Travis who secured thousands of dollars in Hudson River cities many years ago by passing himself off as a wealthy orphan, whose property was in litigation.

BIRTH COINCIDENCE TOO IN ST. LOUIS FAMILIES.

Wedded the same day, two brothers, who married sisters at a double wedding, became fathers the same day in the same house in St. Louis.

One of the babies is a boy and the other a girl, and yesterday both of them, lynig on beds in adjoining rooms, were vigorously kicking their heels.

The brothers were Alfred Spino, thirty years old, and Leonard Spino, twenty-four years old. The two sisters before their marriage last October were Maria Belfioine, now twenty-eight, and Gengitina Belfioine, twenty-three. Until six years ago the Spino and Melfioine families were neighbors in Sicily and Palermo.

The National Commission has issued a list of major league players who have been sold to minor leagues under agreements submitted to and approved by the commission. Included in the list is the name of Jack Lapp, the catcher returned to the Philadelphia Athletics by Newark.

Lapp was sold to the Indians for $500, subject to repurchase on August 20. Two weeks ago the Athletics catchers were injured and Mack sent a hurry call to the Newark management asking that Lapp be returned, as he had no catcher and saw a chance of taking the pennant. Wolverton and McGinnity then acted gracefully and allowed the heavy-hitting catcher to rejoin the Athletics, where he made good and has been playing wonderful ball since that time.

"PROPHECY" OF DEATH DRIVES WOMAN INSANE.

Told some months ago by a fortune teller that she would die in September, and that other misfortunes would come upon her family, Mrs. J. Logan Bowman, of Franklin township, near Broadway, brooded constantly over the gloomy prophecy. She professed at first to regard it lightly, but her family noted that she was making preparations for her end. Each seasonable task she performed she declared was "for the last time." The housecleaning, the preserving, the potting of plants for the winter, all these she did, as she said, for "those left behind."

Despite every effort on the part of her relatives to show her the folly of treating the charlatan's prophecy as anything but nonsense, she became more sombre each day.

Finally her mind gave way completely, and early this week it was decided that she must be committed to the insane asylum. She will be sent to Morris Plains today.

RAHWAY POLITICS BOOM.

Indications point toward an exceedingly active politcal contest in Rahway this year. Mayor C. B. Holmes says he will not accept the nomination again. Councilman William H. Trembley, Republican, and F. M. Stillman, Democrat, are mentioned as candidates.

The name of Fred C. Hyer, a young lawyer, has also been brought forward as nominee on the Democratic ticket for the Mayoralty. Mr. Hyer has written a letter, refusing to allow his name to be used in that capacity.

HARRY S. EGERTON TO MANAGE THE THEATRE

Harry S. Egerton, who is to be the manager of the Plainfield theatre, under the new lessees, E. F. Proctor, Sr., and H. S. Sanderson, came to this city today, and will assume his duties at the local playhouse Monday morning, when the recent deal becomes effective. The lessees will also take over Manager Counihan's Perth Amboy theatre, and he will shortly assume his duties as manager for a Cohan & Harris theatre in the Bronx, New York.

Mr. Egerton has been for several years manager of the Royal Theatre, Montreal, Canada, and comes to Plainfield from the Canadian city, where his management was most successful. It is a coincidence that Manager Counihan held his first job in the theatrical business under Mr. Egerton, who at the time was manager of a Chicago theatre.

CO. K. BREAKS CAMP

Local Military Organization Will Reach Home Late This Afternoon.

TREATED WELL AT SEA GIRT.

Sea Girt, Saturday.

The members of Co. K will break camp today and will reach home about 5 o'clock, after one of the most successful trips to Sea Girt. The boys did fine work on the rifle range and when the scores are made public there are sure to be many good ones. Later on the Plainfield boys who failed to improve their rifle work will have another chance.

Thursday, Governor's Day, was a great one for Co. K as well as the entire Second Regiment, which was reviewed by Governor Fort. The Plainfield boys made a most creditable showing and were applauded by the large crowd of spectators.

Perhaps one of the most interesting sights during the week was a shelter tent exhibition drill on Thursday. The members of the regiment went through the drill as one man, disappearing and coming in view again with precision at the command by Col. Dungan.

Yesterday the soldiers devoted their time chiefly to routine, there being nothing of unusual interest, until last night, when the newly-elected corporals and "rookies" were initiated. Sergeant DeCamp was initiated in the presence of the sergeants only and he expressed himself as well satisfied.

Corporal Rothberg was given the three degrees and received all that was coming to him. He thanked the initiatory team for its "gentlemanly work." Corporals Niles and Dow got the same treatment.

Private Gudgeon was put under the pump for his too strenuous part in the initiatory work.

Privates Meeker and Swindlinger had the time of their lives in camp. They are known as "The Heavenly Twins." The latter purchased a marine uniform and attempted to form a company of marines. Several joined and Swindlinger, who took command, had lots of fun giving orders.

Co. K is extremely pleased with the treatment given at the State Camp and the boys feel that the week has not only been one of pleasure, but great profit as well. All have forgotten the trying "hike" to Sea Girt, and it is believed that they would vote for another similar trip, if suggested. They decided not to remain over Sunday, and the start for home was made this afternoon.

CHIEF DOANE STARTS FOR FIRE CHIEFS' CONVENTION.

Chief T. O. Doane, of the local fire department, left this morning for Grand Rapids, Michigan, where he will attend the thirty-seventh annual convention of the International Association of Fire Engineers, to be held there Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, of next week. Chief O'Neil, of Ridgewood, made the trip with the Plainfield fireman, and the two left for the West at shortly before noon today on a Lehigh Valley train.

Chief Fillmore Tyson, of Louisville, Ky., who is president of the Association, will be in the chair at the morning and afternoon sessions to be held each day, and when the firemen are not in convention they will be etertained by the city officials and firemen of Grand Rapids, who have provided an attractive program. Chief Doane will take part in the general discussion of fire matters and municipal fire protection to be held in connection with each of the sessions.

Mrs. Mary Strong Brown.

Mrs. Mary Strong Brown, widow of Erwin Brown, who has been living at the home of her son, Irving Brown, of 946 Central avenue, died yesterday after a long illness, aged 81. She leaves two sons, Irving Brown, of this city, and George A. Brown, of New York. The funeral will be held Monday afternoon at 12:30 o'clock from the home of her son.

POSTAL RECEIPTS SHOW A GOOD GAIN IN TRADE.

With two exceptions the gross receipts for July of fifty of the largest postoffices in the United States show an increase over July, 1908. The total receipts were $7,240,628, a net increase of $584,888. The two offices which showed a decline in receipts were St. Louis and Scranton, Pa.

The receipts for New York were $1,400,513, an increase of $122,084 over July, 1908. Receipts for Brooklyn were $173,276, an increase of $11,630. Postal receipts of the fifty largest offices throughout the country usually reflect the condition of business. As this is accepted generally the gross postal receipts for the month just closed show that business has improved in every part of the country.

The per cent. of increase by the fifty largest offices in the country reached 8.78 over July, 1908.

CHINESE IMPORTS OF CRACKERS INCREASING.

In response to inquiries, Consul Wilbur T. Gracey, of Tsingtau, furnishes the following report regarding the trade in biscuits, crackers and cakes in China:

During the past few years one of the large growing imports of China has been crackers and biscuits. The native Chinese have taken to their use, they can now be found in the majority of the large restaurants in the principal cities, and they are used in ever-increasing quantities by the better class of Chinese in their homes. For centuries past these have been locally manufactured, but the superiority of foreign-made biscuits has been recognized here, and large quantities of these products are imported from England, one British firm having a practical monopoly of the trade. The biscuits made by this firm have become well known throughout the empire, and the introduction of another kind and quality can only be accomplished by a thorough campaign.

There are practically no direct importations into this city, except the few cases of German biscuits above mentioned, which come out on ships direct from Germany. All the other products come to Shanghai and are there resold to the different Chinese shopkeepers in the ports and to the interior of China.—Consular Reports.

CONVERTING OLD PAVEMENT INTO NEW.

A new paving machine which uses old pavements of granite blocks, bricks or cobblestone as the foundation on which to lay a surface of asphalt is described with illustrations in the August Popular Mechanics.

This is accomplished by heating the old surface with a large and continuous blast of heated air from the machine. Immediately over this heated surface is applied a coat of melted asphalt or other bituminous cement, the heated condition of the stone causing perfect adhesion. No flame is permitted to come in contact with the stone, so that no part of it becomes overheated and cracked. A final layer of asphalt completes the undertaking, thus converting the old, rough pavement into a smooth and noiseless thoroughfare. The same machine is used for resurfacing or patching wornout asphalt pavements.

EXPLAINS WHY WOMEN MUST BE DECEIVERS

Many causes have contributed to developing in womankind the arts of deceit, writes Cesare Lombroso in La Revue, of Paris. In the first place, they are the weaker physical vessel, and it is necessary for them to have recourse to lying and guile. In all probability Spencer's conjecture is true that in tribal times the women who deceitfully pretended to resent the aggression of the men really proved most acceptable to these.

Modesty has, as Stendhal pointed out, this result, namely, that it forces women to become habitual liars. There can be no question that the last thing a woman will admit is that she is an armorous or love-loving creature. A man may tell a woman that he loves her, but should a woman reveal the extent of her "feelings" to a man her reputation is gone, or at least in danger.

You will note the result of this modesty among many peoples. In England, for example, it is a highly shocking thing to mention the word shirt in the presence of a lady. And just consider our circumlocutions of language in the presence of women and girls. They continually hear lies told them, and so become accustomed to the art of lying.

Again, the sexual struggle ever forces the woman to conceal her defects, her age, her illnesses, so as not to disillusionize the men. It as frequently as not forces a woman to hide her brighter intellectual qualities, such, for example, as wit, spirituality or genius, which men, as a rule, do not care to find in their wives. And also as often as not a woman will feign feelings which she possesses not in order to enslave the heart of a possible admirer. Thus they pretend to love the fine arts. They even affect to be interested in army matters when there happen to soldiers among their admirers.

What are cosmetics, dyes and the whole scheme of toilet accessories but so many lies with which the struggle with man is to be maintained and reinforced? In fine, a woman who should be perfectly sincere and who should reveal to a lover all her faults and foibles, would be her own worst enemy; she would soon kill her admirer's love, since love in a man is a less potent force than vanity.

Woman, like a child, and because she is weak, has an instinctive desire for protection, and to be under the protection of a man constitutes at once her pride and her happiness. And it is just for this reason that she often feigns unhappiness or discomfort that she does not feel, so as to enlist the sympathies of men; she will pretend to be sick in order to win the attentions of others, and consequently we have deluded ourselves into the notion that women are more sensitive, though personally I have always found them to be far inferior to men in this quality. One of woman's best tricks, when she finds herself in an inextricable quandry, is to pretend to faint—and it is her morbid desire for protection and sympathy which often causes her to practise these deceits even when she is most guilty. Even the love of woman finds its origin in this desire for protection, and it is, moreover, one reason why women ever affect to be weaker than they really are. In matters of auto-suggestion woman is far more open to self-conviction than man. When, for example, she invents a calumny about another person she is ever the first to become convinced of its truth herself.

THE GREAT BLIND.

The great sightless of the world prove that blindness is no insurmountable handicap to success in life. Blind Homer, weaving legends of heroes and gods; Milton, creating epics of heaven and hell, have been followed in this more practical age by that unique woman figure, Helen Keller; that great ship designer, John Herreshoff; the great economist, Henry Fawcett, of England; the orator, Senator Gore, of Oklahoma; Louis Braille, who gave the sightless the inestimable blessing of reading, and Joseph Pulitzer, the great blind journalist. Others there be, harly less notable than these, who bycourage and patience have made themselves useful citizens, adding to the world's happines and triumphing over their blindness, which of all afflictions, seems most stultifying.

It is a curious fact that the ratio of really gifted blind people is out of all proportion to their total number when one compares them with those who have full power to see. Nature, as if repentant at the affliction it has imposed upon these people, seems to endeavor to make partial amends by sharpening the other faculties to an almost uncanny degree in some instances. We need only to study briefly the lives of the great quartet to perceive this.—Von Norden Magazine.

"She Who Dreams."

A Maori's idea of a woman is expressed in the phrase "she who dreams," which means that her thoughts are on a higher plane than his. He allows her absolute freedom of speech and manner, for he is sure that if there is anything to be said or done a woman's refinement and, sicerity will exceed his own.—Ladies' Field.

GEBHARDT IS FINANCING THE ANTI-SALOON CAMPAIGN.

That State Senator William C. Gebhardt is financing the present Hunterdon county local option campaign developed Thursday night at the local option meeting at Califon. The meeting was under the direction of Rev. William C. Kinsey, of Clinton, field secretary of the Anti-Saloon League of Hunterdon county. Senator Gebhardt is a candidate for renomination on the Democratic ticket. Rev. Mr. Kinsey is conducting a tour through the county. He is advocating Senator Gebhardt's nomination regardless of any other candidate who may come out later for local option.

After speaking at length on the candidacy of Senator Gebhardt Thursday night Rev. Mr. Kinsey stated that the tent and outfit for canvassing the county were paid by the Senator, and asked for a liberal collection to defray their expenses and reimburse Senator Gebhardt so the league could obtain possession of the outfit after the campaign was over. Today the tent will be pitched at Lebanon.

CUT IN PRICE OF ICE AT MILLBURN PLANT.

The Millburn Electric Company, which manufactures ice, yesterday cut down its price of ice from $4 and $5 per ton to $3 and $4. Retail dealers will be required to pay only $3 for 2,000 pounds, while storekeepers who purchase directly from the concern will be asked to pay $4. The cut was well received by the retailers and storekeepers, who have been paying $4 and $5 a ton, respectively, since July 1.

Asked whether the cut was in accordance with the action of the Newark concerns who made a reduction, W. Rollinson Whittingham, general manager of the Millburn Electric Company, said: "We are selling the ice cheaper to protect ourselves. We have several out-of-town customers, retail dealers, who would probably go to Newark for their supply if we kept our prices up. Then we have over 1,000 tons in storage which we are anxious to get rid of."

OHIO DOG'S LOYALTY COSTS ANIMAL'S LIFE.

A white bulldog which followed his master—a young man arrested for alleged complicity in an attempted highway robbery—into the city prison in Toledo, Thursday, held exclusive, though disputed possession of the entire cell room for several hours. The dog took up his station at the door of his master's cell and would allow no one to enter the corridor. The turnkey's clothes were torn and several others were driven out in successive endeavors to dislodge the canine usurper. Incoming prisoners had to be lodged in a place of temporary detention.

The prisoner's father, who was sent for, was no more successful than the others, and the confusion was finally brought to an end by the shooting of the dog.

LEON PRATT MISSING; HIS MOTHER WORRIED.

Mrs. Isabel Pratt, of Bergen street, Dover, is anxious to learn the whereabouts of her son, Leon Pratt, seventeen years old, who left his home Friday, July 30, and has not been heard from since. He was seen in Paterson about ten days ago and later in Newark, but although the police of several cities have been notified no further tidings have been received.

The missing youth is about five feet two inches tall, weighs but little over 100 pounds and is small for his age. He has dark brown hair, blue eyes, light complexion and one broken front tooth. He also has an impediment in his speech, which caused him to stammer. When he left home he wore a gray suit and a soft brown hat.

MEASURING OIL BY MACHINERY.

An oil measuring and filling machine which has a compensating arrangement for varying the capacity of the measures to meet the increase and decrease in bulk due to rise and fall of temperature, or for dealing with oils of different specific gravities, so that the same weight can be placed in each can, although the gravity may vary considerably throughout the day, is described with illustration in Popular Mechanics.

The degree of accuracy attained is claimed to be very high. In a machine of ten four-gallon measures the variation in any one measure is not more than .076 per cent., and in the range of ten measures only .005 per cent. This accuracy is obtained by the use of closed measures, filled under pressure, the air being driven off through air valves fixed at the highest point of each measure. These valves close automatically the moment the measures are filled, an indicator showing whether the measures are full or empty.

Being Broad-Minded

"You say that you do not like him and yet you are going to vote for him?"

"Sure. My personal feelings should not influence me in a matter where the public welfare is at stake. He is a smart man."

"What causes you to believe that he is so smart?"

"He met my wife before I did and could have married her, but did not."—Houston Post.

CRYING FOR HELP.

Lots of It in Plainfield But Daily Growing Less.

The kidneys cry for help.

Not an organ in the whole body so delicately constructed.

Not one so important to health.

The kidneys are the filters of the blood.

When they fail the blood becomes foul and poisonous.

There can be no health where there is poisoned blood.

Backache is one of the first indications of kidney trouble.

Doan's Kidney Pills are what is wanted.

Are just what overworked kidneys need.

They strengthen and invigorate the kidneys; help them to do their work; never fail to cure any case of kidney disease.

Read the proof from a Plainfield citizen.

Mrs. M. Newman, 532 West Fifth street, Plainfield, N. J., says: Violent headaches and a constant pain in my limbs were the principal symptoms of my kidney trouble. When I saw Doan Kidney Pills advertised, I procured a box at Randolph's Pharmacy and soon after I began taking them, the pains in my head and limbs disappeared. I heartily endorse this splendid preparation."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Plainfield in .... The Olden Days.

Re-printed from The Weekly Constitutionalist

December 22, 1870.

The "fire laddies" of our city should not forget their brother firemen of Scotch Plains, the "Excelsior H. and L. Co., No. 1, who propose giving a "Grand Reunion and Promenade Concert" at Laing's Hall, Monday evening, Jan. 9th. It will be a grand and rechero affair. Tickets $2.00.

We learn with pleasure from the attending physician, Dr. Tomlinson, that Mr. Randolph, who was injured at the mill last week, is getting along nicely. Although not out of danger, there is no doubt of his recovery, with proper care and attention.

Messrs. Nevins & Allen have laid some beautiful flagging in front of the Bank building, the handsomest, we think, in the City. The above firm are enterprising gentlemen, and we are glad to record their success in business.

We received a visit from our worthy and respected friend, Merwin Hughson, from Dover, on Wednesday morning last, and beside being pleased at the sight of our old friend, we were still further pleased with the sight of a neat package which he bore to us, containing about four gallons of pure 4-year-old "Jack." May his shadow never grow less, his memory be revered, and his genial face often be seen in our sanctum. P. S.—We understand that "Merwin" is still unmarried.

On Saturday night last, about half past nine, as Mr. P. Regan was passing the silver-plating establishment of Mr. Isaac Brokaw, in Somerset street, he observed a bright light in the building, and upon inspection found that a barrel of charcoal, which had been left too near the stove, had ignited, and was in a blaze. To dash in the door was but the work of a moment, and to throw the burning barrel out of the door was the work of another, thereby preventing what might have been a serious conflagration. No alarm was given.

SUCCESS.

There's a word of cheer for the man with pluck,
Who never gives way to an adverse luck;
Who never confesses that he is stuck,
But keeps on moiling
With vigor and toiling.
No matter what comes and no matter what goes,
He laughs at the man with a burden of woes.
And finally harvests the crop that he sows,
His "stick-to-it" spirit eventually grows
On those whom he meets
In the marts and the streets
And the byways and highways of life, and he greets
With a strong word of courage the man who retreats
At the first sign of failure, and shows him the way
To work with the sun if he wants to make hay.
He lives on the song side
Of life, on the strong side,
And knows not the wrong side,
But clutches the right;
Tenaciously clings till he comes out victorious,
Earning his spurs in a struggle most glorious;
Comes back for more in each unequal fight;
Finally winning the goal he is after,
Spreading his doctrine of grit and of laughter.

—C. P. McDonald, in the Book-Keeper.

USE FOR OLD PARASOLS.

When your parasol gets shabby don't throw it away—there are numerous possibilities in it.

When the covering has worn at the seams cover it with a bit of lace, inserting oval pieces of applique; stitch it firmly to the material on the outside and cut the worn silk from underneath.

Worn edges can be finished with a frill of inch wide velvet or silk ribbon in the middle of each panel.
